In the action between the Nymph and the Cleopatra, Lieutenant Amherst Morris was serving under Lord Exmouth, then Captain Pellew, knighted for his bravery in that battle, and Lieut. Morris received his promotion on the same account. Honourable mention is made of him in the naval histories, which vary much in their accounts of this celebrated engagement, the first successful frigate action in the first French revolutionary war. Mr. James's Naval History, generally considered the most correct, contains a very detailed account, see vol. i. p. 96, &c. of the new edition by Captain Chamier, R.N. The engravings of the action subjoin the following account of it. "The English had 23 men killed and 25 wounded, the French lost 30 killed, among whom was Captain Mullan, the first captain, and 29 wounded, and the second captain. In the beginning of the action, the Nymph shot a-head to board the enemy, and by a well-timed manœuvre shot away her mainmast and disabled her rudder, then by a second great manœuvre, they disabled her bowsprit and exposed her to a raking fire from the whole broadside, after which the ships were laid along side, and the enemy boarded and carried." Alice, m. Francis, son of Sir Christopher Plunkett, of Dunsoghly Castle, and brother of the famous Colonel Richard Plunkett, lieut.-gen. of the Catholic army.

PHILIP HORE, esq. of Killsallaghan, born 1603, high sheriff of the county of Dublin in 1639. In 1642, (the year after the insurrection of the "mere Irish," in Ulster,) he was compelled by the sanguinary proclamation of the lords justices, who were supported in their wicked designs of extirpating the Catholics of Ireland, and appropriating their great estates, by the rebel parliament of England, to fly with his family from his seat near Dublin, to the refuge of his kinsman's castle of Pole Hore, in the county of Wexford. Killsallaghan was then seized on by the insurgents, being "a place of great strength," but they were driven from it by the Marquis of Ormond at the head of 3,700 men, who took the castle, and having quartered there that night, they "burnt also Mr. Hore's house, where they found plentiful pillage, and soe then they marched to Ratowth."

He was attainted for having fled, outlawed, and his estates granted by the lords justices to two knights of the Scotch and puritan party; two days after his attainder, he signed the roll of the Holy Catholic Confederation, swearing to uphold the Crown and his religion; he must have been no inconsiderable partizan, for thirteen of the principal gentlemen of his name followed him in taking the loyal and solemn oaths of the great Catholic cause.

He was one of the signers of the celebrated Remonstrance to the king, against the acts of the puritanical government of Ireland; was chosen receiver of the money subscribed for the purpose of carrying on the defence of the Confederates; was elected PRESIDENT of their first council, held in August, 1642, at Wexford; is placed seventh in a list of the supreme council sitting at Kilkenny the following month; and was chosen to serve in several general assemblies.

He m. 2nd May, 1619, Mary, daughter of John Bathe, esq. of Drumcondra Hall, in the county of Dublin, by Janet, daughter of Thomas Dillon, esq. chief justice of Connaught, ancestor of Lord Clonbrock. She died in 1657, he in 1646, leaving (besides four others), Walter.

Mary, m. Edward Butler, esq. of Moneynore, in the county of Wexford, grandson of Pierce, Baron of Kayer, and eldest brother of Colonel Sir Walter Butler, knight of that shire, and lord lieutenant of the county in 1680.

PHILIP HORE, esq. b. 1625, after his father's death, had a commission as captain to raise a foot company for the confederates. On the usurpation his estates were seized by Cromwell in consequence of his having fought on the royal side, in opposition to the rebellious parliament, and the murderers of his king.

On the Restoration, it was found that the new proprietors in Ireland, the chief strength of Cromwell's army, were too powerful to be dispossessed, and the act of oblivion was not extended to that kingdom. Consequently, on the plea of the attainder of 1642, his estates were bestowed on Sir George Lane, (Viscount Lanesborough,) and a clause was inserted in the act of settlement, that the KING's title was to be found to Mr. Hore's lands! but he with great difficulty and expense, and after many audiences of the case at the privy council at Whitehall, (at which the Duke of Tyrconnell was his advocate,) procured the boon of one-half the possessions of his father; and in 1666, obtained a patent for 4,873 acres in the county of Wexford, and 1,439 in the county of Dublin.

He states, in one of his memorials to CHARLES II. "that nothing could be objected to his innocence, he being an infant in 1641, and that when he grew to years and was able, he did to the utmost of his power further and promote his majesty's interest, in opposition to the pope's puncio, whose excommunication he pulled down from the church door in Wexford, for which he was particularly excommunicated; and that the postponement of his claims was in regard that he took some inconsiderable pittance of land in Connaught from the usurped powers, which he was necessitated to take or to starve."

He died at Ballycheoge (now Bellevue) in 1681, leaving by Ellen, daughter of Sir George Calvert, first Lord Baltimore, (sister of Grace, wife of Sir Robert Talbot, bart. brother of the Duke of Tyrconnel.)

There were only seven families in all Ireland that returned so many of their name to this parliament as the Hore family did. He m. 1st March, 1678, Eleanor, daughter of — Masterson, esq. and a daughter of Sir Edward Butler, first Viscount Galmoye. He was attainted in 1690, and following JAMES II. into France, died at St. Germain's, leaving

HISTORY OF THE COMMONERS

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

BARNEBY, JOHN, esq. of Brockhampton, in the county of Hereford, b. 20th November, and baptized there 26th December, 1799, succeeded his father 11th February, 1817.

Mr. Barneby, who is chairman of the quarter sessions, a deputy lieutenant, and captain in the Hereford militia, was elected M. P. for Droitwich in 1835.

Lineage.

Dr. Nash, in his history of Worcestershire, vol. i. p. 116, art. "Bockelton," has the following note respecting the Barnebys: "Mr. Habington says this family came originally from Yorkshire, and if so were probably a younger branch of the ancient family of Barnby, of Barnby Hall, in the parish of Calthorne, in the East Riding of that county, where they continued to flourish till the last century, when they expired in co-heirs."*

THOMAS BARNEBY, of Ludlow, in Shropshire, treasurer to King EDWARD IV. at the battle of Towton, where he was slain on Palm Sunday, 1461. He m. Isabella, daughter and heiress of Thomas Whit-

* The following fragment of a pedigree (an old MS. upon paper about the time of ELIZABETH) in the possession of John Barneby, esq. of Brockhampton would appear to countenance this supposition; but the records of the College of Arms do not corroborate it, nor is it known from what authority it was compiled. It consists merely of the principal line with the arms appended in each descent.

The upper part is torn off, but the arms of Barneby [sa. a lion passant guardant between three escalloped arg.] impaling those of Danby of Laughton, in the county of York [arg. three chevronels traced in the base point of the escutcheon sable, on a chief of the second, three mullets of the first] remain, from which match the descent proceeds as follows:

Richard Barnaby, Lord of Barnaby Castell = Alice, daughter to Sir Richard Hopton, of Swynerton, in Yorkshire, knt. Arg. a chev. az.

Thomas Barnaby, Lord of Barnaby Castell = Elizabeth, daughter to John Maetham, esq. Quarterly, az. and arg. in 1st a fleur-de-lys, or.

January, 1555 (ex evid. Johis Barneby de Brockhampton), married Joyce, daughter and heir of Walter Acton, of Acton, in the parish of Ombersley, party to the settlement, and had issue, RICHARD, his heir.

John, named second in the entail of 26th January, 1555, not in the Harl. MSS. No. 1566 (the Visit of Worcestershire, 1569), and therefore presumed to be then dead.

Thomas, named third in the entail of 1555, occurs also in the Visit of 1569. His daughter and heiress,

* Among the lands acquired at or about the time of the marriage of Whitgreave was the lordship of Laysters, in Wolpay Hundred, concerning which are the following deeds in Blount's MSS. Collections for Herefordshire, anno 1678:

"Die Lunæ viz. 16 Julij anno 4 Edw. 4. Johannes Delahay cepit de Domino de Lastres unam parcellam de terra de terris Dominicalibus jacentem in le Holgrave field nuper in tenura Richardi Cocks de While, Tenend. Reddend. inde per ann. xx^d ad duos anni terminos ibidem usuales et unam Ancam habilem pro prandio Domini in festo Sti. Michaelis Archangeli, sectam curia et alia servitia inde debita, et fecit Domino fidelitatem. In test. Ego Willm. Barneby Dominus de Lastres sigillum meum presentibus apposui." Penes Delahay de Quinton.

Concerning this manor of Laysters, Blount, after stating the possessors of it from the time of Doomsday, further says: "Afterwards the Delameres were lords of it, and sold it to Whitgreave and Barneby, for I find this note of hand of Henry the Seventh's time: 'As unto the title and claym which Edmund Delamere, esquire, Lord of the Heethe, pretendeth in the Sterchfield, and in parcell of Bottlewell, Thomas Whitgrave, Lord of the Lasters, wol not interrupt him, soo that he shew evidently by authentick scripture allowable to learned men, that they been parcell of his manor of the Heethe, and aught of right to pertain to his inheritance of his lordship of the Heethe, and not to the lordship of the Lasters.'

"As unto the purchase which the said Whitgreave and Barneby made of all the lands and tenements which the said Delamere had within the lordship of the Lasters the said Whitgreave and Barneby been advised for to occupy and receive them after the tenor and effect of the evidence ensealed, under the seal of arms of the said Delamere." Penes John Barneby mil.

The following deed, in the possession of John Barneby, esq. (1836) illustrates the family possession about the middle of the sixteenth century:

"26 Jan. 1 and 2 Philip and Mary (1555) Thomas Barnabye, of Hull, co. Thomas Barneby, whose will was proved at Hereford 1571-2, (Index, Hereford Will Office), was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD BARNEBY, of Acton, in Worcestershire, party to the settlement of 1555, wherein he is described as son and heir apparent of Thomas Barneby, and also to that of 8th March, 38 ELIZABETH, (1596), in which he is mentioned as of the Hull, and then a widower. He m. before 1555, Mary, eldest daughter and co-heir of Richard Habingdon,* of Brockhampton, in Herefordshire, by Joyce his wife, daughter and heiress of Thomas Shirley, Lord of Stockton, and by her, who died 9th July, 1574, and was buried at Bockleton, had issue,

I. ROBERT, his heir.

II. William, described in the settlement of 38 ELIZABETH as second son of Richard Barneby, and then of London: afterwards of The Hill, in

He m. first, Bridget, daughter of — Tolvey, in Kent; and, secondly, Amphylis, daughter of Sir John Lyttelton, of Frankley. By the former, who died in 1597, and was buried at Bockleton, he had issue,

NICHOLETTS, of the Hill, bapt. at Bockleton 22nd April, 1644, aged thirty-

* The estates brought into the family by the marriage with the co-heir¹ of Habingdon, (according to the deed of entail of 8th March, 38 ELIZABETH, now in the possession of John Barneby, esq.) appear to have consisted of one-third part of hereditaments in Bromyard, Brockhampton, Whitbourne, Stockton, Kimbolton, Wintercote, Chorlstræe, and Leominster, in the county of Hereford, and in Woodend, Wichenford, Broadway, Yardley, and the city of Worcester, in the county of Worcester, and in Sheldon, in the county of Warwick, the deed declaring that the said third part of the above-mentioned premises "heretofore was the freehold and inheritance of Mary Barneby, deceased, late wife of Richard Barneby, and mother of Robert and William."

Gage; and Jane, first, Edward Stanford, of Rowley, and afterwards — Briggs, of the county of Salop. (1 Nash's Worcester, 588. Habingdon pedigree). These three ladies (as appears from the same pedigree) were nearly connected with the Habingdons of Hindlip, a family deeply implicated in the various plots for the restoration of the Catholic religion in the time of ELIZABETH and JAMES I., one of whom, Edward, (their first cousin), was executed for Babington's conspiracy in 1586, and his brother, Thomas Habingdon, (the celebrated Worcestershire antiquary), narrowly escaped with his life for concealing Garnett, the provincial of the Jesuits, and Oldcorn[®] another Jesuit, (the family priest at Hindlip), after the gunpowder plot in 1605. Garnett was executed the following year in London, and Oldcorn at Worcester, but by the intercession of his wife's father (Lord Morley) he was himself relieved and pardoned. Ib. 588.

TAYLOR, OF CLIFTON.

TAYLOR, JOHN, esq. of Clifton, and of Huntly Lodge, Cheltenham, in the county of Gloucester, M. D. b. 3rd October, 1790, m. 17th October, 1812, Eliza Barham, daughter of Richard Massey Hansard, esq. of Miskin House, Glamorganshire, and granddaughter of his Excellency William Matthew Burt,* captain general and governor in chief of the Leeward Islands: by this lady Dr. Taylor has issue, LOUISA BURT, m. 24th March, 1829, to the Rev. Henry Stonhouse, M.A. prebendary of Ledbury, and rector of Eaton Bishop, Herefordshire, who has since the decease of his father taken the additional surname of VIGOR, and has issue. He is son of the late Venerable Archdeacon Timothy Stonhouse Vigor, grandson of Sir James Stonhouse, bart. and grandnephew of the late Lord Bishop of Hereford, (for a detailed account of the family of Stonhouse, see BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage).

ELIZA LUTHER, m. 20th June, 1831, to Lieutenant Colonel Samuel Hughes, C. B. lately commanding in the province of Cutch, East Indies, and has issue.

Dr. Taylor is distinguished in the science of Medicine, and was formerly one of his present Majesty's Physicians. Amongst the many flattering proofs of universal respect

* GOVERNOR BURT, whose seat was Maiden Earleigh, in Berkshire, was not only of distinguished birth, but collaterally and by marriage connected with many leading families. One of the Burts wedded Miss Morgan, and hence the connection with Sir Charles Morgan, of Tredegar, whose daughter married Lord Rodney. His niece also married Admiral Cumberland, whose sister was the wife of the Lord Frederick Bentinck. Governor Burt and his lady were also closely connected with the Viscount Barrington, and with Lady Affleck, whose daughter first married Sir Godfrey Webster, and subsequently Lord Holland, (see BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage, and Family of FOSTER of Brickhill). His Excellency represented, previously to his appointment in the West Indies, the borough of Reading in parliament. In his government he was most active, and expended a very large sum upon the fortifications, which has never been repaid. For his services he received the King's thanks and the promise of a peerage, but died suddenly at his government before it was completed. Upon his daughter's return to England she married Richard Massey Hansard, esq. There is a singular circumstance connected with Governor Burt's decease. On the day twelvemonth preceding, as he sat at dinner with a large party at the Government House, he laid down his knife and fork, and inquired if they had seen a person pass towards his private apartment, whom, he remarked, he knew to be dead: however, he was rallied by his friends, but on the exact anniversary he was found lifeless in his room, not having rung for his valet to dress him for dinner. Mrs. Taylor's mother, afterwards Mrs. Hansard, was with him in the West Indies at the time. Her husband, RICHARD MASSEY HANSARD, esq. an Irishman by birth, and prior to his marriage a captain in the king's service, resided at Miskin House, Glamorganshire, and held the majority of that county militia at the period of his decease. His family was a scion of the ancient and knightly house of Hansard of Lincolnshire, which is fully recorded in the several visitations and other public records. He was son and nephew of officers who both fell at Bunker's Hill, grandson of John Hansard, esq. of Lazar Hill, Dublin, nephew of Hugh Josias Hansard, esq. the great army agent, and the direct lineal descendant of Sir Richard Hansard, who received the honour of knighthood from JAMES II. and was the first who settled in Ireland. Major Hansard married, first, Louisa, daughter of his Excellency W. M. Burt, the governor of the Leeward Islands, and secondly, Lydia, daughter of David Thomas, esq. of Pwlterach, Glamorganshire, but had issue only by the former.

and esteem he has gained, we cannot omit mentioning the gratifying testimonial he received about two years since by the public presentation in Bristol of some splendid pieces of plate from the Duchess of Kent and his friends, bearing a highly complimentary inscription, and in which Dr. Taylor is styled "The Poor Man's Friend." At the last election he offered himself a candidate for the representation of Poole, but a serious illness prevented his going to the poll.

Lineage.

It appears from the various records, that this family unquestionably derives from the Royal Houses of England, Scotland, and France, and that its ancestors, the GORDONS, DAWTREYS, &c. were not more distinguished for high birth, than for brilliant talent, and public services. A remarkable circumstance is also connected with it—a collateral descent not only from the Great Reformer Luther, but likewise from a most pious and excellent divine of the Church of Rome, Father Clerk, confessor to the Grand Duke of Tuscany.

Dr. Taylor is the representative and heir of his Excellency the late GENERAL GORDON, Governor of Pennsylvania, and the next also to the LAIRD OF CLUNY in that distinguished branch of the noble clan and ducal house of Gordon. We shall therefore commence with a brief sketch of the Gordon family, until it merges in the immediate line of Taylor.

ALEXANDER, 3rd EARL OF HUNTLEY, (whose mother was the Princess Jean, daughter of JAMES I. King of Scotland, and whose grandmother was Lady Jane Beaufort, daughter of John, first Earl of Somerset, and granddaughter of JOHN of GAUNT), died 16th January, 1523-4, having had, by the Lady Jean Stewart his wife, daughter of John, Earl of Atholl, several sons and daughters: of the former,

JOHN, Lord Gordon, died vitâ patris, leaving a son GEORGE, who s. his grandfather in the Earldom of Huntley, and was ancestor of the DUKES OF GORDON. (See BURKE'S Peerage.)

WILLIAM, became Bishop of Aberdeen.

ALEXANDER, was Laird of Strathhaven. The son,

ALEXANDER GORDON, Laird of Strathaven, wedded the youngest daughter of John Grant, of Grant, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of John, 6th Lord Forbes, and granddaughter of John, Earl of Athol, and had two sons, ALEXANDER and JOHN. The elder,

ALEXANDER GORDON, changed, after his father's decease, the lands of Strathaven for the barony of CLUNY. He m. a daughter of Ogilvie, of Banff, but having an only daughter, he was s. by his brother,

JOHN GORDON, of Cluny, who m. Margaret, daughter of Gordon of Cragallie and Achenive, and had two sons: the elder, SIR THOMAS GORDON, succeeded at CLUNY, while the younger,

JOHN GORDON, became Laird of Brismore, and marrying Gordon of Lismor's daughter, had a son,

JOHN GORDON, of Peltans, who espoused Beatrix, daughter of Sir Patrick Leslie, knt. of Edine, and had a son,

JOHN GORDON, of Aberdeen who married Christian, daughter of Robert Smith, esq. and had a son,

MAJOR GENERAL PATRICK GORDON, a distinguished and gallant officer, who served during twenty years in the Royal regiment of Foot, commonly called Dumbarton's regiment, (recently commanded by the Duke of Gordon), and became eventually Governor of Pennsylvania. He m. 3rd April, 1695, (O. S.) Isabella, daughter of William Clerk, esq. barrister-at-law, and sister of Father Clerk,* confessor to the King of Spain and to the Grand duke of Tuscany, and had (with other issue, who all d. unm.) a daughter,

PHILADELPHIA GORDON, named from the place of her nativity, who became the heiress, last survivor, and representative of her family. This lady wedded

COLONEL ABRAHAM TAYLOR,† military secretary to her father, and the lineal descendant of George Taylor, esq. of Derbyshire, a magistrate for that county, and an East India merchant. Mrs. Taylor outlived her husband, whose decease occurred in February, 1772; and died in Bath, 17th March, 1793, leaving an only son,

JOHN TAYLOR, esq. of the Circus, Bath, and of Grosvenor Place, London; so celebrated for his talents as an amateur in painting, and the friend of Garrick, Gibbon, Franklin, Coleman, and the other wits and literati of his day. None of Mr. Taylor's exquisite productions were ever sold,‡ but are principally in the possession of his daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Taylor, and his grandson, Dr. Taylor. These splendid efforts are mentioned in "Humphrey Clinker,"

* There was a correspondence between Father Clerk and his English relatives, on the subject of their religious differences, in which Archbishop Tillotson took part. Many of the original letters of this excellent divine, Father Clerk, are still in Mrs. Charlotte Taylor's possession.

† The Taylor family suffered severely by the American independence, but it does not appear that the family ever claimed or obtained any recompense from the crown, on this account, or in consideration of Governor Gordon's services.

‡ Two were presented by Dr. Taylor to GEORGE IV.

and other works, and highly commended by some beautiful lines of the Rev. Richard Graves. § Gifted with great abilities himself, Mr. Taylor invariably befriended genius in others, and was the first to notice the celebrated Benjamin West, at that time a Cooper's son in Philadelphia. Mr. Taylor m. at Clifton 4th June, 1763, Rebecca, daughter of Richard Luther, esq. of Myles's, in Essex, (see family of LUTHER), and had, with junior issue,

JOHN, his heir.

He d. 8th November, 1806, and his decease is thus recorded in the Bath paper of that day: "On Saturday died at his house in this city John Taylor, esq. Upon most subjects of science and literature few men were better informed, but his excellence as a landscape painter will long be known to the world, from the beautiful engravings taken from some of his celebrated pictures. His house in this city, some years since, was resorted to by all persons distinguished for talent and genius." The following lines were written by David Garrick upon seeing Mr. Taylor's pictures and hearing a connoisseur declare, "They were finely painted for a gentleman;"

Tell me the meaning, you who can,
Of finely painted for a gentleman!
Is genius, rarest gift of Heaven,
To the hired artist only given?
Or, like the Catholic salvation,
Paled in for any class or station?
Is it bound 'prentice to a trade,
Which works, and as it works is paid?
Is there no skill to build, invent,
Unless inspired by five per cent?
And shalt thou, Taylor, paint in vain,
Unless impell'd by hopes of gain?
Be wise, my friend, and take thy fee,
That Claude Lorraine may yield to thee!!

Mr. Taylor's eldest son,

JOHN TAYLOR, esq. M.D. studying medicine, became eminent as a physician, and practised in Dorsetshire, the county town of which shire his cousin, Francis Fane, esq. represented in parliament. From his maternal grandfather he inherited Vicar's Hill,

§ To John Taylor, esq. of the Circus, Bath, on his admirable pictures. By the Rev. R. Graves, of Claverton.

Such are the scenes, thro' which gay fancy roves
In airy dreams, and such th' enchanted groves
Which sacred poets feign; the blest abodes
Of fawns and dryads, nymphs and demi-gods.
Landscape had long with curious search explor'd,
Each charm that art, or nature's views afford;
To grace her works, hills, rocks, and sylvan bow'rs,
Flocks, herds, or rural cots, or distant tow'rs,
Or Gothic piles amidst the tufted woods,
Casades, wild cataracts, and crystal floods,
Their charms exhausted: Taylor sigh'd to find Unall'd the vast idea in his mind!
Then search'd imagination's teeming call,

Hampshire, together with an undivided share in the Alderton Hall and Hinton Hall estates, in Suffolk, which the family afterwards sold. Dr. Taylor m. 23rd February, 1789, Sarah, daughter of Captain Robbins, and had, with junior issue,

JOHN, his heir.

Dr. Taylor died at his house in Bath 14th July, 1830, and was s. by his eldest son, the present Dr. TAYLOR, of Clifton.

Luther, of Myles's.

(Now represented by JOHN FANE, esq. of Wormley, and JOHN TAYLOR, esq. M. D. of Clifton.)

Established in England during the reign of HENRY VIII. and undoubtedly allied to the celebrated Reformer, the Luthers remained seated in Essex for centuries, intermarrying with the leading families of that county, representing it in parliament, and exercising paramount influence in its local government.* Like so many other great families who formerly adorned the country, and possessed great sway and possessions, the house of Luther, in the male line, is now no more, although the representation is at present vested in Mr. FANE, of Wormsley, and Dr. TAYLOR, of Clifton.

The head of the family at the close of the 16th century,

RICHARD LUTHER, esq. of Myles's, in Essex, was father of

ANTHONY LUTHER, esq. who inherited the estate in 1639, and d. in 1665, leaving, by Jane his wife, eldest daughter of Gilbert Armstrong, esq. two sons and one daughter, Jane, m. in 1647 to Edward Rudge, esq. of Great Warley, in Essex. (See RUDGE, OF EVESHAM.) The elder son,

RICHARD LUTHER, esq. of Myles's, wedded Rebecca, daughter of Edward Rudge, esq. of London, and d. about the year 1688, leaving with a daughter, Jane, m. to John Luther, esq. of Sutton, a son and successor,

EDWARD LUTHER, esq. of Myles's, high sheriff for Essex in 1701, who m. Sarah,

Where yet uniform'd ten thousand wonders dwell!

There the sublime, the beautiful, the great

At fancy's call in bright assemblage meet.

Drawn thence we view with pleasure and surprise

Fresh objects with celestial splendour rise,

Whilst taste and spirit animate the whole,

And with their pow'rful charms transport the soul,

From nature, art, and fancy's richest store,

Thus Taylor forms a style unknown before!

* During the civil war, the Luther family adhered with devotion to the ill-fated monarch, and the name of Thomas Luther is found amongst those staunch supporters of royalty, whom it was intended to have invested with the knighthood of the Royal Oak.

CHARLOTTE, m. to HENRY FANE, esq. of Wormsley, brother of the late Earl of Westmoreland. (See BURKE'S PEERAGE.)

REBECCA, m. to JOHN TAYLOR, esq. of the Circus, Bath, and of Grosvenor Place, London.

Mr. Luther died at Vicar's Hill 28th December, 1767, and was s. by his only son, JOHN LUTHER, esq. of Myles's, who represented the county of Essex in parliament, after one of the severest contests on record, which is stated to have cost Mr. Luther £50,000. He m. Levina, daughter of Bennet (Alexander) Bennet, esq. of Wiltshire, and great granddaughter of Sir Levinus Bennet, of Babraham, in Cambridgeshire, but dying without issue, the representation of the ancient and influential family of Luther, now vests in John Fane, esq. and John Taylor, M. D.

Dawtrey, of Moor House and Dodinghurst.
Of which JOHN TAYLOR, esq. M. D. of Clifton, is also the joint representative.

The descent of the family of Dawtrey, authenticated by the several visitations, is

* Chamberlen, of Alderton Hall, and Hinton Hall. (Now represented by Major-General Northey Hopkins, John Fane, esq. and John Taylor, esq. M. D.)

The family of CHAMBERLEN, or as it was anciently written, CHAMBERLIN and CHAMBERLAYNE, is one of great antiquity, having been settled in Suffolk from the period of the conquest. Dr. Chamberlen was a physician of London, of great eminence about the court, as physician to Queen ANN. In his last will and testament he names his wife as the LADY CREWE, and makes mention of the Countess of Arran and the Duke and Duchess of Buckingham. The estates of Alderton Hall, and Hinton Hall, which for many years were the undivided property in equal moieties, of John Taylor, esq. and General Northey Hopkins, have been disposed of.

Dr. Chamberlen m. first, Mary, daughter and sole heir of Nathaniel Bacon, esq. of Friston Hall, in Suffolk (see pedigree of NORTHHEY-HOPKINS, OF OVING HOUSE); and secondly, Mary, daughter of Sir Willoughby Aston, bart. of Aston, Cheshire, and relict of Sir John Crewe, knt. of Utlington. By his first wife he left three daughters, his co-heirs, viz.

MARY, d. unm.

ANNA-MARIA, m. to the Right Hon. Edward Hopkins, and thence descends the family

deduced in an uninterrupted line from the CONQUEST until it merges in that of LUTHER, and now also represented by John Fane, esq. and Dr. Taylor. Few pedigrees are founded on such unquestionable proof, and still fewer present more brilliant alliances, or more uniformly preserved their station.

JOHN DE ALTA RIPA, obtaining by gift from Jocelyne, of Louvaine, the manor of Heryngham or Hardham (then called 'HAULTREY') assumed in one of the early Norman reigns the surname of Debaultrey, de Alta Ripa, or Dawtrey. He was grandfather of

JOSCELYNE DE ALTA RIPA, who had two sons, namely,

I. WILLIAM, who founded temp. HENRY II. the priory of Heringham, and endowed it with considerable possessions.† His granddaughter and heiress, EVA, wedded Sir Edward St. John, living in the reign of EDWARD I.‡ whose line eventually merged in the family of Goring.

II. JOHN.

From the second son,

JOHN DE HAULTREY, lineally descended ANDREW DAWTREY, of the county of Sussex, who left by Alice, his wife, a daughter of the ancient family of Mill of Hampshire, two sons,

I. JOHN (Sir), knt. who espoused Joan, daughter and heir of Peter Scardewille, and had an only daughter and heiress, Anne, the wife of Sir JOHN of Northey Hopkins, one of whom m. Miss Taylor, of Bifrons. (See vol. iii. p. 109).

CHARLOTTE, m. as in the text, to RICHARD LUTHER, esq. great grandfather of Dr. Taylor of Clifton.

† Dugdale's Monasticon. In recording the foundation of Herryngham priory, by WILLIAM DAWTREY, the Monasticon thus speaks: "The Latin word 'Ripa,' was in Norman writings generally meant for a river, without relation to 'ripa' a bank. The Romans called it 'Haultrey.' There was an ancient family of knights, owners of much lands in these parts, and of fair possessions even in the very bosom of the 'Hyb stream,' from which they took their name, and were called 'De Haultrey.'"

Estates—The family of Taylor had considerable grants of land in America, which were of course forfeited at the independence. The great estates of the Luther family (ultimately entailed on Dr. Taylor) are principally situated in the county of Essex. The singularly expressed will of the late John Luther, esq. of Myles's, carries proof of the momentary feelings under which it was probably made. Being separated from his wife and having no issue, he adopted his nephew, John Taylor, the son of his favourite sister Rebecca, but that gentleman having offended him, he bequeathed his possessions, after considerable legacies, to his private tutor, Dr. Watson, (the well known Bishop of Landaff), and his housekeeper Mrs. Williams, first to his other nephew, Francis, the second son of his sister, Mrs. Fane, and then to the elder son John Fane, esq. but the ultimate reversion he strictly entailed on the "TAYLORS," whom he directs to assume therewith the name and arms of Luther only, evidently contemplating that this branch of his family would perpetuate him.

The estate of Vicars Hill, bequeathed to Dr. Taylor's father by Richard Luther, (who died there, having relinquished his estate of Myles to his son on his marriage, and lies interred under a handsome monument in the parish church of Boldre), was sold by him to Col. Cleveland, and the family have subsequently disposed of their undivided moiety of Alderton Hall and Hinton Hall, Suffolk, as we before noticed.

Residence—Huntly Lodge, Cheltenham.

CAMPBELL, OF AUCHMANNOCH.

CAMPBELL, ROBERT, esq. of Auchmannoch, in Ayrshire, b. 26th January, 1782, succeeded his father 11th March, 1828. Mr. Campbell is in the commission of the peace.

Lineage.

"The Campbells of Auchmannoch," says Robertson, "have been respectable landholders, in the district of Kyle-Stewart, for several centuries. The lands of Auchmannoch, and others, formerly and still belonging to them, are situated in the lordship of Kylesmuir, and in the north part of the parish of Sorn, about from three to four miles north-eastward of the town of Mauchline, and about six miles south-eastward of the castle of Loudoun, from which family they were originally derived. They are comprehended in that large tract of country, which, in the twelfth century, was granted by Alan, the high steward, to the Monks of Melross, as mentioned by Crawford, in his Hist. of Renf. edit. 1818, p. 138: "Per divisas suas, inter terram de Mauchlyn et terram Gilberti filii Richeri, cum tota pastura forestæ suæ usque ad divisas de Dune-glass [Douglass?] et Lismahague, et de Glengavil;" which was ratified by King William. This grant appears to have extended to the marches of these lands mentioned, but not beyond them. The Glengiel, or Glengavil, is a muirland streamlet, rising among the hills, a mile or two north-west of the village of Muirkirk, and joins the Avon about three miles south-eastward of the town of Strathaven; so that this grant included that muirish part of Avondale to the westward of the water of Gavil, whilst the parishes of Mauchline, Sorn, and Muirkirk, were probably wholly included within it.

Out of this ample gift the Monks of Melrose endowed a religious house at Mauchline, with part of these lands, holding of that abbey; and from time to time afterwards feued out the remainder to various proprietors. This religious establishment at Mauchline continued to flourish until the Reformation, when the lands belonging to it fell to the share of the family of Campbell of Loudoun, when Mauchline became one of their titles, which continues till the present day.

Early in the fifteenth century a family of Campbells possessed the lands of Auchmannoch, under a church-holding. That they were the ancestors of the present family has always been held as undoubted; but their early writs, till the year 1565, are now so much obliterated and illegible, as to afford no particular information concerning them prior to that time. That they are also descended of the family of Loudoun has been a constant tradition, and which indeed carries every mark of probability with it. The first of them that appears in the remaining writs that are legible, is ARTHUR CAMPBELL, of Auchmannoch, who has a renewed charter from the Commendator of Melrose, dated 8th August, 1565, "of the lands of Auchmannoch, to Arthur Campbell and Margaret Cunninghame, his spouse, in life-rent, and to their son, George Campbell, in fee." This Margaret Cunninghame should seem to have been of the family of Caprington, as in some writs about that time, partly legible, the laird of Caprington, appears to be a party.

GEORGE CAMPBELL, of Auchmannoch, succeeded his father in these lands, of which he has a charter from James VI. dated at Dalkeith, 20th September, 1590. He was succeeded by his son,

ARTHUR CAMPBELL, of Auchmannoch and Logan, who was served and returned heir to his father George, in these lands, on the 20th June, 1601, as appears from the retours lately published, in which they are designed the M. 16. 10d. lands, of old extent. He married 10th November, 1606, Janet Campbell, daughter of John Campbell, of Eschawburn, and was succeeded by his son,

GEORGE CAMPBELL, of Auchmannoch, who obtained a conveyance to these lands from his father, dated 12th December, 1637. This gentleman, an active supporter of the Presbyterian cause, became involved in the religious disputes and turmoils of the unhappy period in which he lived; and in his father's lifetime took the field, under General Leslie, in the commotions that ensued after the famed general assembly at Glasgow, in 1638, as appears by a will he made in 1639, wherein he appointed John Campbell of Killoch, Arthur Campbell, his father, and John Campbell of Eschawburn, to be his trustees during his absence. He m. in June, 1632, Jean, daughter of John Mure, esq. of Blacklaw, and granddaughter of Sir William Mure, knt. of Rowallan, by whom he had two sons,

ARTHUR, his heir.

John, who acquired the lands of Nethererton and Whitehaugh, in Ayrshire.

The elder son,

ARTHUR CAMPBELL, of Auchmannoch, who was returned heir to his father George, in 1668, also engaged in supporting the Presbyterian cause, and thereby incurred the resentment of the court, as exemplified in the measure resorted to in the reign of CHARLES II. soon after the Restoration, called Middleton's act, in 1662. Campbell, younger, of Auchmannoch, was fined in £600, without even a trial, or a single crime alleged particularly against him. He was some time afterwards seized, and carried prisoner to Strathaven, where he underwent a temporary imprisonment. At a contested election for Ayrshire in May 1700, to supply the seat vacant by the death of Sir William Mure, of Rowallan, his vote was set aside, but it was found good in the following session. On the 9th January, 1701, in an address from the shire of Ayr, respecting grievances, he appears among other Ayrshire gentlemen. These were: W. Fairlie, Bruntfield; A. Brown, Knockmarloch; Arthur Campbell, Auchmannoch; Fullarton, of that Ilk; G. Logan, of that Ilk; Ralston, of that Ilk; Kerland; C. Barclay, of Busbie; J. Arnot, Lochrig; John Frezle, Haugincleugh; Patrick Hunter, of that Ilk; William Craufurd, Daleglis; R. Farquhar, Catrein; W. Macquerel, Hillhouse; and John Peebles, Crawford. Assheton, b. 31st October, 1832.

James, b. 17th October, 1834.

Mr. Pownall succeeded his father in 1814.

Lineage.

In the writings of ORDERICUS VITALIS, compiled by du Chesne, we find enumerated in the train of the Conqueror, who came into England from Normandy, RADULPHUS FULCO, JOHANNES, and HUGONE PAGANEL; and those persons appear subsequently, by other evidence, to have seated themselves at Newport Pagnel, in the county of Buckingham, at Dudley Castle, in Worcestershire, at Drax, in the county of York, and at Bampton, in Oxfordshire. VITALIS too, in alluding to the names of those men styled "illustrious," who had died, to the great grief of their Norman countrymen, in the same year with their victorious chief, mentions Gulielmus Paganellus. Dugdale also reverts frequently to those gallant soldiers and their descendants. According to a more modern authority, BROOKE, Somerset Herald, the family of POWNALL is of great antiquity in the county of Chester, the mention of the name connecting them with that Shire occurring so early as the time of King STEPHEN, when AVICIA DE ROMELLI, daughter and coheir of William de Meschines, Lord of Copeland, and cousin of Rannalph de Meschines, third Earl of Chester, married for her second husband William Paganel,*

* The only daughter and heir of this marriage, ALICE PAGANEL, wedded Robert de Gant, uncle and heir of William de Gant, Earl of Lincoln, see BERKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage, Gant, Earls of Lincoln.

Lord of Were. This William, with his kinsmen Raffe and Gervase Paganell, are afterwards described amongst the most active of the adherents of Earl Randle and his barons in sustaining the interests of the Empress MAUDE and her son HENRY against King STEPHEN, which services were rewarded by the earl with grants of lands in fee out of his demesnes in Cheshire and elsewhere: and although the origin of the grant under which the fee of Pownall (comprising an entire township), passed has not been specifically recorded, yet the presumption is strongly supported, that like the other grants in the same locality, it was the recompense of military services.

"Although (says Brooke) from the seat of their property in Cheshire, the Pownalls were denominated according to the true British orthography of the name, and were styled after the Norman custom "de Pownall," yet they were at the same time styled in the records, written in Norman, Paineel, Payanell, and Paynel, and in those written in Latin Paganell. It appears on the register that they repeatedly held the high office of Chamberlayne to the kings,† as earls of Chester, in the 10th of EDWARD II., in the 1st, 5th, and 10th of EDWARD III., on which account, in allusion to their office and their name, they bore for a crest a lion's paw, holding a golden key."

The elder branch of the family residing at Pownall became extinct in the direct line in the year 1328 by the decease of ROBERT DE POWNALL, whose only child MARGERY wedded HUGH, second son of JOHN FITTON, Lord of Bollyn; a cadet branch continued still, however, settled in Morley, within the township of Pownall Fee, when the manor

† Of the office of Chamberlain, the following explanation occurs in Ormerod's History of Cheshire.

"And to this day the county palatine of Chester hath had a Chamberlayne, who supplieth the place of Chancellor, and also Justices, before whom the causes which of their nature should otherwise belong respectively to the King's Bench and Common Pleas, are triable," &c.

of Bollyn was divided between the Booths and the Traffords, 9th Henry V. (1422), represented by THOMAS POWNALL, esq. whose son HUMPHREY removed to Witton and Barnton in the same county, and from him,

HUMPHREY POWNALL, descended, according to well founded tradition,

THOMAS POWNALL, esq. of Barnton, who was baptized at Great Budworth, in the county of Chester, in 1650. He wedded Mary, daughter and heir of Richard Browne, esq. of Saltfleetby, in the county of Lincoln, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM POWNALL, esq. who d. in 1731, leaving issue,

JOHN, his successor.

THOMAS, of North Lynn, in Norfolk, and Everton House, in the county of Bedford, b. in 1722, m. in 1765 Lady Faulkener, dau. of General Churchill, and died at Bath, without issue, in 1805. Of this gentleman the following account is given in the Gentleman's Magazine of that year, p. 288:

"It may be said of Governor Pownall, that in every station of life he sustained a high character for ability, zeal, and rectitude of conduct. In the year 1753 he succeeded Sir Thomas Danvers Osborne, bart. in his office of Lieutenant Governor of New Jersey. In 1757 he was appointed Captain General and Governor of Massachusetts Bay, and, when in 1761 he returned to this country, he received the appointment of Director General of the office of Control, with the rank of Colonel in the army, under the command of Prince Ferdinand in Germany. In 1765 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, and in 1768 returned to parliament for Tregony, in Cornwall." Governor Pownall was the author of numerous works on political economy, on antiquities, and in the Archeologia of the Antiquarian Society, of which institution he was a member.

The elder son and heir,

JOHN POWNALL, esq. b. in 1720, m. Mary, daughter of Bowden Lillingston, esq. and had issue, GEORGE (Sir), his heir.

John Lillingston, b. in 1757, a commissioner of the Customs, married, but died issueless.

Mary.

Mr. Pownall, who was a magistrate of the county of Lincoln, and served the office of high sheriff, died in 1795, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR GEORGE POWNALL, knt. b. in 1755, who was appointed Secretary of the province of Lower Canada, and afterwards Provost Marshal General of the Leeward Islands. He died at Brighton, a bachelor, 17th October, 1834, when this branch of the family became extinct.

Another collateral branch, taking its descent also from the Barnton family, continued settled in Cheshire until its head,

WILLIAM POWNALL, esq. b. in 1718, removed to Liverpool, and rendered himself eminent as a merchant in that great commercial place, of which he was elected Mayor in 1767, and died before the close of his year of office, owing to an overzeal in the discharge of his magisterial duties. A local periodical publication, in announcing this worthy gentleman's demise, thus concludes: "His personal virtues were well known to all who had the happiness of an intimate acquaintance with him; his public character reflected honour on the society to which he was related, and both will render his name respected by posterity." He m. Mary, daughter of Jesse Gerrard, esq. of Moreton Say, in the county of Salop, and had two sons, WILLIAM and John. The only brother of this highly respected citizen,

JOHN, likewise of Liverpool, b. in 1723, m. 20th February, 1744, Jane, daughter of John Crouchley, esq. of Flixton, in the county of Lancaster, and had two sons, WILLIAM and John. He d. 8th June, 1812, and was s. by the elder,

WILLIAM POWNALL, esq. of Litherland, in the county of Lancaster, b. 18th November, 1754, who m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of John Quillen, esq. attorney-general of the Isle of Man, and had issue,

WARD, OF SALHOUSE.

WARD, ROBERT, esq. of Salhouse Hall, in the county of Norfolk, b. 3rd September, 1767, m. 20th December, 1794, Lydia, third daughter of Richard Rawle, esq.* of Liskeard and Trevill, in the county of Cornwall, and has had issue,

- i. Robert, b. in 1795, who whilst serving as a midshipman on board H. M. S. Topaz, was mortally wounded in an attack on the North Fort of Mocha, in the Red Sea, 7th December, 1820.

- ii. Frances, b. in 1808, d. in 1825.

This gentleman, formerly an officer in the royal navy, whilst serving as a midshipman on board the Monmouth, in the fleet commanded by Sir Edward Hughes, was in six general actions in India, from 1780 to 1784, in one of which he was seriously wounded by a splinter from a gun-shot, and for some time considered lifeless. Mr. Ward is in the commission of the peace for the county of Norfolk, and succeeded to his estates on the demise of his mother in 1828.

Lineage.

The Wards have long been seated in the county of Norfolk; they held adjoining estates at Walcote and Happisburgh, in the sixteenth century, which have descended in direct succession from father to son to the present generation. In the reign of JAMES I. we find by a document still preserved, that needy monarch, when issuing his privy seal for the purpose of raising money, including amongst his loyal subjects Robert Ward, of Walcote:

“To our trusty and wel beloved
Robert Ward, of Walcote.

“BY THE KING.

“Trustle and welbeloved, Wee grette you well. Having observed in the presidents and custome of former times, that all the kings and queenes of this realme, upon extraordinary occasions, have used either to resort to those contributions which arise from the generalitie of subjects, or to the private helpes of some well affected in particular, by way of loane: in which later course wee being at this time inforced to proceed, for some supply of some portions of treasure for divers publique services, and particularly for continuing and encreasing our magazines in some large proportion, in our realme of Ireland, in our navie, and in our fortes: (in all which greater summes have bene expended of late, both in building, and repairing, and in making sundry provisions, then have been in twentie yeeres before:) wee have now in our eye an especial care that such discretion may be observed in the choise of the lenders, and such an indifferent distribution, as the summes that wee shall receive may be raised with an equall consideration of men's abilities; and therefore, seeing men have had so good experience of our repayment of all those

Their representatives now reside at Liskeard and Plymouth, but still hold the manor of Tresparrett, a moiety of the rectory of St. Juliet, and several estates in that parish, which have descended to them for many generations.

Richard Rawle, esq. of Liskeard, the father of Mrs. Ward, m. Anne, eldest daughter of William Carthow, esq. of St. Austell.

The Rawle arms, sculptured of a very early date, are still affixed to the old manor house of the family: viz. Sable, three swords in pale, the middlemost pointed in chief, arg.—See Lyson's Magna Britannia, vol. iii. and Gilbert's History of Cornwall.

summes which wee have ever required in this kinde, we doubt not but wee shall now receive the like argument of good affection from you (amongst other of our subjects), and that with such alacrity and readinesse, as may make the same so much the more acceptable, especially seeing wee require but that of some which few men would deny a friend; and have a minde resolved to expose all our earthly fortune, for preservation of the general. The summe that wee require of you, by vertue of these presents, is twenty pounds, which wee doe promise, in the name of us, our heires and successors, to repay to you, or your assigns, within eighteen monthes after the payment thereof unto the collector. The person that wee have appointed to collect it is Sir Charles Cornwallis, knight. To whose handes wee doe require you to send it within twelve days after you have received this privy seale, which together with the collector's acquittance, shall be sufficient warrant unto the officers of our receipt, for the repayment thereof at the time limited. Given under our privy seale at our pallace of Westminster the 14th day of January, in the ninth yeere of our raigue of Great Britaine, France, and Ireland.

"FRA. MYLLERS.

Walcotte, the some of £20.
CHARLES CORNWALLIS."

ROBERT WARD, esq. who d. 2nd April, 1639, erected the family residence at Walcotte, now called Walcot, in Norfolk. This structure, although curtailed in size, is still standing, and bears the date of its erection, 1619; and from the elaborate architecture of its chimneys, is commonly called in the neighbourhood and styled in the map of Norfolk, "the Chimney House." He wedded Bridget, daughter of — Callow, esq. and had issue,

Robert Ward died in London, 1706, and by the testamentary will of William Holt, esq. the purchase of the Salhouse estate was made, by the order of a master in Chancery in 1712, agreeable to the testator's directions, for the benefit of Mr. Ward's children,

He m. Amelia, fourth daughter of Stamp Brooksbank, esq. M. P. of Helalough, Yorkshire, and Hackney House,* Middlesex. His merits as a soldier, a magistrate, and a gentleman, are glowingly depicted on his monument in Salhouse Church, and in the obituary of the Gentleman's Magazine, 1799, from the pen of his intimate friend, the late Rev. John Longe, rector of Spixworth, Norfolk. He had issue,

- i. Richard Dalrymple, an officer in the Royal Artillery, who served in the American war, d. in 1765.

* Hackney House was erected by Mr. Brooksbank in the reign of GEORGE I. at an expenditure of upwards of £28,000: it stood in a lawn of eighteen acres, surrounded by a wall. On Mr. Brooksbank's decease it was sold to J. Hopkins, esq. of Brittons, in Essex, heir to the famous Vulture Hopkins, concerning whom Pope has the following lines:

"When Hopkins dies, a thousand lights attend
The wretch that living saved a candle's end."

From Mr. Hopkins it passed through various hands, and finally, in 1802, the building was razed to the ground, the whole having been allotted for building, and become a populous neighbourhood. See Universal Magazine, 1791, for further particulars.

CARLYON, WILLIAM, esq. of Tregrehan, in Cornwall, b. 7th January, 1781, succeeded his father 16th December, 1830. Mr. Carlyon is a barrister-at-law.

Lineage.

"This old and respectable family," says Gilbert, in his History of Cornwall, "has principally resided for upwards of three centuries in the parish of St. Austell and St. Blazey: the surname of Carlyon in connexion with Cornwall is derived from very remote antiquity, for besides the Barton of Carlyon, near Truro, it is upon record that a seaport town of this name was formerly in existence on the north-west coast of the county." Lyons also makes mention of the family in the Magna Britannia. "Carlyon, or Carlion, is supposed by Tomas, whose romance was published in 1804, by Sir Walter Scott, to have been the residence of his hero Sir Tristrem; it is worthy of remark, that among the more remote ancestors of Mr. Carlyon, of Tregrehan, Tristrem occurs as a christian name in allusion to this celebrated hero of romance;" and in Drew's History of Cornwall is the following account: "Herls, when speaking of this ancient family in his Parochial History, says, though the name be local from a place in Kea parish called Carlyon, which signifies the care, watchfulness or circumspection of a lion, I should say this family of Carlyon, by its name and arms, were the descendants of Richard Carlyon, alias RICHARD the first.*

THOMAS CARLYON, esq. of Tregrehan and Pennans (great-grandfather of the present proprietor), m. Elizabeth, daughter and co-heiress of Philip Hawkins, esq. of Trewithen, in Cornwall, and had four sons and two daughters, of whom

PHILIP, succeeded his father.

Thomas was in holy orders and of St. Just, in Cornwall. He m. Anne, daughter and co-heir of William Gwavas, esq. of Penzance, and had three sons and four daughters, of whom the eldest son,

PHILIP CARLYON, esq. of Tregrehan, m. Elizabeth, only child of the Rev. Samuel Trewbody, of Boscundle, minister of the parish of St. Germans, in Cornwall, and niece of Edward Craggs, the first Lord Elliot, of Port Elliot. By this lady he left an only son and successor,

This gentleman m. his cousin german, Mary Carlyon, of St. Austell and Trelissick, which latter place she inherited from her grandfather, the Rev. John Pomeroy, whose wife, Thomasine Hooker, was great niece of the celebrated divine, Richard Hooker, author of the "Ecclesiastical Polity." By this lady,† Mr. Carlyon had issue, tenant-colonel in the army and in the commission of the peace for Devon. Colonel Carlyon served during the whole of the late war in the 66th regiment. He m. Anna Maria, elder daughter of Admiral Spry, of Place and Tregolls, in Cornwall, and has issue,

* In a very old document, written in the court hand, are the following lines, 1199 :

Richard the First, surnamed a Lyon's hart,

A valiant man, noe doubt, and void of feare ;

Who did, as antient cronicles impart,

A Lyon's hart out of his body teare :

Which makes me judge that Cour de Lyon springs
As being descended from the race of kings.

† The character of Mrs. Carlyon, who died 13th January, 1821, was most accurately recorded by the Rev. T. S. Smyth, vicar of St. Austell and St. Blazey. "While I was preparing this sermon for the press, another sincere friend to the poor has received her summons, and is gone to her everlasting reward. A christian in spirit and in truth, who in her life practised the duties of religion, and in the decline of that life, felt its consolation and its hopes. To her benevolence and her charities, there are many in this parish that can bear the most affecting testimony. Her pious resignation has been thus justly recorded. Declining in health, through the long period of twenty-eight years, she bore the severe and often renewed attacks of disease with exemplary patience; and humbly submissive at all times to her Maker's will, she awaited the tranquil hour of her departure with pious and habitual resignation."

CREYKE, OF MARTON.

CREYKE, RALPH, esq. of Marton, in the East Riding, and of Rawcliffe, in the West Riding of the county of York, b. 6th September, 1813, succeeded his father in June, 1828.

Lineage.

The family of CREYKE* is of ancient date in the East Riding of the county of York, and supposed to be of Danish extraction. The first on record is Sir Walter de Creyke, knt. who was appointed governor of Berwick in 1340, after Sir Richard Talbot, by EDWARD III. In 1358, John de Creyke represented York in a parliament held in that city, and Robert de Creyke was bailliff of the same place in 1379.

ALEXANDER CREYKE, of Kyn or Colleston Pythe in Beverley, living in 1413, m. Isabel, daughter and heiress of — Eglington, and had two sons and one daughter, viz. THOMAS, his heir, Roger, who died s. p. and Margaret. This Alexander by his will desires to be buried before the cross in the body of the church of the Grey Friars in London, or if he died in his own county, to be interred in St. Mary's, Beverley. He makes his son, Thomas, and his wife, Isabel, executors, and mentions his children, Roger and Margaret. His son and successor,

THOMAS CREYKE, of Colleston Pythe in 1443, m. Jane, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Arden, of Marton, and had issue,

ROBERT, his heir.

* The name of CREYKE or CREIK occurs in early times in Suffolk. Margery Creyke, according to Dugdale, founded a monastery at Flinton, in that county about four hundred years ago. It likewise occurs in Cambridgeshire. In the south aisle of the nave of Westley Waterlass church is a gravestone with figures of a knight and his lady, engraved on brass plates, under canopies. This is commonly supposed to represent Sir John de Creyke, temp. EDWARD II. and his lady, but the arms are not those of the Yorkshire family. It appears by record that a minor in the parish of Westley Waterlass passed by conveyance in the early part of the fourteenth century from the family of Creyke to that of Vauney.

Thomas, of Beverley and Ganton, had a son, Walter, of Ganton, who m. a daughter of Sir Ralph Elleker, knt. of Risbye, and had a son, Ralph, of Ganton, who left, by Grace his wife, daughter of — Saltmarshe, of Saltmarshe, one son and two daughters, viz. Ralph, b. 16th April, 1555, Elizabeth, b. 1st April, 1554, buried 30th March, 1556, and Katherine, b. 23rd August, 1557.

Mr. Hulton s. his father 24th June, 1800. He is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for Lancashire, of which county he served as high sheriff in 1809. He is likewise constable of Lancaster Castle.

Lineage.

This family possesses the most unerring proof of antiquity in the title-deeds of their estate of Hulton, from which the Hultons derive their surname, and of which they have been uninterrupted lords since the Conquest. The first feudal proprietor on record,

BLEYTHIN DE HULTON, living temp. HENRY II. was father of

JORVETH, alias YARWIT DE HULTON, who flourished in the reigns of RICHARD I. and JOHN, and obtained from the latter a grant by charter of the town of Penelton, in Lancashire, in exchange for other lands which the king, when Earl of Morton, had given him. He had, with other issue, a son,

RICHARD DE HULTON, who had a grant of lands in Barton, from Edith de Barton, by consent of Gilbert de Notton, her husband, which lands Jorveth de Hulton, father of Richard, had some time held of her. To his son and successor,

DAVID DE HULTON, Lord of Hulton, his cousin, Robert de Hulton, granted all his lands in Hulton, and William de Ferrers gave all his possessions in Flixton, together with his manor of Hordeshale, by homage and service of two marks of silver four times a year, and by the sixth part of a knight's fee, A. D. 1219. David de Hulton wedded Agnes, daughter of Adam de Blackburne, and was father of several sons,* of whom the eldest,

RICHARD DE HULTON, of Hulton, living temp. EDWARD I. had a charter of a free warren in his demesne lands of Hulton, Ordshall, Flixton, and Heaton, in the 32nd of that reign. He m. Margery, daughter of Robert de Radclive, of Radclive Tower, and had issue,

BERNARD, OF PALACE ANNE.

BERNARD-BEAMISH, ARTHUR, esq. of Palace Anne, in the county of Cork, a justice of the peace and captain commandant of the East Carbery Yeomanry, succeeded to the family estates by the will of his maternal uncle, Thomas Bernard, esq. in 1795, and assumed, in consequence, the surname and arms of BERNARD.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the house of BERNARD, of Castle Bernard, Earls of Bandon, and derives, according to Thomas Hawley, King at Arms temp. HENRY VIII. from "Sir Theophilus, a valiant knight of German descent, who in 1066, accompanied WILLIAM the Conqueror to England." Subsequently we find the Bernards flourishing in the counties of Westmoreland, York and Northampton.

SIR THEOPHILUS, who was son of Sir Egrett, was succeeded by SIR DORBARD, the first surnamed BERNARD, or Fitz Bernard. His descendants settled at Acornbank, in Westmoreland, (according to the authority already quoted) and appear to have continued in that county for many succeeding generations. We learn also, from written annals, that when HENRY II. landed in Ireland, in 1172, he was accompanied by William Fitz Adelm, Humfrey de Bohun, Hugh de Lacy, and ROBERT FITZ BERNARD, and on the departure of HENRY from Ireland, Wexford and Waterford were entrusted to Fitz Bernard's custody.

SIR FRANCIS BERNARD, knight, of Acornbank, in Westmoreland, the lineal descendant of Sir Dorbard, married Hannah, daughter of Sir John Pilkington, and was grandfather of

SIR HENRY BERNARD, knight, who married Anne, daughter of Sir John Dawson, of Westmoreland, and had four sons, ROBERT, William, FRANCIS, and Charles. The third son,

FRANCIS BERNARD, esq. settled in Ireland temp. QUEEN ELIZABETH, and purchased the estate of Castle Mahon. He left, with two daughters, the elder m. to Sir George Reynolds, and the second to Percy Freke, esq. a son,

FRANCIS BERNARD, esq. of Castle Mahon, whom Elizabeth, daughter of Arthur Freke,* esq. of Rathbarry, in the county of Cork, and had issue,

- i. FRANCIS, of Castle Mahon, now Castle Bernard, judge of the Common Pleas. He was born in 1663, was Member for Clognakilty, 1st of WILLIAM and MARY, and for Bandon, in 1695. He m. in 1693, Alice, daughter of Stephen Ludlow, grandson of Sir Henry Ludlow, of Maiden Bradley, Wiltshire, and dying in 1721, was buried in the family vault at Ballymoodven church, Bandon, where a handsome monument has been erected as a memorial of his distinguished character and talents. His son and successor,

FRANCIS BERNARD, esq. of Basingbourne Hall, Essex, and of Castle Bernard, in the county of Cork, m. in 1722, Lady Anne Petty, only daughter of Henry, Earl of Shelburne, but dying without surviving issue, was s. (by the eldest son of his brother, Major Ludlow Bernard) his nephew,

JAMES BERNARD, esq. of Castle Bernard, grandfather of the present JAMES, second EARL OF BANDON. (See BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage.)

John Evans, of Bulgadden Hall, in Limerick, brother of George, second Lord Carbery, ancestor of the present peer. (See BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage.)

Mr. Bernard took an active part in opposing and suppressing the turbulent spirit of the times he lived in, and ultimately fell a victim in the cause, being killed in defence of his castle. He and his eldest son, Judge Bernard, appear in the list of persons attainted by the Parliament of JAMES II. in 1689, but were restored to their estates on the accession of WILLIAM and MARY.

Mr. Bernard's second son,

WILLYAMS, HUMPHRY, esq. of Carnanton in Cornwall, lord of the royal manor of Carnanton, b. 20th April, 1792, m. 14th January, 1822, in the abbey church at Bath, Ellen Frances, youngest daughter of Colonel William Brydges Neynoe, of Castle Neynoe, in the county of Sligo, and has issue, Charlotte-Dorothea.

Mr. Willyams, who succeeded his father 10th February, 1828, is a magistrate and deputy lieutenant for the county of Cornwall, deputy warden of the Stannaries, and senior captain in the Royal Miners regiment of Light Infantry.

Lineage.

THE family of WILLYAMS, or as it was formerly spelt WYLLYAMS, was long attached to and connected with the Arundells of Wardour and of Lanherne, with one of whom the first common Cornish ancestor came into the county about the year 1485, the parent stock, as Hamond L'Éstrange says, being in Wiltshire or Dorsetshire. From this ancestor descended two sons,

I. ADAM WILLYAMS, born about 1490, who m. the heiress of Prideaux of Asburton, and became settled at Stowford, in Harford, county of Devon. He left a son,

THOMAS, b. in 1524, who was SPEAKER of the HOUSE of COMMONS, in 1562. He m. the co-heiress of Cruces of Chimley, and died in 1566. In the parish church there is now standing a very handsome monument to his memory, bearing a complimentary but quaint inscription. His only son,

JOHN WILLYAMS, to whom in the same church is erected a monument stating the period of his decease, 1615, was father of

JOHN WILLYAMS, who married the heiress of Edgcombe, of Calstock, and left a son and successor,

JOHN WILLYAMS, who died in 1716, without issue.

II. THOMAS, of whom we have to treat. The second son,

THOMAS WILLYAMS, was born in Cornwall, in 1505. He m. a lady named Jane, and died in 1580, leaving two sons,

I. WILLIAM, his heir.

II. THOMAS, of Broadoak, born at Stowford, in 1542, but settled in Cornwall, in 1573. At this period a grant from the Crown was made to him (jointly with Thomas Prideaux) of the manor of Broadoak, in Cornwall, part of the lands of the attainted Marquis of Exeter, who was executed in 1538. In 1619 Thomas Willyams was in sole possession. He d. s. p. in 1680.

III. Another son, who migrated into Switzerland at an early age, and became ancestor of the Vullyamoz of that country.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM WILLYAMS, commonly styled "of Roseworthy," having received that manor as a gift from Sir John Arundell, of Lanherne, in the 27 ELIZABETH, as shewn by the deed which is still in the possession of the family, married four times; by his first wife, Elizabeth Yorke, he had an only son, John, who d. issueless; by the second, Margaret St. Aubyn, he had no child; by the third, Alyce, co-heiress of Roger Honeychurch, of Aviton Gifford, in Devon, he had five children, and by the fourth, Jane, co-heiress of Trevennard, or Trewinnard, no issue. By Alyce Honeychurch, his third wife, who d. in January, 1606, the children were,

WILLIAM, his heir.

Roger, b. in July, and d. in September, 1600.

Arthur, b. in 1601, died in 1669.

Roger, b. in 1602.

Margaret, b. in 1604.

Mr. Willyams died 12th June, 1623, and was succeeded by his son,

WILLIAM WILLYAMS, esq. b. 27th November, 1598, who m. 26th November, 1620, Jane, daughter and heiress of Michael Vyvyan, esq. of Phillack, a branch of the Trelowarren family, and by her, who died in March, 1655, had with other issue, a son and successor,

HUMPHREY WILLYAMS, esq. b. in October,

1629, who m. in August, 1658, Dorothy, sister (and eventual heiress in 1668) of Thomas Addington,* esq. of Leigh, in the parish of High Bickington, Devonshire, and had with other children, who died young.

1. JOHN, his heir.

ii. Thomas, b. in December, 1671, Captain R.N. who distinguished himself in various engagements. He commanded a line of battle ship in the Mediterranean, and on that occasion made himself more conspicuous for benevolence than discretion. Hearing that a poor Jew was to be the subject of an auto da fe, he landed his boats' crew and carried off the unfortunate creature out of the power of his tormentors. The Spanish government, preferring a complaint, he was ordered home and deprived of his command, but, by the favour of the Queen, was soon afterwards reinstated. Captain Thomas Williams m. the only daughter of Admiral Cooper, and was s. by his son.

Mr. Precentor Lowe is a magistrate for Shropshire.

Lineage.

The family of Lowe was established in England by one of the companions in arms of the CONQUEROR, and has preserved a male succession since that remote era. "I must not forget," says Mr. Abingdon, in speaking of the abbot and convent of Worcester, "to mention theyre benefactors. There were in thys Lordshyp twoe auncient inhabitantes; one LOWE, wrytten (formerly and still pronounced heere LAWE) whose aunccestor was one of the captaynes who fought under Duke William of Normandye, in the conquest of England, as appeareth in a rowle most exactly drawn and carefully kept in Flanders, the copy whereof was sent mee by a gentleman of this family, to give me light in the obscurity of antiquities. Neyther can this derogat from Lowe of Shropshire; where Guido Lowe de Clive, 7th HENRY VI. was returned into the exchecker to attend the King, as an esquire, qui portabat arma ab ancestria; for why may they not bothe springe from one roote? But to return to my purpose; Stephanus de Lawe (son of Alanus de Lawe, and direct ancestor of the family before us) gave all his land in Lawefield, which he held in More, of the monkes of Worcester, to the same priory. He moreover, by the consent of Dionysia, his wife, gave to his lords the said prior and convent, in pure and perpetual alms, certain assart or new cleared land, called the Seken, lying under the Meuhay, with all the Grove there; but for the surrender of these and other lands, the Priour and Monkes yealded him some recompense and were most charitable to him, for being by the Jews at Worcester detained in prison, and loaded with heavy chains, and by exquisite torments compelled to redeem himself, his said lords the prior and convent, being moved with pity, and seeing him forsaken of all his friends, did, by the expending of much money, free him from his bonds, and restore him to life and liberty. Thus did the religious deliver him out of the jawes of hys cruel creditors. The other auncient gentleman was Penhull, of whom Aluredus de Penhull, falling likewise into the merciles handes of these devouring usurarious Jewes, then dwelling in Worcester, was also by the Priour and Monkes redeemed out of that thralldome." The family continued for a long series of years resident at the Lowe, and among the eminent persons it produced in early times, we may mention JOHN LOWE, an Augustine monk, at Worcester, consecrated bishop of St. Asaph, in 1433, HUMPHREY LOWE, high sheriff of Shropshire, in 1439, and RICHARD LOWE, who was retained to serve in France with one man at arms and three archers, temp. EDWARD IV.

THOMAS LOWE, of the Lowe, in the parish of Lindridge, Worcestershire, head of this ancient house towards the close of the 16th century, married Anne Foster, and was father of

I will that my house at the Lowe, wherein I now live, being the ancient seat of my ancestors, be from time to time kept up and repaired by whoever shall be seized of my estate at the Lowe, as need shall require, but by no means to be pulled down or demolished." Lineage.

The family of Entwisle was long settled in the township of Entwisle, on the north-eastern extremity of the hundred of Salford; and Camden speaks of Entwisle Hall in his time as "a neat and elegant mansion," the residence of "noble proprietors of its own name." Of its distinguished members in early times was SIR BERTINE ENTWISSELL, knight, viscount of Bricqbec, a gallant warrior of the martial times of HENRY V. and HENRY VI. He participated in the glory of Agincourt, and contributed by his valour to the conquest of France. Returning to England, after the loss of Normandy, he enrolled himself under the banner of the red rose, and fell slain at St. Albans, in 1455. In that battle, the first blow struck in the fatal conflict between the rival houses, eight hundred men are reported to have fallen on the side of the Lancastrians, including besides the Duke of Somerset, John Lord Clifford, Sir Robert Vere, Sir William Chamberlaine, Sir Richard Fortescue, Sir Ralph Ferrers, Sir Bertine Entwissell, and many esquires and gentlemen. Over the remains of Sir Bertine, who was interred in St. Peter's church, appeared, until recently, his effigy in brass, with the following inscription:

"Here lyeth Sir Bertin Entwysell, knight, who was borne in Lancashire, and was Viscount and Baron of Brickbecke, in Normandy, a baylife of Constantine; who died the xxviii. May, in the year of Lord God mcccclv. on whose soule God have mercy. Amen."

GORDON, OF PITLURG.

SKENE-CUMING-GORDON, WILLIAM, esq. of Pitlurg and Dyce, in the county of Aberdeen, b. in 1786, m. in 1825, Anne, youngest daughter of Alexander Brebner, esq. of Learney, in the same shire, and has issue,

JOHN, b. 9th February, 1827.

Alexander, b. 30th November, 1828.

Christian.

Lucan.

Pitlurg, who succeeded his father in 1828, is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for Aberdeenshire and lieutenant-colonel of the local militia. Entering the military service of his country at an early age, Colonel Gordon served several years with the 92nd, or Gordon Highlanders, and afterwards with the 6th regiment, in Portugal, Spain, and France, and on the Staff, in the West Indies.

Lineage.

Adam de Gordun, the progenitor of the family of Gordon,* went from England into North Britain, with Malcolm III. in the year 1057. He obtained a grant of lands in Berwickshire, near to Coldstream, on the river Tweed, where he settled, and the lands were called from his own surname (then frequent in France) East and West Gordun. He was killed at the siege of Alnwick, with King Malcolm, November 13, 1093, and was succeeded by his son,

ADAM DE GORDUN, proved by two charters in the chartulary of Kelso. The first in 1130, by Adam Filius Ada de Gordun,

* The true etymon of Gordon (or Gordun, as found in the most ancient charters) has not as yet been discovered. This name was most unquestionably local, and brought from the Continent to Scotland by the first founder of this family, who gave his own name to the lands he acquired in the county of Berwick. There was a tribe of the Nervi, called Gorduni, settled in Belgic Gaul, near Ghesat, mentioned by Cæsar forty years before the Christian æra. From thence the families settled in France, Italy, and the Tyrol, have possibly derived their names. The ancestor of the Scottish family, most probably, came from Normandy, in the reign of King EDWARD the Confessor, which commenced in 1041. This king's mother, Emma, was the Duke of Normandy's sister. He was educated and resided many years at the Norman court. He first encouraged the settlement of the Normans in England, particularly in the northern parts, most subject to the Danish depredations. There is undoubted evidence of the settlement of the Gordons in Normandy at a very early period. In 1163, King HENRY III. entered into a treaty at London, consisting of sixteen articles, with Pontius de Gordon, designed Vir nobilis, for securing to him the castle, honour and government of the Castle of Gordon, in Normandy, with the territories and ancient privileges thereto belonging.—See Rymer's Fœdera, vol. i. p. 761.

granting lands, &c. to the abbacy of Kelso, founded by King David I. in 1126. The second by Richard, Bishop of St. Andrew's, confirming to the abbacy the church of Gordun, with liberty to the inhabitants of the other, (or West Gordun) belonging to Adam de Gordun, to bury their dead in the churchyard then first consecrated by him. He was succeeded by his son

RICHER (or RICHARD) DE GORDUN, proved by a charter in 1170, whereby he grants to St. Mary's church and the monastery of Kelso, and to St. Michael's church, of his village of Gordun, certain lands, &c. He died about the year 1200, and was succeeded by his son,

THOMAS DE GORDUN, proved by a charter in 1202, or soon after his father's death, confirming the donations made by Richard de Gordun, his father. He died about the year 1230, and was succeeded by his son,

THOMAS DE GORDUN, proved by four charters in the chartulary of Kelso, granted between 1230 and 1258, wherein he is designed the son of Thomas de Gordun. He died in 1260, and was succeeded by his daughter,

ALICIA DE GORDUN, who married Adam de Gordun, her cousin, (probably the lineal heir male, descended of a brother of Richard de Gordun) proved by a charter, in 1274, or thereabouts, granted by her after the death of her husband, who joined the Earls of Athol and Carrick, in a crusade, and died at Tunis, in 1269. In this charter she is designed daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Gordun, younger, knight, spouse of the late Adam de Gordun; and she confirms the grants of her father, grandfather, and great-grandfather, all specially named. She was succeeded by her son, ADAM DE GORDUN, who possessed an estate in England, probably in right of his wife. He is summoned to attend King EDWARD THE FIRST's lieutenant, at Gloucester, 14th June, 1287. He died about 1295.

The Gordons had now extended themselves, like other great families, beyond their original territories. Adam de Gordon, who flourished at the end of the thirteenth century, was the common progenitor of the Gordons of the north, and of the Gordons of Galloway. The Gordons seem not to have mingled in the party struggles during the minorities of ALEXANDER II. and ALEXANDER III. Sir Adam de Gordon first appeared like a gallant knight in support of the valourous Wallace, during his efforts for his country, and he afterwards contributed his exertions to the final success of Robert Bruce. Adam de Gordun, the son of Alicia, was succeeded by his son,

ADAM DE GORDUN, warden of the marches in 1300, and a commissioner of King EDWARD I. for establishing regulations for Scotland and for Lennox, in 1304. In an agreement with the monks of Kelso, 29th June, 1308, he is designed dominus Adam de Gordun Miles. After the battle of Bannockburn, in June, 1314, he abandoned the English party, was received into favour by King ROBERT BRUCE, and obtained from him a grant of the Lordship of Strathbolgie, with its appurtenances, situated in the shires of Aberdeen and Banff, and part of the estates of David de Strathbolgie, the faithless Earl of Athol. He granted the Glenkins, in Galloway, and the lands of Stutchell, in Roxburghshire, to his second son, William, the progenitor of the Viscounts of Kenmure, ennobled in 1633, and of the other Gordons, in Galloway. He was ambassador from King ROBERT I. to the pope in 1320, and eminently concerned in all the public transactions of these times. Sir Adam fell fighting for his country in the battle of Halydon Hill, 1333. His eldest son, ALEXANDER DE GORDUN, succeeded, and was slain at the battle of Durham, in 1346. His son,

JOHN DE GORDUN, was taken prisoner with DAVID, at the battle of Durham, and not released until 1357, when William I. Earl of Douglas, became bound as one of his sureties. He was succeeded by his son,

JOHN DE GORDON, a celebrated warrior. He received, in 1376, from King ROBERT II. a grant of the Barony of Strathbolgie, in Aberdeenshire, in which grant he is designed Joannes de Gordon, (now first altered from Gordun) without any addition or title of honour. The estate is granted to him and his heirs whatsomever, and in the grant it is mentioned that a former grant by King ROBERT I. to his great-grandfather Adam de Gordun, had not taken effect, because the Earl of Athole had returned to his allegiance, and recovered his estates for some time, but was now again forfeited. By Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of Cruickshanks, of Aswanly, he had three sons, viz.

1. ADAM, who fell at Homildon, in 1403, leaving an only daughter and heiress, Elizabeth, who in virtue of the charter of King ROBERT II. to heirs whatsomever, succeeded to the estate of Strathbolgie, and to the other estates of Gordon and Huntly, in Berwickshire, which were settled in the same manner. This Elizabeth m. in 1408, Alexander, (second son of Sir William Seton) who assumed the surname of Gordon. From this marriage descended the Dukes of Gordon, the Earls and Marquises of Huntly, the Gordons of Cluny, and Major General Patrick Gordon, governor of Pennsylvania, whose daughter and eventual heiress, Philadelphia, m. Colonel Abraham Taylor, and was great grandmother of the present Dr. TAYLOR, of Clifton. (See p. 8.)

II. JOHN, of Scurdargue or Essie, commonly and long designed in Scotland as Jack and Tam.

III. Thomas, of Ruthven or Davock,

The second son, JOHN GORDON, of Scurdargue or Essie, 12th in lineal male descent from Adam de Gordun, the founder of the family, married Margaret, daughter of Sir Patrick Maitland, of Gight, and dying about the year 1420, was succeeded by his eldest son,*

JOHN GORDON, who acquired the lands of Auchlenchries, in Aberdeenshire. He m. first, Elizabeth, daughter of Abernethy, Lord Salton, and secondly, Henault, daughter of Macleod, of Harris. His eldest son, by his first marriage,

JOHN GORDON, of Auchlenchries, succeeded him, who acquired the estates of Kimmundy, in Aberdeenshire, and the lands of Lungar and Hilton, in the neighbouring county of Kincardine. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Alexander Forbes, ancestor of Lord Pitsligo, and was slain in 1513, at the battle of Flodden, fighting under the standard of Alexander, third Earl of Huntly, who commanded the victorious right wing of the Scottish army. He was succeeded by his only son,

* Sir Patrick Maitland left two daughters, co-heiresses of his opulent estates. Alexander, first Earl of Huntly, obtained a gift of the wardship of these ladies, in favour of his son George, Lord Gordon, who in 1467, purchased from his wards their father's estates. The estate of Gight was one of those purchased, and in this manner the Bog of Gight (now Gordon Castle) became the property of the ducal branch of the family of Gordon.

JOHN GORDON, who sold the estate of Lungar, purchased the lands of Pitlurg, and exchanged Hilton for Cravethin, or Coravechin, in Aberdeenshire. He married first, Lady Jane Stuart, daughter of John, Earl of Athol, brother uterine of King JAMES II. of Scotland, and son, by her second marriage, of Jane, widow of JAMES I. Queen Dowager of Scotland, and granddaughter of King EDWARD III. of England, being the daughter of his son John, Duke of Lancaster. He married secondly, Margaret Drummond, of the family of Perth, and d. in 1544. His eldest son,

JOHN GORDON, of Pitlurg, married Janet, daughter of James Ogilvie, of Cullen, (ancestor of the Earls of Findlater and Seafield) by whom he acquired the estate of Broadlands, in Aberdeenshire. He fell at Pinkie, in 1547, leaving one son, only five months old,

SIR JOHN GORDON, knight, of Pitlurg, who frequently represented the county of Aberdeen, in the Scottish Parliament, and bore an eminent part in the affairs of that period. He enjoyed the esteem and confidence of JAMES VI. and many letters from that Prince to him are in the possession of his descendants. He was specially invited by the King to attend the baptism of Prince HENRY, at Holyrood, on which occasion he received the honour of knighthood. In October, 1594, his Majesty, by a royal letter and mandate, committed to his custody "the house, place and fortalice of Strathbolgie," and empowered him to receive the rents and revenues of the estate for the behoof of Henrietta, Countess of Huntly, the eldest daughter of Esau, Lord Aubigny, (the King's first, and for a long time his most intimate favourite) who was created Duke of Lennox, in 1581. The Earl of Huntly at that time headed the catholic faction, was persecuted by the Reformers, but protected by the King, and Sir John, who professed the protestant religion, and enjoyed the full confidence of JAMES VI. was frequently employed as a negotiator in the affairs of the Earls of Huntly, Angus and Errol, (then distinguished by the appellation of "the three Popish Lords.") In these negotiations, it is evident from the documents in the possession of his descendants, that Sir John had warmly espoused the cause of Huntly; and the influence of his family, and the high character which he maintained with both parties, enabled him to interfere successfully in behalf of the Earl, and to protect him from the full fury of the Reformers, while his son, Robert Gordon, possessing the same high character, and a similar, or even greater degree of influence and power, was, on the execution and forfeiture of the Marquis of Huntly, in 1649, of the greatest service to the large family which that nobleman left behind him.

The Marquis of Argyle, by various means, obtained possession of the whole estates of Huntly, and the Marquis of Huntly's children thus becoming dependent on the favour of their uncle Argyle, constantly applied to Mr. Gordon, whose utmost influence and address were employed in procuring for them a temporary subsistence, and in settling the family differences, which had almost produced an open rupture with Argyle. There are many letters to Mr. Gordon from Argyle's nephews, (the sons of the Marquis of Huntly,) full of complaints against him; and there are some from Argyle, which appear to justify his conduct in those affairs. In the same uniform line of conduct Mr. Gordon continued to exert himself in favour of the family of Huntly, till the restoration of CHARLES II. when the estates and honours were restored to George, fourth Marquis of Huntly, created Duke of Gordon, 1st November, 1684. During the troubled times of the two CHARLES'S, Sir John Gordon and his son Robert, were of the greatest service to the family of Huntly, and the numerous letters from these monarchs and from the principal nobility and persons of distinction to Sir John and his son, distinctly show the high character and influence which they maintained with the jarring factions of the period, and which enabled them so powerfully to aid their friends. Those letters to Sir John are of great value in an historical point of view, as they throw much light on some of the most obscure parts of the transactions of those times. Sir John m. Isabel, daughter of William, seventh Lord Forbes, and d. 16th September, 1600, leaving two sons and a daughter. The elder son,

JOHN GORDON, of Pitlurg, inherited the esteem of JAMES VI. He m. Nicolas, daughter of Kinnaird, of Kinnaird, but dying s. p. in 1619, was succeeded by his brother,

ROBERT GORDON, of Pitlurg, commonly designed of Straloch. This gentleman, a poet, a mathematician, an antiquary, and a geographer, was born 14th September, 1580, and acquired the rudiments of his education in Marischal College and University, of which he was the first graduate. He afterwards studied at Paris, where he made the acquaintance of several remarkable men. A few years after his return to Scotland, he married Catherine, daughter of Alexander Irvine, of Lenturk, and not long subsequently purchased the estate of Straloch, in Aberdeenshire, where he continued to reside. In 1641, he was honoured by a letter from CHARLES I. "earnestly entreating" him to complete the publication of an atlas of Scotland, which had been projected by Timothy Pont. To this work Mr. Gordon zealously devoted himself, and in such high estimation were his labours held, that by two acts of the Scottish Parliament, he was exempted from all military burdens, while the general assembly of the church published a request to the clergy, to afford him every assistance in their power. Thus encouraged, the undertaking was completed in the year 1648, and soon afterwards published by the Blaeus, of Amsterdam, under the title of "Theatrum Scotiae." A second edition was published in 1655, and a third in 1662. Of this performance it is sufficient praise to state that it was the first delineation of Scotland made from actual survey and measurement, and that its accuracy is remarkable even in the present day. While he contributed many maps, entirely of his own construction, he revised and materially improved all the others, adding geographical descriptions of much value, and prefixing an introduction, in which a comprehensive view is given of the constitution and antiquities of the country. These dissertations are remarkable as the first attempts to settle the ancient history of Scotland on the basis on which it is now universally acknowledged to rest. On these topics Mr. Gordon farther explained his views in several essays, hitherto inedited, which are mentioned with much approbation by Bishop Nicolson, in his Scottish Historical Library. Besides the "Theatrum Scotiae," Mr. Gordon wrote several works, which still remain in MS. The chief of these is a History of the Family of Gordon from the earliest period to the year 1595, bearing this title, "Origo et Progressus Familiae illustrissimae Gordoniorum in Scotia," and like all his productions, written in Latin, with ease, elegance and accuracy. He wrote also a preface to Archbishop Spotswoode's History of the Church of Scotland, and translated into Latin the controversy between John Knox and Wolfram, sub-prior of St. Andrew's. An able critical letter on the Scottish historians, which he addressed to the antiquary David Buchanan, is inserted in Leland's Collectanea; some of his poems have been printed in Bishop Forbes' Funerale (Aberdeen, 1635) and elsewhere; and part of his correspondence with Lord Crimond (father of the celebrated Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury,) appears in a memoir prefixed to "Johannis Forbesii, a Corse, opera," published at Amsterdam, in 1703. By his contemporaries of all parties, he was held in the highest respect, and was frequently called on to fill the honourable office of mediating between them. He d. 18th August, 1661, and was interred in the family burial place at New Machar, on the 6th of September following. A portrait of him, by Jameson, the Scottish Vandyke, is preserved in the public hall of Marischal College; an engraving from this painting was published in Smith's Iconographia Scotica, and another print lately appeared in Chambers' Lives of Illustrious Scotsmen, where there is a memoir of Mr. Gordon.* He had issue,

- i. ROBERT, his heir.
- ii. John, of Fechill.
- iii. William, who died at Paris, in 1648, without issue. He distinguished himself by his zeal in the royal cause, and wrote "Animadversions on the Proclamation of the Long Parliament, and the Declaration against the King."
- iv. Alexander, d. s. p. in 1615.
- v. James, minister of the parish of Rothiemay, who m. the heiress of Frazer, of Techmiury, and founded a respectable family. He assisted his father in his geographical labours, and himself acquired eminence in that department of science. He published a highly curious map of the city of Edinburgh, with views of some of the chief buildings. He constructed also a plan of the cities of Old and New Aberdeen, which was engraved in Holland, at the expense of the corporation, who presented Mr. Gordon with a silk hat, and with a silver cup, weighing twenty ounces, besides a donation to his lady. He wrote a "History of the Transactions in Scotland from 1637 to 1640," and "A Description of both towns of Aberdeene," to accompany his plan. Both these treatises still exist in manuscript, together with a Common Place Book of Practical Divinity, which he composed in 1646.
- vi. George, who d. in 1636.
- vii. Alexander, who was educated for the profession of the law, became a member of the Scottish bar in 1684, and in 1688 was appointed a judge in the Court of Session, with the title of Lord Auchintoul.
- viii. Hugh, d. s. p.
- ix. Arthur, an eminent barrister, who m. Catharine, daughter of Alexander Menzies, of Kimmundy, and died in 1680. His son founded and endowed a magnificent hospital in Aberdeen, called "Robert Gordon's Hospital," where upwards of one hundred boys are now maintained and educated.
- x. Patrick, who d. in 1649.
- xi. Lewis, a physician, d. s. p. in 1704.
 - i. Isabel, m. to Urquhart, of Craighouse.

* It is doubtful whether the portrait in the hall of the Marischal College was painted by Jameson, or if it was, he must have painted two, for there is no doubt that the portrait in the possession of the present Pitlurg is the work of Jameson; and it is beyond question a superior portrait to the one in the college hall. It was from the painting at Parkhill that the print in Chambers' Lives was taken.

- ii. Margaret, m. to Sir Richard Maitland, a senator of the College of Justice, with the title of Lord Pittrichie.
- iii. Jean, m. to Middleton, of Johnston.
- iv. Barbara, m. to Menzies, of Kinmundy.
- v. Ann, m. to Bisset, of Lessendrun, ancestor of the late Bishop of Raphoe.
- vi. Mary, d. in infancy.

The eldest son,

ROBERT GORDON, of Pitlurg, b. in 1609, succeeded his father in 1661. He m. in 1638, Catharine, daughter of Sir Thomas Burnett, bart. of Leys, and had,

i. ROBERT, his heir.

- ii. John, of Collieston, near Arbroath, a physician, who m. first, Katharine, daughter of John Fullerton, of Kinnebar; secondly, Helen, daughter of Allardyce, of Allardyce; and thirdly, Grizel, daughter of Falconer, of Glen Farquhar. His eldest son, John, of Hilton, an eminent physician, married Margaret, daughter of John Dowell, merchant, and had, with other issue, a son, JAMES, of whom as successor to his kinsman, Gordon, of Pitlurg.

- i. Catherine, b. in 1644, m. to Robert, second Viscount Arbutnot.

Pitlurg d. in 1681, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT GORDON, of Pitlurg, b. in 1641, who m. Jean, daughter of Sir Richard Maitland, Lord Pittrichie, by whom he had a daughter, m. to Baird, of Auchmedden, and a son, ALEXANDER GORDON, of Pitlurg, who inherited the estates in 1682. He m. Jean, daughter of James Gordon, of Ellen, by whom he had a daughter, who d. unmarried, and a son, Alexander, an ensign in the British army, who, dying in 1748, without issue, the property devolved on the nearest collateral male heir, his uncle's grandson,

JAMES GORDON, of Hilton, M. D. who then became of Pitlurg. He m. in 1731, Barbara, daughter of Robert Cuming, of Birnes, and dying in 1755, was succeeded by his son,

JOHN GORDON CUMING, of Pitlurg, who succeeded, in right of his mother, to the entailed estates of Birnes and Leask, and added Cuming to his paternal surname. He m. Mary, daughter of John Fullerton, of Gallery, in Forfarshire, and had issue,

i. JOHN, his heir.

- ii. Thomas, who inherited the estate of Harperfield, in Lanarkshire, of which county he was a deputy-lieutenant, and lieutenant-colonel of the militia. He m. Jane, daughter of — Nisbet, esq. and niece of Andrew, last Earl of Hyndford. By this lady he left issue at his decease in 1832,

- 1. JOHN-WILLIAM, now of Harperfield, an officer in the royal engineers.

2. Hamilton.

1. Amelia.

Mr. Gordon Cuming d. in 1768, and was s. by his son,

JOHN GORDON CUMING, of Pitlurg and Birnes, born in 1761, who inheriting in 1815 the estates of his relative, Skene, of Dyce, (eldest collateral branch of Skene, of Skene) assumed the name of Skene, in conformity with a deed of entail. He entered the army in 1779, and joined the 36th regiment, then under orders for America, but their destination was afterwards changed, in consequence of several regiments having objected to embark for Gibraltar, as being contrary to enlisting engagements. The 36th regiment volunteered for that service, and embarked at Cork, but they were dispersed in a storm, and the transports took shelter in various ports in England. Peace very soon after took place, and he received a company in the 16th foot. On the breaking out of the late war he became Major of the Duke of Gordon's fencible regiment, (the North Fencibles, or Gordon Highlanders,) and served in Scotland and on the coast of Sussex, at the period of General Dumorie's threatened invasion. The fencible force having been found to be efficient, several more regiments were raised soon after, and he having obtained the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the army, offered his services and commenced recruiting for the Loyal Invernesshire Fencible Regiments, limited to serve in Great Britain and Ireland. He served with his regiment during the rebellion in Ireland, with much credit, in trying and difficult situations, and induced his regiment to offer their service under him, to join Sir Ralph Abercrombie in Egypt, and to extend it to any part of Europe that his Majesty required. For this spirited offer the regiment received his Majesty's most gracious thanks, and his Royal Highness the commander-in-chief was pleased to order, as a mark of approbation, that the corps should become a royal regiment, and be designated the Duke of York's Royal Highlanders. On the peace of Amiens, in 1802, the fencible regiments were disbanded, and at the termination of that short truce, he was appointed inspecting field officer of yeomanry and volunteers, and afterwards a brigadier-general in the northern districts of Scotland, under the command of Major-General the Marquis of Huntly (the late Duke of Gordon); thence, in 1810, he was placed as a major-general on the staff of Sicily; then he was removed to a command at Belfast, in Ireland, where he remained two years, and from that he proceeded to Jamaica, where he served as second

On the 4th June, 1813, he was raised to the rank of lieutenant-general, and placed on the Irish staff as a lieutenant-general in command of the south-east district of that kingdom. This command he was obliged to relinquish in 1814, in consequence of declining health, and on that occasion he had the honour and gratification of receiving a very kind and consolatory letter from H. Pitlurg died in 1828, and was s. by his eldest son, the present WILLIAM GORDON-CUMING-SKENE, esq. of Pitlurg and Dyce.

From the first settlement of Adam de Gordun in Scotland, in the year 1057 to the present day, a period of 779 years has elapsed, during which time there have been twenty-six descents in the lineal male line of Pitlurg. The Viscounts of Kenmure, however, also connect a lineal uninterrupted male descent from Adam de Gordun, William de Gordun, the ancestor of this family, being the second son of Adam de Gordun, the eighth in descent from the first settler in Scotland. But the family of Pitlurg came off in the eleventh generation; for on the succession of Elizabeth, the thirteenth lineal descendant of Adam de Gordun, her uncle, John, of Scurdargue, the ancestor of the family of Pitlurg, carried on the male line of the family, and his descendant, the present Pitlurg, is consequently, the descents being clear and uninterrupted, the chief lineal male representative of the family of Gordun. From the family of Pitlurg upwards of sixty families have sprung, who all settled in the north.

From various causes arising from the civil wars, &c. it would seem that the family of Pitlurg lost much of their power after the year 1661, and it does not appear that they began to regain their influence before the year 1731. Since that period, however, the estates have been greatly increased, and the influence of the family has progressed with its wealth. The estates of Birnes and Leask, and those left by Mr. Skene, of Dyce, have restored the family to their former rank, and given its present representative an equal political and personal influence with that exercised by his ancestor, Sir John Gordon, in the 16th century.

Captain Bainbrigge succeeded to the representation of the family on the death of his brother in 1818.

Lineage.

This family, of great antiquity in the north of England, came to Lockington about the close of the reign of HENRY VII. "In the year 1583, William Flower, Norroy, granted to William Baynbrigge, of Lockington ("descended from the ancient family of the Bainbriggess, in the north) a crest to his ancient arms, which were then confirmed." See MS. in Ashmole, vol. 844, f. 237. 238.

It would appear from tradition that the name was originally Bayn, a Saxon word signifying ready, and that the word Brigge was added in consequence of one of the family having with his sons and followers successfully defended a bridge against foreign invaders; and we now find a village called Bainbridge in the North Riding of Yorkshire, a pass in the mountains between Yorkshire and Westmorland, which was formerly a military post of defence, a Roman station, and a place of great antiquity. There are also other traces of the family in the north of England, as Bainbrigg Holm, in the north division of Easington Ward, in the county of Durham, and at Appleby, in Westmorland. The records of territorial possessions in Domesday Book, did not extend to this part of England, owing to the hostility of the natives to the Normans; consequently the name is not found in that work, and not being included among the Norman followers, it is presumed that they did not come into England at the Conquest.

These facts, together with that of the principal bearing in the arms being the battle-axe, a weapon of the highest antiquity, being the ancient Celt, showing Saxon or rather Danish connection, it is to be inferred that the family were established in England prior to the Norman invasion.

Guillim, a high authority on heraldry, selects the example of the arms of this fa-

* The cardinal was a man of great talent and a distinguished statesman. He was almoner to HENRY VII. and ambassador from HENRY VIII. to the Emperor Maximilian and also to the Pope.

An old family MS. states that Wolsey bribed the cardinal's cook to poison him, that he might himself succeed to the primacy; but Alfonso Ciaconi, in his Lives of the Popes and Cardinals, says that he was poisoned by a priest in revenge for a blow given by the cardinal. Sir Henry Ellis, however, in his Letters and State Papers, shows that De Giglis, an Italian, bishop of Worcester, then resident at Rome, as the King's orator, bribed Rinaldo de Modena, a priest living in Cardinal Burnbridge's establishment, and in his confidence, to murder him, which he did by poison, and received from De Giglis the sum of fifteen ducats as a reward. Rinaldo being put to the torture, confessed the whole, but finding that Pope Leo X. would not spare his life, he stabbed himself and died in prison.

De Giglis was at this time in correspondence with the family, in discussing the merits of the bearing called the fess, which he proves to represent the ancient military girdle or arming belt, a badge of honour, and of great antiquity.

From the time the family came to Lockington, down to the last Thomas, of Woodseat, who died in 1818, the representative has always served the office of high sheriff, either for the county of Leicester, Derby, or Stafford.

From 1553 to 1586, the branch then established at Derby, were members of parliament for the borough.

John Baynbrigge was high sheriff for York in 1419.

In 1514 died Cardinal CHRISTOPHER BAYNBRIGGE, primate of England, archbishop of York, cardinal of St. Praxis, bishop of Durham, and provost of Queen's College, Oxford, to which he was a great benefactor.*

JOHN BAYNBRIGGE, of Wheatley, county of York, otherwise called Baynbrigge del North, and afterwards of Leicestershire, had three children, and intimacy with Wolsey, then in the zenith of his power. Wolsey farmed the bishoprick of Worcester, and remitted large sums to De Giglis.

Richard Pace, one of Bainbridge's secretaries, who knew the particulars of Rinaldo's confession, was afterwards made a secretary of state, and Wolsey succeeded to all the honours of Cardinal Bainbridge.

An engraving of Cardinal Bainbridge is in possession of the family.

† This Thomas had a son, Robert Bainbridge, of Ashby de la Zouch, who married Anna, daughter of Richard Everard, of Shenton, by whom his fifth son was Dr. John Bainbridge, who was educated at Emanuel College, Cambridge, by his kinsman, Dr. Joseph Hall, Bishop of Norwich, and was chosen first tavilian professor of astronomy in the University of Oxford. PEDLER, OF HOO MAVEY.

PEDLER, PHILIP-WARREN, esq. of Hoo Mavey, in the county of Devon, a lieutenant-colonel in the army of India.

This gentleman was for several years actively engaged in the service of the East India Company, and for a great portion of the time held a distinguished command in the Indian army. His military career commenced in 1802, and he was soon afterwards placed in the division commanded by Sir Arthur Wellesley. In 1807 he held the rank of brigade-major, and was under Colonel East at the siege of Chyah, where he obtained the thanks of his commanding officer, by gallantly heading a storming party. Subsequently, in 1815, the Marquess of Hastings, then governor-general of India, having adopted the project of Captain George Sydenham, political agent at Berar, to organize a corps of four thousand auxiliary horse under the command of British officers, Captain Pedler was selected as second to Captain Evan Davies for this important service, and he led, under the command of that officer, 600 of those reformed cavalry against 2000 insurgents, who were devastating the territories of the Company and their allies. Captains Davies and Pedler were both wounded,* and the complete success of the first affair in which the reformed cavalry was engaged, called forth the expression of the governor-general's approbation, in a dispatch to the resident at Hyderabad: from which the following passage is extracted. "The governor-general in council has remarked with particular satisfaction the excellent conduct of the reformed horse on the first occasion of their being led into action; the gallant manner in which they advanced against a superior force would have been creditable to any troops, and affords the strongest proof of the zeal and attention which has been exerted in perfecting this corps. The spirit with which Captains Davies and Pedler, Lieutenant Rind, and the native officers displayed in leading the men into action, affording them the most animating example, is considered deserving the highest praise."

Soon after this affair Captain Pedler reassumed the command of his division, and moved with it to the relief of Nagpore, was engaged at the siege of that place, and in the action of the 16th December, 1817, where he had a horse shot under him and was slightly wounded in the foot, was thanked on the field by Brigade-General Doveton, and was mentioned in the report of the general to the adjutant-general. Captain Pedler was subsequently placed in command of his portion of the corps by the governor-general, in the following flattering terms communicated by Mr. Secretary Adams to the British resident at Nagpore. "The governor-general has learned from your private letters that you have invited Captain Pedler to raise and form the Nagpore

* The following humane and generous act of one of the enemy's soldiers in this conflict is deserving of record. Captain Pedler, who had been severely wounded in the sword arm, was returning, after the retreat and total rout of the enemy, to where the battle began, when he fainted from loss of blood and fell from his horse. A Rajpoot soldier of fortune, one of the hostile ranks, observing an officer fall, came at once to his assistance, staunching the bleeding wound by tearing off the end of his turban and using it as a tourniquet, removed the sufferer to the shade of a neighbouring tree, where, after some time, he restored life and animation. Captain Pedler, on recovering, found himself supported by his generous foe, whom he easily persuaded to follow his fortunes; and afterwards finding him as faithful as he was humane and brave, conferred upon him a commission in the Nagpore Auxiliary Cavalry. It is further worthy of remark, that this soldier was recognized as a deserter at Bombay, having formerly served for a short period in the company's army; but on a statement of his disinterested and humane conduct being made, the commander-in-chief, Sir Miles Nightingale, accorded him his free pardon. He was besides handsomely rewarded by many distinguished individuals at Bombay, and the Hon. Mount Stuart Elphinstone, the then governor, presented him, from his private purse, with 200 rupees as a mark of his approbation. It was a proud and just estimation of the character of the British officers he had formed, whilst serving in the company's army, which, he often afterwards acknowledged, attested him in this disinterested act of humanity.

Horse, a selection which his lordship cannot but approve. His lordship purposes to place Captain Pedler in command of that portion of his Highness the Rajah's troops, and his lordship expects the service will derive great advantage from that officer's judgment and familiarity with the prejudices of this class of troops as well as from his tried gallantry in the field."

Captain Pedler next joined Brigade-General Adams's division, was present at the attack and defeat of the Persha, and at the siege and capture of Chandah, where he was again thanked for his services. He was afterwards invited by the resident at Nagpore to reform and organize his Highness the Rajah's cavalry, and was confirmed in the command of the corps by the governor-general of India. On his removal, Major Davies thus speaks of his services, in an order announcing the fact of his promotion, dated "Camp, Ahmednugger, 18th May, 1818. On this occasion the commanding officer feels it due to the merits of Captain Pedler to record the high sense he entertains of his eminent public services since he joined the Reformed Horse, displayed as they have been on so many occasions of arduous contests, and distinguished by the most zealous devotion to a cause which has required so much of that personal intrepidity for which Captain Pedler has ever been conspicuous.

"Captain Pedler will be happy to learn that his loss is deeply felt by the commanding officer and the corps, and that his admirable and zealous co-operation in effecting the purposes for which the Nizams cavalry were reformed, have left him incapable of estimating by any common standard the value of such services; and in taking leave of a subject so interesting to his feelings, he cannot but congratulate the service on the distinguished place which Captain Pedler has acquired through his own exertions, and he assures Captain Pedler, that however their mutual interests may be separated, he cannot avoid associating them with his own and that of the troops he has the honor to command."

After nearly ten years' active employment in this command Major Pedler retired from the service, and his resignation is thus recorded :

"Nagpore, 6th Dec. 1826.

"ORDERS BY THE BRITISH RESIDENT.

"In announcing to the Nagpore Auxiliary Force Major Pedler's resignation of the command of the horse in the service of his Highness the Rajah, the resident feels it due to record in the most public manner the high sense which he entertains of that officer's services throughout the period of more than ten years that has elapsed since he was selected to fill that important station.

"The duties devolving on Major Pedler at the outset of his service were of an arduous and delicate nature; to reform a body of men such as the Rajah's corps of horse then were, and to bring them into such a state of discipline and efficiency as might render them useful, or even safe, as auxiliaries, was a task of no common or ordinary difficulty; that it has been accomplished with eminent success is mainly attributable to the judgment, temper, and address displayed by Major Pedler in the execution of all arrangements formed under his superintendence.

"The constant good feeling evinced, with that zeal and fidelity at all times manifested by the corps, furnishes a strong proof of the merit of the system introduced into that body by Major Pedler, and the resident has only to wish that the same qualities may continue, to perpetuate the memory of the officer under whom they have been so long fostered. Major Pedler will no doubt consider this statement as his best praise of the result of his exertions in the Rajah's service, yet the resident must add his warmest thanks and applause as a parting tribute due from himself and the government which has so largely benefitted, and will still benefit, by those exertions.

"Signed, W. JASACKE,

"Military Secretary."

Colonel Pedler having returned to Europe, purchased the manor and estate of Hoo Mavey, in Devon, with lands in Dorsetshire, of which latter county he is in the commission of the peace.

- iii. Jane-Agnes.

This gentleman succeeded to the estates on the decease of his father in 1835. He is a magistrate and deputy-lieu-tenant, and M.P. for the northern division of the county of Wilts.

Lineage.

The family of the Longs of Wiltshire was settled at a very early date at South Wraxall, and subsequently at Draycote, in that county, by marriage, in the time of HENRY VI., with the heiress of Cerne. (See vol. ii. p. 165, and vol. iii. p. 211.) A branch of the name was anciently seated at Potterne and Little Cheverell, in the same county and vicinity; and the traditions, as handed down for several generations in this particular branch, and recorded on their monumental inscriptions,* as well as the mutual mention made of persons of the same name in wills† and various documents at very remote pe-riods, by different contemporary members of the family of Wraxall and of that settled at Potterne, afford presumptive evidence that the ancestor of this branch derived his descent from one of the early sons of the house of Wraxall, about the time of HENRY VIII.

THOMAS LONG, of Potterne, in the county of Wilts, m. first, Isabel, daughter of John Flower, of Worton, in the parish of Pot-terne. He dated his will 1567, and d. 1570, leaving a second wife, Maud, and by his first marriage two sons,

JOHN.

William, of Potterne, who dated his will 1591, and died the same year, leaving, by his wife Anne, five sons and two daughters.

* An inscription in the church at Steeple Ash-ton, in the county of Wilts, commemorates Ri-chard Long, of Rowd Ashton, the grandson of Thomas Long, of Little Cheverell, esq. as being "of the ancient family of the Longs, of Wraxall, Wilts."

† Sir Thomas Long, of Wraxall, knt. in his will, dated 1506, makes a bequest to Joan Burley, the Thomas Long, of Potterne, in 1567, also be-queaths to Joan Burley.

The elder son,

JOHN LONG, of Marston, in the parish of Potterne, m. Anne, daughter of John Mere-wether, of Great Cheverell, in the county of Wilts. He made his will and d. in 1597, leaving by his wife, Anne, who was buried at Little Cheverell, 1626, six sons and three daughters, viz.

- i. Christopher, who m. and left issue.
- ii. THOMAS, ancestor of the Longs of Rowde Ashton.

iii. Richard, of Worton, in the parish of Potterne, who d. 1662, leaving by his wife, Sarah, a son, William, the ancestor of a branch of the family settled at Potterne till the year 1753, when it became extinct by the death of the last male descendant, Richard Long, esq. of Potterne, grandson of the above William, without male issue. See monumental inscription and arms in the church at Potterne.

iv. Edward, of Claverton, in the parish of Lea, in the county of Wilts. He died in 1622, having left by his wife Frances Maundrell, two daughters, Anne and Martha, both baptized at West Lavington, 1611 and 1613.

v. John.

vi. William.

i. Elizabeth, who m. John Long, of Bulkington, in the county of Wilts.

ii. Mary, who m.—Noyse, of Fulway, Wilts.

iii. Joan, who m.—Hobbs.

The second son,

THOMAS LONG, esq. of Little Cheverell and Melksham, in the county of Wilts, suc-ceeded by the will of his father to his estate in Marston and that called Wallens, both in the parish of Potterne. He was baptized at Potterne in 1579, and served the office of high sheriff for Wilts in 1652. His will was dated 1654, and he was buried at Little Cheverell, 8th May of the same year. He possessed by inheritance a considerable estate at Melksham, and purchased an estate at Collingborne Kingston of the Earl of Hertford. He married a daughter of — Floyer, of the ancient family of that name in Devonshire, and left issue,

- i. JOHN, who s. by the will of his father to his estates at Melksham and Little Cheverell, and purchased the estate of Baynton, in the parish of Edington, in the county of Wilts, of the family of Danvers. He served the office of high sheriff for Wilts in 1668, d. without issue, and was buried at Little Cheverell, 27th July, 1676, having by his will bequeathed his estates to the sons of his deceased brothers.

JOHN TRENCHARD, esq. of Cutteridge, b. in 1692, heir also of Sir George Norton,* of Abbots Leigh, in Somersetshire. This gentleman, a barrister by profession, and a commissioner for the forfeited estates in Ireland, gained considerable reputation by his political writings. In 1698 he published in connexion with Mr. Moyle, a well known pamphlet, entitled "An Argument, shewing that a standing army is inconsistent with a free government, and absolutely destructive to the constitution of the English monarchy." This production attracted attention, and by the conviction it carried, contributed greatly to the procuring a majority in the parliament, which obliged the king, though with the utmost reluctance, to send home his Dutch guards, and reduce the army to a moderate standard. Several occasional pamphlets, as various state occurrences arose, came from his pen, and met with a flattering reception from the public. But his two most distinguished works were "Cato's Letters," and "The Independent Whig." The object at which the former pointed was the administration in state; the latter was directed against the hierarchy of the church. They both made their appearance in 1720. Mr. Trenchard represented the borough of Taunton in parliament, and was a leading member of the House of Commons. He m. Anne, daughter of Sir William Blackett, but by her, who m. secondly, Mr. Gordon, had no issue. BODENHAM, OF ROTHERWAS.

BODENHAM, CHARLES-THOMAS, esq. of Rotherwas, in the county of Hereford, m. (settlements dated 21st and 22nd November, 1810,) Elizabeth-Mary, fifth daughter of Thomas Weld, esq. of Lulworth Castle, in the county of Dorset, and sister of Cardinal Weld, by whom he has an only child, CHARLES-DE-LA-BARRE, b. 4th May, 1813.

Mr. Bodenham succeeded his father 5th April, 1826, and is a justice of the peace for the county of Hereford.

Lineage.

Blount, in his MSS. Collections for Herefordshire, 1678, after giving a slight sketch of the pedigree, speaks thus of the residence of the family. ROTHERWAS: "This is a delicious seat situate near the river Wye, and within two myles of Hereford, abounding with store of excellent fruit and fertile arable land, having also a park within less than half a myle of the house, where there is a neat lodge upon a hill which overlooks the whole country adjacent. It was held so delightful a place, that the proverb was current, as anciently of Corinth,

Non datur cuivis adire Rotheras.

Every one may not live at Rotheras.

The house* is partly of old tumber work, but an end of it was new built of stone in the last age by Sir Roger, where there is a fair parlour full of coats of arms according to the fashion of that age, and over that a noble dining room wainscoted with walnut tree, and on the mantle tree of the chimney 25 coats in one achievement, with this motto, Veritas liberabit. Even the long table with the hall is inlaid with coats of arms."

The following pedigree of the ancient line of Bodenham is derived from the vellum roll at Rotherwas compiled in the time of Sir Roger Bodenham in Latin. The continuation, apparently made by one of the family, is in English, and brought down to the present time.

LESLIE, OF BALLYBAY.

LESLIE, CHARLES-ALBERT, esq. of Ballybay, in the county of Monaghan, b. 23rd May, 1765, m. in July, 1799, Ellen, youngest daughter of Richard Magenis, esq. of Waringstown, in Downshire, and has had issue,

HENRY-CHARLES, d. unm. in December, 1832.

Catherine-Letitia, d. young.

Emily-Elinor-Wilhelmina, m. to Arthur French, esq. of the county of Roscommon, and has a son, Robert, and two daughters.

This gentleman, who is lieutenant-colonel of the Monaghan militia and a justice of the peace, succeeded his father, the Rev. Dr. Henry Leslie, in February, 1803.

Lineage.

The Leslies descend from the noble family of Rothes, and are allied by blood to many of the nobility of Scotland. Their first settlement in Ireland took place in the reign of JAMES I. and different members of the family now possess considerable estates in the counties of Monaghan, Antrim, Down, Donegal, and Meath. The chief branches still existing are those of Leslie of Glasslough, represented by Charles Powell Leslie, esq.; of Ballybay, by Charles Albert Leslie, esq.; and of Leslie House, by James Leslie, esq. There are also, in the south of Ireland, families of the name, respecting whom it is regretted that no recent information has been obtained. From a document dated in 1788, it appears there resided in the county of Kerry, Sir Edward Leslie, bart. who was son of the then late Bishop of Limerick, and descended from Dr. John Leslie, of Urney, who obtained from WILLIAM III. the grant of Tarbert, part of Lord Clare's forfeitures. Dr. John Leslie was son of George Leslie, who came from Scotland with his relative, John, Bishop of Raphoe, and married that prelate's wife's sister, Catherine, fourth daughter of Alexander Conyngham, Dean of Raphoe.

The house of Leslie, of Hungarian origin, ranks, in point of antiquity, with the most ancient in the kingdom, and it has been the rare fortunes of the family to be illustrated by an historical narrative* showing the lineal descent of each generation from the year 1067, when its patriarch, Bartholomew, passed into Scotland with Queen MARGARET.

* This very curious book, in the possession of one of the family, in Ireland, is in Latin. A genealogical tree, as frontispiece, represents the founder of the family stretched upon the ground as the root, his son as the stem, from which shoot out branches and leaves, representing the different descendants of the family, with their connections, down to the time at which the book was printed.

in whose household he held the high office of chamberlain. Many families of Leslie are now resident in France, Hungary, Russia, &c. and several places in those countries bear names derived from this ancient cognomen, as Leslinia, Lessilia, &c. The surname has been differently spelt, Lessley, Lesley, Lesly, but most generally Leslie. BARTHOLOMEW, the founder of the family in Great Britain, stood high in the favour of MALCOLM III. of Scotland, by whom honours and possessions were conferred upon him with no sparing hand, in reward for his great services. On one occasion, after a gallant defence of the citadel of Edinburgh, the King promised him that wherever he should journey from Dumfermline towards the north, in one day, upon the same horse, he would grant him the surrounding country to the extent of a mile. When, on his return from the performance of his task, the King inquired where he had left his horse, he answered "between the less Ley* and the mair," the King, remarking that the place agreed with his name, replied, "Lord Lessley shalt thou be, and thy heirs after thee," and confirmed the promised grant. Bartholomew died at an advanced age, in 1120, leaving a son Malcolm, who maintained the high character of his father, and whose descendants bore conspicuous parts in many of the occurrences of the eventful times in which they lived. The earldom of Roths was conferred, in 1457, on George Leslie, and has descended in a direct line to the present peer. A scion of the ennobled house,

HENRY LESLIE, born in 1580, removing from Scotland, settled in Ireland in 1614, and died in 1661, leaving a son,

JAMES LESLIE, born 21st November, 1624, who married Jane Echlin, of Downshire, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

- iv. Edmund.
- v. Henry-Robert.

- i. Mary.
- ii. Catherine.

* Robert Verstigan, in his Antiquities, on the word ley, writes: "a combat having formerly taken place in Scotland, between a noble of the family of Leslie and a foreign knight, in which the Scot was victorious, the following lines, in memory of the deed and the place where it happened, are still extant.

"Between the Lesse Ley and the Mair
He slew the knight and left him there"

Anne, b. on Christmas-day, 1715, m. to Arthur Trevor, first Viscount Dungannon, and had issue, Arthur Trevor, father of the present Viscount Dungannon.

Motto—Grip fast. The motto has remained unchanged since the time of Queen

MARGARET, by whom it was given to Bartholomew, under the following circumstances:—In crossing a river swollen by floods, the Queen was thrown from her horse, and in danger of being drowned, when the knight, plunging into the stream, seized hold of her Majesty's girdle, and as he brought her with difficulty towards the bank, she frequently exclaimed grip fast, and afterwards desired that he should retain the words as his motto, in remembrance of the occurrence.

Phillip L'loyd, b. 5th January, 1827.

111. Martha.

Mr. L'loyd, who has been for upwards of fifty years a magistrate for the county of Norfolk, succeeded his father, the late Colonel Richard L'loyd, of Bawdeswell Hall, in that county, on his death in the year 1811, and has been exempted from serving as high sheriff for the county of Roscommon.

Lineage.

The family of L'loyd of Croghan and Bawdeswell claims ancient descent from the independent Princes of Wales. Connected with the house of Llewellyn, and, collaterally, with that of Tudor, like other ancient families of that wild and long unconquered principality, it seems lost in remote antiquity. The first ancestor of whom we have distinct record is

HEDD or THEDD MOLWYNOG, who resided at Yr Heullys, in the lordship and parish of Tollyhaern. He was seneschal and nearly akin to Prince David ap Owen, and was seized in chief of the lordship above named, with those of Llanfair, Duffryn, Elwg, and Nanttraed, which his descendants long enjoyed, and part of which are by some of them still possessed. The chief of Llanfair and Duffryn left three sons,

1. Myntyr, whose line became extinct.

11. GWYLLONON.

111. Gwrge.

From the second son,

GWYLLONON, descended,

MEURIC LLWYD, of Llwn-y-maen, near Oswestry, a frontier town of North Wales, "a valiant captain under the Earl of Arundel, who achieved," to quote the words of Pennant, "a very noble coat of arms, viz. the field argent, an eagle displayed with two heads sable." Of him, the chief of the name, and its first bearer in North Wales, sprang

SIR GRYFFYTH LLWYD or LLOYD, the direct ancestor of the house of Croghan and Bawdeswell. His was the high honour of holding the golden ewer at the baptism of Edward, first Prince of Wales, and for his arms he bore the present device of the family, with the eagle of his noble ancestor thereupon displayed, canton-wise, by way of augmentation.* Of the same blood came Rhys ap-Jenan-ap-Llewellyn ap Lloyd, esquire to the body of EDWARD IV. (as the book of Evan Lloyd Jeffry hath it) who with his cousin Davyd ap Jenkyn, both potent chieftains, acted a turbulent part in the Lancastrian wars. Omitting the long unbroken descent of the Denbigshire Lloyds, of Havodunnos, during those unsettled times, we pass to their descendant,

SIR ROBERT L'LOYD, of Wrexham, in Denbigshire, "a right valorous and thrusty captain," who wedded, towards the close of the sixteenth century, Ann Moustine or Mostyn, a daughter of that ancient house, now ennobled in the person of the present Lord Mostyn. Sir Robert had issue, cum aliis, THOMAS L'LOYD, esq. who wedded Honor, daughter of Robert Price, esq. but the lady having married against the consent of her friends, Mr. Lloyd was induced to remove into the province of Ulster, in Ireland, under the auspices of his kinsman, the celebrated Sir Ralph Bingley, to whom the Crown, in 1603, granted the manors of Strangford and Ardglass, with other lands in Downshire. On Sir Ralph's death, Mr. Lloyd removed to the seat of his cousin, Sir Maurice Gryffyth, at Carrick Drumrushe, in the county of Leitrim, and there acquiring an estate of twelve hundred acres, he settled, not choosing to return into Wales, as Mrs. L'loyd's friends continued irreconcilable. By her he left five sons and three daughters, viz.

1. Richard, } both officers of distinction,
2. John, } who perished in the field during the civil wars of 1641, in Ireland, s. p.
3. OWEN, successor to his father, of whom hereafter.
4. William, m. Catharine, daughter of the Rev. Edward Hawkins, D.D.
5. Benjamin, m. a daughter of — Reynolds, esq. of the county of Leitrim.
1. Margaret, m. first, Thomas Barton, esq. ancestor of the Bartons of the Grove, county of Tipperary, and of the Bartons of Clonelly, and the Waterfoot, in Fermanaghshire, and had issue; secondly, Lieutenant Peter St. George, nephew of Sir George St. George, of Carrick Drumrushe, killed by the Irish in 1641, ancestor

* Morfydd, one of the daughters of Sir Gryffyth Llwyd, married Madoc Gloddaeth, and brought to him the estate of Tregarnedd, in the Isle of Anglesea, as her portion, in whose house it remained until the families Gloddaeth and Mostyn were united, and in the joint blood (now ennobled as above, in the person of Lord Mostyn) it continued until the late Sir Thomas Mostyn aliened it to the late Owen Williams, esq. of Anglesea.

of the baronets of that name in Ireland, and had issue; and thirdly, Lieutenant Robert Drury, of the county of Suffolk, and had issue.

11. Jane, died unmarried s. p.
111. Elizabeth, married Captain Erasmus Mathew, of Northamptonshire, and had, with three daughters, an only son, John Mathew, esq. who married a daughter of Sir Francis Gore, bart. ancestor of the Gores, Earls of Arran and Rosse, &c.

Mr. Lloyd was succeeded at his death by his third, though eldest surviving son,

OWEN LLOYD, esq. a captain in the army. He was the first possessor of the Roscommon estates, in which shire he acquired three thousand acres, and wedded Elizabeth Fitzgerald, granddaughter of Sir Luke Fitzgerald, of Tyroghan, in the county Kildare, a grandson of the illustrious Fitzgerald, Earl of Kildare, direct ancestor of the ducal house of Leinster, and of the other noble branches of that family. By Miss Fitzgerald Mr. Lloyd left at his decease in the year 1664 three sons and three daughters, viz.

1. THOMAS, his heir, of whom hereafter.
2. RICHARD, eventual successor.
3. Owen, a senior fellow in the University of Dublin.
1. Alice, m. Colonel Daniel Hodson, son of the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Elphin.
2. Honor, did unmarried.
3. Elizabeth, m. the Rev. George Digby, of the same diocese.

Captain Lloyd was succeeded by his eldest son,

THOMAS L'LOYD, a colonel in the army, who was educated and learned the art of war in the military academy of France, and became one of the most accomplished gentlemen of his day. In the beginning of the civil wars, terminating in the expulsion of JAMES II. he was chosen commander in the field by the Inniskillen forces (in the same manner that Hamilton was governor of the town,) and died in the year 1689, at the early age of 32. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Cole, bart. ancestor of the Viscounts Cole, Earls of Enniskillen, but left no issue. Colonel Thomas Lloyd was succeeded by his brother,

THE HONORABLE RICHARD L'LOYD, a most eminent practitioner at the bar of England, speaker of the Upper House of Assembly, in Jamaica, and lord chief justice of that island; where he m. Mary, daughter and sole heiress of — Guy, esq. of the same island, with whom he received a fortune of three thousand pounds per annum, an immense sum in those days. Chief Justice L'loyd was succeeded by his second, but eldest surviving son,

GUY L'LOYD, esq. who married Mary, daughter of — Copping, esq. of the county of Essex, and by her he had issue,

Mr. L'loyd having lost his elder son, was at his decease succeeded by his second,

RICHARD L'LOYD, esq. of Bawdeswell Hall, in the county of Norfolk (in right of his wife, Elizabeth, daughter and sole heiress of Thomas Jeeks, esq. of Bawdeswell Hall), colonel of the East Norfolk militia, and in the commission of the peace for the same county. By Miss Jeeks, Colonel L'loyd had issue six sons and eight daughters, viz.

GUY, his successor.

Richard, born 1772, (in remainder to the Irish estates), m. Sarah-Harriet, daughter of Peter Elwin, esq. of Thurning Hall, Norfolk, and lord of the manors of Thurning and Booton, &c. both in the same county, and has, with other issue,

HOLCOMBE, OF PEMBROKESHIRE.

HOLCOMBE, The Rev. JOHN, M. A. of Cosheston, in the county of Pembroke, b. in 1765, m. in 1797, his cousin Miss Mary Robertson, and has issue,

- i. JAMES-ROBERTSON, B. D. fellow of Jesus College, Oxon, and prebendary of St. David's.

- iv. Catherine.

Mr. Holcombe is rector of Cosheston and Rhoscrowther, in the county of Pembroke, a prebendary of Brecon, and a magistrate for the county of Pembroke.

Lineage.

This family, which has been settled for nearly two centuries in the county of Pembroke, derives its name from its ancient inheritance,* Holcombe or Holtcombe, in the honor of Gloucester, in the county of Devon, where, and at Hole, in the same county, they, according to Sir William Pole, traced many descents.

Walter de Holcombe was Lord of Holcombe in 1301. Shortly after this period the family changed their residence to Hole, and among the manuscripts in the possession of Sir Thomas Phillipps, bart. there is a pedigree of seven generations given of them, beginning with John Holcombe, who married Isabel Downe, the daughter and co-heiress of Hugh Downe, esq. of Downe Ralph. By this marriage the Holcombes became possessed of considerable estates, part of the ancient inheritance of Downe

* Holcombe is compounded of holt, a Saxon word, signifying woody, and cum, or as written in Devonshire, combe, a valley between two hills.

Ralph, as well as that of the older and* nobler house of de la Bruer, Sir Ralph Downe, the great grandfather of Isabel Downe, having married Isabel de la Bruer, the daughter and co-heiress of Sir William de la Bruer, the son of the celebrated Sir Geoffrey de la Bruer, who was the great grandson of Reginald, Earl of Cornwall, the natural son of King HENRY I. These estates remained in the family till about 1600, when Hole, &c. was sold (by Gilbert Holcombe, the last of the family who resided in Devonshire) to Ellis Bartlett, and Downe Ralph and Tinge Bruer to Mr. Mallock. The marriage of Christopher Holcombe, the brother of Gilbert Holcombe, is mentioned in the visitation of 1620, and in 1660 we find his son William settled in Pembrokeshire, and in 1694, he was appointed mayor of the borough of Pembroke.

John Holcombe, who married Miss Downe, was the grandfather of Roger Holcombe, who was living in the 19th of EDWARD IV. He was succeeded by his son Charles, who had issue Ellis, who married Elizabeth, the daughter of Thomas Sydenham, of Lynford Eagle, in the county of Dorset, and by her had issue, Thomas, who had issue, Gilbert, Christopher, and Josias. Christopher, from whom this family derive their origin, married an Irish lady, and by her had issue,

* Lord William Bruer was one of the most powerful noblemen of his day, and enjoyed the singular good fortune of being the favourite of four successive monarchs, King HENRY II., King RICHARD, King JOHN, and King HENRY III. On King RICHARD's going to the Holy Land, he was with the bishops of Durham and Ely, and Hugh Bardulph, appointed to the government of the realm. King JOHN granted him many manors, and King HENRY III. made him sheriff over twelve counties. He founded the abbey of Tor and Dunkswell, the hospital of St. John's, Bridgewater, and the priory of Motisford; he likewise built the castle of Bridgewater, made the haven, and began the stone bridge, which was afterwards completed by one Trivet. He married Beatrix de Valle, supposed to be the daughter of Reginald, Earl of Cornwall, the natural son of King HENRY I. as Henry, the son of Reginald, in a part of the manor of Karwell, calls him brother. His sons dying without issue, his daughters succeeded to his vast inheritance, one of whom married William de la Bruer, the great grandfather of Lady Downe. Antony de la Bruer, the father of the above named William, held Jirge Bruer, and five knights' fees, in King HENRY II. The heirs male failed in the latter end of King HENRY III. The heirs general were married unto Graas, from whom is descended Copleston, and unto Sir Ralph Downe, from whom descended the Strodes, of Dorsetshire, and the Holcombes, of Hole.

WILLIAM HOLCOMBE, the first of the family who settled in Pembrokeshire, and was mayor of Pembroke in 1694. He died in 1700, leaving by his wife, Miss Mears, of the county of Pembroke, WILLIAM, who succeeded him, and JANE, first married to Mr. Nixon, secondly to Mr. Cuny. The son and heir,

WILLIAM HOLCOMBE, married Miss Meyrick, of Bush, in Pembrokeshire, and had,

- I. WILLIAM, a captain in the H. E. I. C. service, d. s. p.
- II. John, rector of Tenby and Gurfreston, in Pembrokeshire, d. s. p.
- III. Essex, an admiral in the R.N. m. Miss Corbet, daughter of Thomas Corbet, esq. of Nash, in Pembrokeshire, and had issue,
- IV. GEORGE, of whom presently.

- I. Jane.
- II. Alice.

The fourth son,

The Venerable GEORGE HOLCOMBE, rector of Pulchedhor, in the county of Pembroke, and archdeacon of Carmarthen, married first, Mrs. Bowen, and secondly, Catherine, daughter of—Stackhouse, governor of Bombay. By the latter he had issue,

- I. Richard, deceased.

Thomas Clifford, fourth son of Hugh, fourth Lord Clifford of Chudleigh, and of the Baroness Henrietta Philippina von Lutzow, of Mecklenburgh Swerin, (the head of which family, the Count von Lutzow, is at present ambassador from the Emperor of Austria to the Apostolic See.) and has

1. AMBROSE-CHARLES-FRANCIS-LISLE-MARCH, b. 10th May, 1834.
2. Everard-Aloysius-Lisle, b. 28th May, 1835.

Mr. Ambrose Phillipps built in 1834 on the estate of Grace Dieu, under the direction of the architect Railton, a manor house in the architecture of HENRY VII. near which are still to be seen the picturesque ruins of the ancient monastery of Grace Dieu, founded in the reign of HENRY III. by the Lady Roesia de Verdon, and destroyed by HENRY VIII. in 1539.

ii. Charles-Lisle, b. 7th March, 1812.

1. Augusta-Jane-Lisle, b. 10th December, 1810, m. 21st November, 1832, to John Fitzgerald, esq. eldest son of John Fitzgerald, esq. of Naseby, in the county of Northampton; Castle Irwell in the county of Lancaster; Boulge Hall, in the county of Suffolk; Seaford, in the county of Sussex; and Waterford Castle, in Ireland, and has issue.

Mr. Phillipps, who is a deputy-lieutenant and magistrate for the county of Leicester, succeeded his father in 1817. In 1819, after a contested election, he was chosen member for the county of Leicester. In 1825, he served as high sheriff for the same county. In 1830, he was re-chosen knight of the shire; and since that period has been elected member in two successive parliaments for the northern division of the same county. To him Garendon is indebted for several beautiful lodges, and the forest drives which extend for many miles, and command from the Charnwood Hills some of the most extensive views in the kingdom. To the present possessor Garendon also owes several fine pictures; three of Salvator Rosa are amongst the finest and largest that artist ever painted. In this house there is beside a good collection of family portraits and several by Sir Peter Lely.

In 1819, Mr. Phillipps assumed the arms and crest of Lisle, quartered with those of Phillipps and March, in right of his mother, Susan Lisle, daughter and co-heiress of Charles Lisle, esq. which family he now represents.

* His son and successor, Philip Ducarel, esq. bought Newland, in the county of Gloucester, which he has now made the family seat. The Ducarels are descended from an ancient French family, formerly Marquesses of Chateaunuis, in the province of Normandy, which came into England in 1685 at the revocation of the edict of Nantz.

- i. Mary, m. Edward Lisle, esq. of Crux Easton and Moyles Court, in the county of Hants, and was grandmother of THOMAS MARCH, esq. who eventually inherited the estates of the Phillipps family.

Sir Ambrose Phillipps purchased the house and estate of Garendon from the Duke of Buckingham, in 1683, and about the same time, the estate of Grace Dieu, from the Beaumont family. He was made king's serjeant by JAMES II. He d. in 1691, and was buried in Shepeshed church, where he has a fine monument. His son and successor,

WILLIAM PHILLIPPS, esq. of Garendon and Grace Dieu, m. Jane, second daughter of Sir Samuel Dashwood, knt. by whom he had issue,

- iii. William, who d. 1759, aged forty-one.

The eldest son,

AMBROSE PHILLIPPS, esq. of Garendon and Grace Dieu, succeeded his father. When young, he travelled into Italy, where he acquired a great taste for architecture, of which he has left some noble specimens at Garendon. The magnificent gateway (an exact representation of Titus's arch at Rome), the temple and obelisk in the park, as well as the beautiful south front of the house, were all designed by him; he also laid out the gardens, now so deservedly admired, and erected at one end a Grecian portico, approached by an avenue of cypress trees. He died M.P. for the county of Leicester, which he had represented for fourteen years, 6th November, 1737, and was buried in Shepeshed Church, where he has a splendid monument. Never having married, he was s. by his brother,

SAMUEL PHILLIPPS, esq. of Garendon and Grace Dieu, who m. first, Sarah, daughter of Francis Lewis, esq. of Stanford Hall, in the county of Nottingham, which lady d. 19th January, 1766; and secondly, Mary,* dau. of Thomas Allsopp, esq. to whom (afterwards Lady Gordon), at his death, he left the estates of Garendon and Grace Dieu for life, being entailed after her death upon his cousin,

* Mrs. Phillipps, after the death of her first husband, Samuel Phillipps, esq. in 1777, m. Sir William Gordon, knt. who had been his majesty's minister plenipotentiary at Brussels for many years, and who was descended from an old Scotch family.

THOMAS MARCH, esq. of More Critchell, in the county of Dorset. This gentleman* assumed the name of Phillipps on the death of his cousin, Samuel Phillipps, esq. in 1777, and s. to the estates of Garendon, and Grace Dieu on the death of Lady Gordon, in 1797. He m. Susan, daughter of Charles Lisle, esq.† of Moyles Court, in the county of Hants, who, by the death of her brother, Charles Lisle, esq. in 1819, became co-heiress of the Lisle estates. By her, who was b. 27th December, 1756, he had issue,

- i. CHARLES, his heir.

ii. Samuel March, b. 14th July, 1780,
*Under Secretary at the Home Office.

* Thomas March (Phillipps) was descended from an honourable family of the name, of French extraction, for several generations settled in England, and closely connected with the family of Lisle. His father, Thomas March, esq. who d. in London, in the year 1754, m. Jane, fourth daughter of Edward Lisle, esq. of Crux Easton, in the county of Wilts, and Moyles Court, in the county of Hants, by Mary, only daughter of Sir Ambrose Phillipps, of Garendon. His uncle, John March, esq. of Willesly Park, in the county of Cambridge, had two daughters, co-heiresses,

3. Catherine Dashwood.

- ii. Elizabeth, m. Richard Howard, fourth Earl of Effingham, with whom the earldom became extinct, 11th December, 1816, for want of issue.

† Charles Lisle, esq. of Moyles Court, in the county of Hants, was the representative of a most noble and ancient family who were formerly barons of England, by the title of Lords Lisle, of the Isle of Wight, which dignity has been in abeyance since the reign of EDWARD IV. Reginald Lisle was one of the early benefactors of Garendon Abbey, founded in 1133, by Robert Bossu, the good Earl of Leicester, as he was surnamed, for the Cistercian or White Monks, who follow the rule of St. Benedict without mitigation, and which Abbey was destroyed in 1541, by HENRY VIII. That monarch gave it with the lands belonging, to Thomas, Earl of Rutland, who sold it to the Duke of Buckingham, and from him it was purchased by Sir Ambrose Phillipps, in 1689, in which family it has remained ever since. Bossu, Earl of Leicester, afterwards became a monk in Garendon Abbey, where he ended his days. Of this family of Lisle, we have several records in Camden's Britannia. The great Sir John Lisle, one of the twelve first knights of the garter, in the reign of EDWARD III. was Lord High Admiral of England, and fought in the holy wars, in which he greatly distinguished himself. He was buried in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, and in St. George's hall his arms are emblazoned. (Of this family also was John Lisle, esq. one of CROWWELL's lords, and commissioner of his great seal, the sacrifice of whose widow by the infamous Judge Jefferies, in 1668, has been universally and justly reprobated. At the age of eighty, she was tried, convicted and executed at Winchester, for secreting in her house two dissenting ministers who took refuge there, after the defeat of the Duke of Monmouth's little army at Sedgemoor, in the county of Somerset. By this lady, who was co-heiress of Sir White Beconswave, knt. Moyles Court, in the county of Hants, was brought in marriage to the Lisesles, in 1636.

HENEAGE, OF HANTON.

HENEAGE, GEORGE-FIESCHI, esq. of Hainton, in the county of Lincoln, b. 22nd November, 1800, m. 16th January, 1833, Frances, daughter of Michael Tasburgh, esq. of Burghwallis, in Yorkshire.

Mr. Heneage, who succeeded his father 16th June, 1833, is a deputy-lieutenant for the county of Lincoln.

Lineage.

The period of the first settlement of the family of HENEAGE in Lincolnshire may be nearly defined by the circumstance of Sir Robert de Heneage being witness, together with Sir Richard de Angemine (of the same county) and several others, to a grant of lands from Nicholas Basset to the monks of Bracia. The deed, a very short one, is addressed to Robert, Bishop of Lincoln, and all the sons of the church setting forth the grant. This document is without date, but must have been either in the time of Robert Bloet, who was chancellor to WILLIAM Rufus, or of Robert Chesney, consecrated in the 13th King STEPHEN; for, when Robert Grosshead was made Bishop of Lincoln in 1235, the dating of deeds was in use.

JOHN DE HENEAGE (son of Sir William de Heneage, knt. grandson of Walter de Heneage, and great-grandson of John de Heneage, living temp. HENRY III.) appears by deed to have been possessed of the manor of HAYTON, in Lincolnshire, 10 EDWARD III. That estate was, however, subsequently sold, and passed into the possession of Lord De la Ware, but was re-purchased in the 21 RICHARD II. of John, Lord De la Ware, by John de Heneage's son,

JOHN HENEAGE, of Hainton, who married Alice, daughter of Walter Goddard, of Swetsham, in Norfolk, and had, with other issue, a son and successor,

He m. first, Lucy, daughter and co-heir of Ralph Burton, esq. of Hemswell, in the county of York; and secondly, Margaret, widow of Sir Henry Strangways, knt. and daughter of George Manners, Lord Roos. Of the latter marriage there was no issue, but by his first wife he left at his decease 4th July, 1556, (being buried with her in St. Catherine Cree Church, London,) four sons and two daughters, viz.

He was also captain of her majesty's guards, treasurer of her chamber, vice-chamberlain of her household, chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and one of the privy council. Sir Thomas possessed Copt Hall, at that period the noblest house in Essex, and was lord of the manor of Brightlingsea, in the same county. He m. Anne, daughter of Sir Nicholas Poyntz, of Iron Acton, in Gloucestershire, by Joan, his wife, daughter of Thomas, Lord Berkeley, and dying 17th October, 1594, left an only daughter and heiress, GREAVES, JOHN, esq. of Irlam Hall, in the county of Lancaster, born 15th April, 1793, succeeded his father, the late John Greaves, esq. on the 10th December, 1815.

Mr. Greaves is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant of the county of Lancaster, and major of the local militia. He is a patron of the fine arts, and his collections of pictures, coins, medals, and curiosities, have been chosen with great judgment, and are esteemed of considerable value.

Lineage.

A very ancient family* bearing the name of GREAVES, was located in the county of Derby, so early as the time of HENRY I. and remained there until the close of the seven-teeth century, when its principal seat, that of Beely, was alienated to the house of Rutland. The eldest son,

* From the visitation of Derbyshire, in the College of Arms, the following descent of the early founders of the family is extracted:

Thomas le Grevis, filius Egidii: EDWARD III.

CHARLES LLOYD, esq. of Dolobran, b. 9th December, 1637, attached himself in the year 1662 to George Fox and his followers, the founders of the Society of Friends. The Independents were at that period the dominant party, the Episcopal establishment being overthrown, and "The Friends" were as much persecuted by them as they were subsequently after the Restoration. It was at this epoch that Mr. Lloyd, having conscientiously refused to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy on the accession of CHARLES II., though a more loyal subject did not exist in the country, was at the instigation of his envious neighbour, Edward Lord Herbert of Cherbury, who desired his estates, subjected to great persecutions and losses. His possessions were put under premunire, his cattle sold, and his mansion at Dolobran partially destroyed. Although a magistrate for Montgomeryshire, and its nomination for its shrievalty at the time, the penal and oppressive laws against sectarians (arising from the excesses of some) were enforced against Mr. Lloyd with unmitigated rigour.* He was taken, with seven other gentlemen, who had embraced the doctrines of the "Friends," to Welshpool jail, and confined there until the act of JAMES II. was passed, releasing all persons detained for religious opinions, a period of ten years. Queen ELIZABETH) natural son of HENRY VIII. Charles Lloyd wedded, secondly, 8th February, 1686, Ann Lawrence, of Lea, in the county of Hereford. She d. 2nd March, 1708. By his first wife, who was born 2nd November, 1633, and d. 7th February, 1685, he had issue,

1. CHARLES, of Dolobran, b. 18th August, 1662, who died 21st January,

* "In the beginning of the year 1682 my dear friend, Charles Lloyd, and I went to visit friends in Herefordshire, Worcestershire, &c. &c. and came through their meetings to London before the yearly meeting. I acquainted my friends, George Whitehead and W. Penn, that I intended to go to Lord Hide to acknowledge his kindness for his letter, on my behalf, to Bishop Lloyd. George Whitehead said there was some service to be done for our suffering friends in Bristol, and it was thought convenient that three of the city and three of the country should go with the said sufferers, and desire the kindness of Lord Hide to present them to the king. The three friends for the country were Charles Lloyd, Thomas Wynne, and myself; for the city, George Whitehead, Alexander Parker, and one more. Our friend George Whitehead told me that our countryman, Sir Lionel Jenkin, secretary of state, was so cross and ill-humoured, that when the king was inclined to moderation and tenderness to suffering friends, he often stopped and hindered the relief intended them. When we went to Whitehall, we waited a long time before we could speak with them, they being upon a committee a considerable time; but we had sent in by the door-keeper to acquaint Lord Hide that we were there, and in time they went for us in. The secretary looked grim upon us. I went to Lord Hide, and acknowledged his kindness for his letter on my behalf to the bishop. He told me that I should tell the bishop there would be liberty of conscience in England. I told him, I did say so, and did believe it would be so in God's time. Secretary Jenkin spoke in a scornful manner, and asked me what was Welch for a Quaker, I answered him Crynur Crynwyr, it being the singular and plural number. But the secretary said, we had no Welch for it, for there were no Quakers in the Romans' days. My friend Charles Lloyd answered, 'If thou didst ask my friend the question aright, he had answered thee right, for there is English, Welsh, Latin, Greek, and Hebrew for a Quaker.' In the secretary said, 'Sir, I understand Welch poorly well, and English and Latin and Greek; but if you go to your Hebrew, I know not what to say to you.' I left my friend C. Lloyd to engage with this peevish countryman, and presented Lord Hide with a long list of names of men, women, and children, in their several prisons at Bristol. I desired him to be so kind as to present our sufferers to the king, which he said he would, and our friend George Whitehead spoke further to him. Then I turned to the secretary, who directed his words to me, and spoke to him thus in Welch:

" Mae yn ddrwg gennif, fod vu o Hiliogaeth yr hen Fritaniaid yr rhai ydderbyniodd y Grefydd Gristianogol yn gyntaf yd Loeger yn erbyn yr rhai sydd gwedi derbyn y wir Gristianogol Grefydd yr awr hon."

"The English is thus:

"I am sorry that one of the stock of the ancient Britons, who first received the christian faith in England, should be against those who have received the true Christian faith in this day."

"He replied, He was not against our friends, but he said our friends gave their votes for the election of parliament men that were against the king's interest. I told him, It was our birthright, as we were freeholders and Burgesses, to elect men qualified to serve both the king and country, but how they were corrupted, when they came within these walls, I knew not. The secretary would have engaged farther with me in dispute about religion. I told him he was an ancient man, and that they had been a long time there upon their business, and if he would be pleased to dismiss us then, and appoint what time we should some morning wait upon him, we would, if he pleased, spend an hour or two with him in discourse about religion. Upon which he took off his hat, and thanked me kindly for my civility; but we heard no more of him about the dispute. Upon the whole, our friend G. Whitehead told me he was more moderate to friends afterwards than he had been before. The number of prisoners in the list delivered to Lord Hide to be presented to the king amounted to in both prisons one hundred and thirty-nine, of which there were eighteen aged women from sixty and upwards, and eight children. In the latter end of the list it was said, 'Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy.'"

General Northey married a second time, and has children likewise by that marriage. He assumed, by sign manual, 8th May, 1799, the surname and arms of HOPKINS upon inheriting the estates of his maternal ancestors.

Lineage.

This family, through both lines, NORTHEY and HOPKINS,* establishes antiquity and eminence—through both, it has enjoyed for a long series of years parliamentary rank—through both it has served a succession of monarchs—through both acquired civic and military distinction. In the sanguinary wars of York and Lancaster, which for thirty years at least devastated the fair fields of England, and with ruthless impartiality swept away the chief adherents of both houses, the family of Hopkyns is traditionally stated to have taken a prominent part, and to have experienced the inevitable consequences—incarceration, decapitation, and confiscation: to pass, however, from rumour to record, we find soon after the pacification of the kingdom, (22 and 23 EDWARD IV.) one of its members,

WILLIAM HOPKINS, chosen by the men of Coventry to preside over their city, then a place of consideration. This William was the father of three sons,

WILLIAM, his heir.

Richard, sheriff of Coventry in 1554.

Nicholas, sheriff of Coventry in 1561.

The eldest,

WILLIAM HOPKYNs, sheriff of Coventry in 1557, and mayor in 1564, had been persecuted for heresy in 1554. He wedded Agnes, daughter of Thomas Riley, mayor of Coventry, and had a son and successor,

RICHARD HOPKYNs, who had two sons, SAMPSON, his heir, and William, proprietor of the lordship of Shortley, 21 JAMES I. The elder, SAMPSON HOPKYNs, mayor of Coventry in 1609, represented that city in parliament in the 12 and 18 JAMES I. He d. in 1622, leaving by Jane, his wife, three sons and one daughter, viz.

Thomas-Francis-Henry, lieutenant-colonel 25th regiment, m. Elizabeth, daughter of James Button, esq. and dying in 1803, left a son, the present SIR THOMAS GOODRICKE, bart. of Ribston.

* The family of Button, whose progenitor, SIR WALTER DE BUTTON, received the honour of knighthood from HENRY III. flourished for a long succession of generations in the county of Hants, maintaining a leading influence among the landed proprietors of that shire, and intermarrying with many distinguished houses.

Sir Richard, who was a faithful servant of King CHARLES I. and enjoyed the confidence of that unhappy prince in an eminent degree, as a series of letters addressed to him by the king in his majesty's extremity, still extant, and in the possession of the family, fully attests, d. at Lymington, in Hampshire, and was buried there in 1682. He was s. by his elder son, Mary, dau. of Mr. Alderman Johnson, and sister of Lady Hale, by whom he had a son, EDWARD, his heir, and a daughter, Mary. Mr. Hopkins was a person of considerable importance in the time of JAMES II. and from the following facts mentioned by his son, the Right Hon. Edward Hopkins, was an active opponent of the court, and promoter of the revolution.

"In the year 1607," says Edward Hopkins, "whilst the queen was at Bath (the occasion of which journey thither the year following, gave such a suspicion of indirect practices to the nation, by the birth of the pretender) King JAMES made a progress through a part of the kingdom, and lay at my father's house, where, the morning after his arrival, public mass was said in the great dining room, where I was present at the late celebration of it, my age screening from any observation in my behaviour by those who attended the service. The next act of devotion was touching for the king's evil, by his majesty, in our great church; the king was very gracious to my father, though he had been some time before (during Monmouth's rebellion†) distinguished as a malig-

Coventry, 9th September, 1685.

My Lord,—The Duke of Monmouth's coming here gives us this occasion to present your lordship with this account following, of the manner of his reception, and what past thereupon; and first we must crave leave to begin at Saturday, the 2d instant, which morning, at the post house in this city, was the Lord Colchester, who then bespoke fourteen post horses for his grace his use, to be ready on Fryday morning, the 8th of this instant September. In order to his grace his reception, a feast was prepared, and was on Thursday last at the Starre Inn, in this city, where most or all of the most considerable dissenters dined, and stayed his grace his coming, being introduced by Mr. Hopkins our late burress, who went to Dunventry to meet him, and brought him to town about nine at night, the bells then ringing and some bonfires lighted in his way. He slighted at nant, disarmed and confined to his house, at the same time the prisons being filled with those of lesser rank. It was intimated to my father by some of the principal lords of the court, that the king was disposed to shew him some public mark of favor, but he with dutifulness and decency declined."

"At the latter end of the year 1688, the Prince of Orange landing in the west, and Prince George of Denmark going to him, his Princess, Anne, the king's youngest daughter, was put under confinement at St. James's, from which place, having concerted measures with Dr. Compton, Bishop of London, and others, she made her escape in the middle of the night, and coaches being provided and stationed in a proper place without one of the gates of the city, she made long journeys, taking no more rest than was absolutely necessary till she reached Nottingham, there she was joined by Lord Devonshire, many other lords and gentlemen of note, of those counties who had not the opportunity to appear in arms for the Prince of Orange. Her Royal Highness's numbers much increasing, and this body being chiefly under the command of Lord Devonshire and the Bishop of London, she made but a short stay at Nottingham, and from thence came to Coventry to my father's house, where, during her sojourn part of three days, she received an account the Starre, where the partie were met, the chiefe of them attended him in his chamber, where, looking about and seeing no other gentlemen, his grace arote doune and said little more than that he thought there had bin some gentlemen in this city. Soone after his arrivall, the other streets were filled with bonfires, and perticularly one beginning at the cross, which Alderman Nathaniell Harriman perceiving, went and threw doune the fugotts, dispersing the company, charging them in the king's name peaceably to depart; but they soon rallied, and began a second bonfire lower in the same street, which the said alderman likewise put out, and commanded them againe to depart in peace, but they flocked about him, shouting, a Monmouth — no Yorke! and some offered violence to him, but he defended himselfe so that he had not much hurt, so likewise a third and fourth fire he extinguishd. It so happened that Mr. Maior was not at home till eleven at night, when hearing of this disorder, he came to the alderman at the cross, where there was a fire and rabble, whom they disperet.

We must not omit to tell your lordship, that Wednesday last being our councill-house day, some members thereof moved the maior that an entertainment might be ordered in the name of the corporation for his grace, but Mr. Maior refused, as also did some of his brethren, so nothing was done. Nevertheless, on Thursday night, those other, (viz.) Alderman Laylour, Alderman Francis Harriman, Alderman Lapworth, Mr. Owen, and Mr. Laurence, who is in nomination for the ensuing maior, ordered a city officer to bring a present of wine, by express that the king, who was before fled from Salisbury Plain to London, had abandoned the city upon the Prince of Orange marching towards it, as his majesty did afterwards out of the kingdom. Upon this Princess Anne set forward for London, and that very night the false, but memorable, alarm, which was at the same time spread all over the kingdom, reached us, that the king's Irish army of papists was destroying all by fire and sword, and such was the panick that every one believed they were at the next town. The confusion was so visible in every countenance, that it was no wonder I had the most dreadful apprehensions, and it was by the whole family increased, by my father's being absent, for he was gone to escort the princess a day or two on her journey to London."

He d. 1st February, 1707, in the sixty-eighth year of his age, and his widow, 13th October, 1711. Both are interred in St. Michael's church, Coventry. Their son and heir,

The RIGHT HON. EDWARD HOPKINS, was M. P. for Coventry, temp. WILLIAM III. and QUEEN ANNE, and secretary of state for Ireland. This distinguished statesman m. Anna-Maria, dau. and co-heir (with her sister, Charlotte, the wife of — Luther, esq. of Myles's, in Essex, see p. 10) of Hugh Chamberlien, M. which they there presented his grace with. After which, they, without the maior's consent, employed an officer to summon the whole body of the councill-house, to be ready at the maior's parlour by nine of the clock next morning, but there appeared only the persons above said and two or three more. Mr. Hopkins and his brother attended his grace to the parlour at the tyme, who rode on his post mare, two post boys tooting their horns before him; Sir Thomas Armstrong and Mr. Roe following his grace, and the rabble shouting, a Monmouth — no Yorke; his grace alighted at the parlour, where they entertained him with wine, but stayed little, so mounted again and went on his journey, the rabble shouting him to the townes end. Mr. Maior and his loyall brethren resolve to enquire into the ryot, and punish such offenders as shall be found guilty, as farr as the law will beare.

This is the truth, which we thought convenient to present to your lordship, to confront all fals reports, craving leave to subscribe ourselves, his majesty's loyall subjects and deputed leiftenants, and,

John Dugdale.

The BACONS of Friston were a distinguished branch of the great house of BACON, and derived, in lineal descent, from the suite were subsequently placed by the Pretender.

"It was near two months after the arrival of my Lord Portland, before he made his public entry, which was most magnificent. The procession was from the hotel Rambouillet to the Hotel des Ambassadeurs, where his excellency, and all of us of his suite, were sumptuously treated at the King of France's expense, for three days. It happening in the time of Lent, to observe strictly the ordinances of holy church, no flesh was allowed. It was wonderful to see such a number and such a variety of dishes without it, the height of French cookery. Several different soups, fricays, and ragouts of fish, so disguised as might well deceive either the eye or the pallet.

"I never yet in one day, nor ever can again see such a number of people together, as lined the streets of Paris the day of the entry. The procession had near three miles to make. The windows were taken away, and as the streets are regular and the houses of several stories, it was an agreeable sight to see, upon turning into a street, so many rows like garlands appearing, the houses being mostly filled by ladies. The gentlemen were mostly in, upon, or about the coaches, of which there were a continued line on each side of the streets, near the houses.

"The ambassador had five or six coaches of his own, of great price and exquisite taste, though the French thought they had not enough, the appearance of state not having sufficient of that gawdiness, gilding, and carving on the outsides, which they affect on such occasions; not considering that all was of a-piece, both without and within, magnificent with elegance, and costly, both as to the painting, carving, gold lace, fringe, &c.

"In the cortage there was one magnificent chariot, drawn by a set of fine Napolitan horses, of a lively grey colour, beautiful creatures, and highly managed; their harness, reins, and ribbons on their manes were orange colour, which had an agreeable effect. His excellency made a present afterwards of these horses, of which I think he had eight, to the King of France.

"A matter happened a little before the entry, which caused a small fracas, and embarrassed the ambassador. Before that minister's coaches there are those of the French ministers, and of all the princes and princesses of the blood (then very numerous), to attend the entries. A very few days before, a list appeared at the hotel, allotting us all to the coaches we were to be in, to avoid confusion, in which it appeared that some Dutch of the first quality, and two or three deputies from the principality of Orange, had provision made for them. This, as it was an English embassy, gave an alarm, and caused a great dispute. A meeting hereupon was appointed that evening, at a tavern, when the greater part attended. I own I was one of the number of the mutineers. It was then resolved that we could not assist at the entry unless this matter was rectified, and afterwards application was made to Mr. Prior, to acquaint his excellence therewith, in the most respectful manner. Satisfaction was given, how much soever against the grain, but it was impossible to adhere to so wrong a judged scheme, so that we saw those gentlemen that day not as actors but spectators.

"There was another difficulty with respect to the Duke of Argyle, then, in his father's lifetime, Lord Lorne: he objected to the rank given him in company with our lords (for the union was not then made); he claimed his place, however, according to the antientness of his family, urging that the embassy was from Scotland as well as from England, the King being King of both. The matter was too nice and delicate for my lord ambassador to decide in favour of his claim, so he declined to attend.

"The regard paid to King WILLIAM's first embassy was so great, the orders given were so positive from the court of Versailles to the people of that of St. Germain's not to insult the English, and they were so well observed, that no disorder happened, though we daily met in the same coffee-house, which was the resort of all English gentlemen: the common civility of salutes passed, but very few of us mixed with them at the same tables or in conversation.

"King JAMES's Queen came, according to her custom, to perform her devotions and pass the holy week at the Convent of Nuns, at Charlott, near Paris, whither one day the pretended Prince of Wales came to dine with her, of which I was advertised by one of their court, who had married my aunt, the widow Lady Carteret, sister to my mother. I embraced this opportunity of satisfying the curiosity I had to see a person I had from his birth heard, and was likely to hear so much talk of, since I might view him, as in-cognito, upon his taking coach. I took a friend with me, and we found several English and others there, who had received the same notice, and who had the same curiosity.

An incident happened there which put several of us under an unhappy dilemma, either of a seeming affront to him, which was not desirable nor becoming, or else to do an act both contrary to the laws of our country, and to our own principles. We were (being of different nations) fifty or sixty in number, ranged in a long and spacious entry, through which he was to pass to take coach. Upon his coming out of the door of the convent, attended by the Earl of Melfort, one of their chief ministers, they had not gone many steps before that lord, seeing two English gentlemen of good families and considerable estates in the entry, stopped the pretended Prince, and in a manner presented them to him. Whatever their inclinations might be, it drew them into a difficulty, but upon this surprise they kissed his hand. We who were nearer to the court-yard made our retreat with some precipitation, choosing rather to be liable to their observation of it, than to run the risk of suffering under the like embarrassment, not knowing but as Englishmen, the gracious compliment might have been offered to us all. This was an egregious folly in Melfort, as my uncle afterwards allowed and blamed him for it, since it exposed these gentlemen, whose inclinations we knew were towards that court, and their visits to the ambassador were only such as decency required: however this faux pas discovered that they had paid court to and were acquainted with Melfort, which otherwise might still have been a secret. I cannot but observe that I afterwards sat in parliament with one of these persons several years, being a knight of a great shire, and chose by the high church for the security of the Protestant religion. The next morning Mr. Prior came into my chamber and asked me how I had slept after committing treason. I said I was guilty of none. Now, says he, you will pretend that you did not kiss hands at Charlott? I answered with a smile, that I found he had good intelligence. Well, says he, I know you did not, but such did; can you deny it? If you know it I need not turn informer, and shall be mute upon these interrogatories. Yes, says he, I know who did, and the King will know it as soon as the next courier gets to London. In a court of beggars a minister can never want spies, and there was nothing done at St. Germain's that was long a secret."

Mr. Hopkins had afterwards the high honour of accompanying the ambassador on a visit to the Prince of Conde, at Chantilly, and describes several days sojourn there.* He d. 17th January, 1735-6, in the 62nd year of his age; his widow survived him 36 years, and d. 9th February, 1768. FORTESCUE, OF DROMISKEN AND RAVENSDALE PARK.

FORTESCUE, THOMAS, esq. of Dromisken Castle and Ravensdale Park, both in the county of Louth, b. 9th March, 1815, succeeded to the representation of the family upon the demise of his father, the late Colonel Chichester Fortescue, and to the estates of the Lords Clermont at the decease in 1833 of Sir Harry Goodricke.

Lineage.

This family, influential both in England and in Ireland, deduces its origin from Sir RICHARD LE FORTE, a gallant soldier in the army of the CONQUEROR, who is said to have protected his royal master at the celebrated battle of Hastings by bearing a stout shield before him; from which circumstance, the French word "Escue" (a shield) was added to the original surname of "Forte," and thus gave FORTESCUE. From this warrior, through a long line of eminent personages, a direct male descent is brought down to the present period, but as we have given in vol. ii. p. 541—547, when detailing the Fortescues of Fallapit and of Buckland Filleigh, a lengthened narrative, it will now suffice to refer thereto, and to continue the history of the branch of the family which settled in Ireland, and attained such importance in that part of the empire.

SIR FAITHFUL FORTESCUE,* son of John Fortescue, esq. of Buckland Filleigh, in the county of Devon, by Susanna, his second wife, daughter of Sir John Chichester, knt. of Raleigh (see vol. ii. p. 546), went over to Ireland in the beginning of the reign of JAMES I. and commanded a regiment of foot there under his uncle, the lord deputy, Sir Arthur Chichester, by whom he was knighted, and appointed 14th November, 1606, jointly with Roger Langford, esq. governor of Carrickfergus. He acquired also considerable landed possessions, including Dromisken Castle, lying ten miles from Drogheda, with broad and fertile lands in the counties of Louth, Down, and Antrim. During the subsequent civil conflicts of the reign of CHARLES I. Sir Faithful Fortescue rendered essential service to his ill-fated master, and after the disastrous battle of Worcester, where with his regiment he prominently distinguished himself, retired to the continent with CHARLES II. After the Restoration he enjoyed in an eminent degree the royal favour, and was made a gentleman of the privy chamber to his majesty. Sir Faithful m. the Hon. Anne Moore, second daughter of Gerald, Viscount Drogheda, and by her, who d. 5th September, 1634, had issue,

Lineage.

The HEBERS take their name from a place in Craven called Haybergh, where the earliest of the family are supposed to have risen. The oldest tradition refers to ERNULPHUS DE HAYBURGH, of Saxon descent, living towards the end of the twelfth century at Milnethorpe, in the parish of Sandale. His descendants seem to have continued there as gentlemen of very small fortune for six generations, intermarrying with respectable families in the north of England.

In 1461,

THOMAS HEIBIRE, gent. is mentioned by Dodsworth, he lived at Adwalton in Craven in 1463. His brother Oswald had a commission in the Duke of York's army, and was slain at the battle of Wakefield. Thomas died at Keytheley, in 1469, and was s. by his son,

His name appears in the return of the principal gentlemen of the West Riding at the visitation in 1585, when he entered his pedigree.* He was proprietor of the estates of West and East Marton, lord of the manor, and patron of the advowson. He purchased of his kinsman, Henry d'Arcy, esq. in the seventh year of Elizabeth, the estate and manor of STAINTON, and was possessed of considerable landed property in Hartlington, Yargrave, Ayrton, Skipton, Wakefield, and Long Preston. He married, in 1722, Elizabeth, eldest daughter of John Atherton, of Atherton and Beausey, in Lancashire, and heiress (through her mother, Elizabeth Cholmondeley, and her grandmother, Elizabeth Vernon,) to the manors and estates of her ancestor, Sir HENRY VERNON, bart. of Hodnet. very extensive half-timbered mansion, having had cloisters decorated with carved oak, and armorial bearings. In the entrance hall is a shield empannelled, containing the Vernon arms with twenty-four quarterings, of the date of 1599, united with the Needham arms in ten quarterings. A little to the east of the hall on an eminence still called the "Castle Hill," surrounded by a moat, are the remains of a tower, the first residence and place of defence belonging to Odo de Hodnet. The high grounds to the west, from which is a beautiful and extensive prospect, are called "The Parks," interspersed with dingles and fine old timber, and oaks of unusual growth. According to Speed's earliest maps, Hodnet Park was of very considerable size in the fifteenth and to the eighteenth century. No deer have been kept since the death of Sir Richard Vernon in 1722. Family of Hodnet.

HODNET, according to Camden, belonged to a knightly family of that name, of whom the first was placed there as a reward for his services, by WILLIAM the Conqueror, in whose army he was a general. He is styled ODO DU HODENET, and, in 1116, was succeeded by his son, BALDWIN DE HODENET,* who held the manor and estate as lieutenant and senescal to Roger de Montgomery. To his successor, ODO DE HODNET, this estate, manor, and free warren, were confirmed by HENRY I. in 1134, by a very ancient deed, still in the possession of the family, bearing the great seal and the signature of HENRY I. surnamed "Beauclerc." His eldest son,

Sir Harris is the author of many valuable works connected with the History and Peerage of England. A late number of the Quarterly Review (April, 1836), in its comments on one of these, "The Scrope and Grosvenor Roll," thus concludes its remarks: "Meantime his (Sir Harris Nicolas's) efforts for the reform of the Society of Antiquaries and the Record Commission, in which last he is, we hope, still most usefully engaged—an Augean stable requiring the labours of such an Hercules—have been enough alone to afford full occupation to any ordinary man, in addition to his professional engagements. And this indefatigable antiquary and historian, whose writings are no less masterly and profound, than they are numerous and interesting, was, we believe, a lieutenant of the navy at the close of the war!"

v. Charles-Henry, b. 15th April, 1801, married and has issue.

Captain Nicolas, who served throughout the American War, retired in the year 1814 from the royal navy with the rank of commander.

Lineage.

The family of NICOLAS, of CORNWALL, was originally of BRITTANY, in which province their ancestors possessed the Seigneuries of KERVIZIQU, near LANNION; of QUINQUISALOU, near CARHAIN; of PLESSIX, of LA TOUCHE, of CLAYE, and of CHAMPS-GÉRAULT in the vicinity of RENNES; and also of CLERMONT, near NANTES; and they were ennobled before the 14th century.

The representative of the second branch, whose immediate ancestor is stated to be Jean Nicolas Seigneur des Champs-Gérault, being of the protestant faith, emigrated from France on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, in 1685, and settled at Looe, in Cornwall, where he became the founder of that part of this ancient family now domiciled in England.

The following abridged statement of their genealogy, is extracted from the translation of a certified pedigree, received from the "Bureau de la Noblesse," at Paris, soon after the peace; and the statements contained in this document have been, in all the principal points, most satisfactorily confirmed by subsequent researches in the archives of Rennes, of Lannion, of Cartraix, and other places in Brittany, near to which the ancestors of the present family formerly resided. It is likewise partly taken from the 15th volume of the "Nobiliaire Universel de France," in which work upon the ancient French Nobility, the pedigree of Nicolas is, in the last edition, continued down to the existing branch in England, which it includes.

The pedigree commences with Oliver Nicolas, Chevalier, mentioned in the year, 1336, with the title of "Messire," (which style was only applied to persons of noble descent), and who distinguished himself in the wars of his time; his son, Jean Nicolas, Seigneur de Kervizion, was one of the Lords of Brittany, who ratified the treaty of peace of Guerrande, concluded between CHARLES V. of France, and the Duke of Brittany, on the 28th April, 1381.

Jean Nicolas's fifth lineal descendant was YVOX NICOLAS, Seigneur de Kervizion, de Quinquisalion, and la Touche, in 1543; whose grandson, Jean Nicolas, Seigneur de Kervizion, de la Touche, &c. obtained, in the year 1614, letters of recognizance of the Nobility of his Extraction. He married Jeanne Martin, Dame des Champs-Gérault. Their son, Jean Nicolas, Seigneur des Champs-Gérault, &c. was counsellor in the court-of accounts at Rennes. He married Nicole le Vayer, Dame de Claye, near Rennes. Their only child, Jeanne Nicolas, Chevalier, Seigneur, de Claye, des Champs-Gérault, de la Touche, de Plessix, &c. was first president of the court of requests of Brittany: by his marriage with the Marquise Pepin-du-Frettay, he had three sons; the eldest, Germain, Seigneure de Claye, married Renée de Chenu, daughter and heiress of René de Chenu, Seigneur de Clermont, de Chenu, &c. near Nantes; gentleman of the bed-chamber to the Prince of Conde. This branch became extinct in the male line, in 1725, when the only daughter and heiress of Germain Nicolas, Seigneur de Claye, and de Clermont, married the Marquis de la Bourdonnaye, Seigneur de Liré; their granddaughter and representative is the present Vicomtesse D'Allonville, Dame de Claye, wife of the Vicomte D'Allonville, late one of the aides-de-camp of the Dauphin.

JEAN NICOLAS, the second son, Chevalier, des Champs-Gérault, was with his brother, Germaine Nicolas, Seigneure de Claye, on the reformation of the nobility of Brittany, in 1669, recognized noblesse of an ancient extraction, and of the quality of Chevaliers, by an act of the chamber of reformation of Brittany, on the 20th August, 1669. Jean Nicolas married Marie Renée de Rosmadec, daughter of Sebastian, Marquis de Rosmadec, Count de Chapelles, Baron de Molac, de Juch, de Penhoët, &c. Lieutenant du Roi of the Province of Brittany, and Governor of Nantes; by Renée de Kergournadech de Kercoent; and by her had a son,

ABEL NICOLAS, who, being of the protestant faith, emigrated from Brittany on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685, and settled at Looe, in Cornwall. He had two sons and a daughter, namely, Paul, James, and Renée. Having lost his estates in thus exiling himself from his hereditary possessions, he established himself at Looe as a merchant. His eldest son,

PAUL NICOLAS, an alderman of the borough of East Looe, married Elizabeth Mellow, and had one child,

PAUL NICOLAS, (the name at this period, 1760, became corrupted to the English mode of writing the christian name of Nicholas, but the ancient manner of spelling it was resumed by Captain Toup Nicolas, and his brothers, with permission, on obtaining the pedigree of their ancestry from France,) an alderman of both the boroughs of East and West Looe, who married Martha Harris, daughter and co-heiress of Nicholas Harris, of East Looe, a younger brother of John Harris, esq. of Manadan, in the county of Devon, and by her had three sons,

- i. PAUL-HARRIS, an alderman of East Looe, who died in 1788, leaving a son, Nicholas-Harris, who died in 1806, captain of the royal artillery.
- ii. Nicholas-Harris, b. in 1755, captain in the 44th regiment, who served with reputation in the American war, and was severely wounded at Bunker's Hill. About the year 1788, he sold out of the army, and in 1799 became major of the Royal Cornwall Fencible Dragoons. He d. s. p. in 1816.

sentative of the family.

Previous to obtaining the attested docutheir ancestors, the representative of the family in England, Captain John-Harris Nicolas, received a grant of arms from the Heralds' College, in the year 1816; as follows:

"Gironny of eight, argent and azure, an eagle displayed ermine: On a chief, wavy (in allusion to the services of Captain Nicolas, and Captain Toup Nicolas) ermine, a trident, or, surmounted in saltire of a flag-laurel, vert."

vated, ermine, each charged with a cross,

And, on the 16th of October, 1816, Captain Toup Nicolas received the following augmentation to the above crest: "The word 'PILOT,' inscribed on the rim of the naval crown, to be borne by him and his descendants, in commemoration of his distinguished services in his majesty's sloop Pilot, on the East and West coasts of Calabria, during the years 1810, 1811, and 1812; and also in allusion to the gallant action fought near Toulon, between his majesty's said sloop, and the French national ship La Legère, of twenty-eight guns, and three hundred men, on the 17th of June, 1815."

Lineage.

The family of WERE, or, as it was formerly spelt, WEARE, is of great antiquity in the counties of Devon and Somerset. Tradition states, that their original name was GIFFARD, a younger branch, it is represented, of the GIFFARDS of BRIGHTLEY, and HALSWORTHY; and that they took the name of WEARE only, upon inheriting that part of the property of the house of GIFFARD called WEARE-GIFFARD; whereupon, as was the custom at that period, they assumed different arms. How far this statement is correct, it is impossible at this distant date to establish, but these facts have been asserted by authorities entitled to consideration. Certain it is, however, that the family of WEARE, or, as now spelt, WERE, is of long standing in Somersetshire, as well as in Devonshire, and the arms annexed have been used by the existing branch, whose genealogy we now give, for many generations, as various engravings of them on old seals, plate, &c. still in possession of its different members, fully confirm. Those arms are to be found in the third edition of "Guillim's Heraldry," published in 1638, and again in the edition published in 1679, wherein it is stated, at page 206, "He beareth, argent, on a bend vert, between six cross crosslets fitché, gules, three croysiers, or, by the name of Weare, of Devon, and is quartered by Fortescue of Filley," (the ancestor of the present Earl Fortescue.) "This coat standeth in Weare church in com: prædict. The estate of Weare-Giffard, it is believed, passed to the family of Deynsell, by the marriage of an heiress of the house of Weare, between the years 1440 and 1450, and it was carried to that of Fortescue about the year 1480, by the heiress of Deynsell. In a collection of abstracts of early charters in the library of Sir Richard Phillips, bart. there is a deed relating to the family of Weare, of the concluding part of which the following is a correct translation:

"This Indenture made at Weare-Giffard, between WILLIAM DE SALLEM
" on the one part, and WILLIAM
" WEARE, Lord of Weare-Giffard, on " the other part,
" anno 13, Henry IV." (1411)

L. S. signed, "WILL: WEARE."

The arms attached to this deed are precisely the same as those now used by the family as herein described, but the crest, instead of being a demi lion, holding a cross crosslet, fitché, is a basket of fish. We are unable at this moment to go further back with the genealogy, than to

THOMAS WERE, eldest surviving son of Robert Weare, esq. of Sampford Arundell, in the county of Devon, who, it appears, spelt his name in the ancient style.

THOMAS WEARE,* his son, however, wrote it in the modern mode, which has been continued by his descendants. He resided at Wellington in the beginning of the last century, and was possessed of the lands of "Great and Little Sowden," "the West Leigh Estates," "Old Baums," "Escotts," "Osmonds," "Penslade," and other property in the county of Devon; together with the manor of "Runnington," "Landcox," "Rockwell-Green," "Perry-Elm," "Jurston," and other estates in the county of Somerset. He married about the year 1716, Elizabeth, daughter of Peter Berry, esq. and had issue eight sons, between whom he divided his different estates, and three daughters, viz.

1. ROBERT, of Runnington Manor, of whom presently.

* Thomas Were's second brother was Peter Were, esq. of Sampford Arundel and Were's Cot, near Wellington, whose son Ellis was a partner in the firm of Curtis, Were, Roberts and Co. bankers in London. Ellis's descendants are Thomas, of Were's Cot, and Sampford Arundel, who is married and has seven children, Robert, Peter, and Joseph.

Thomas Were had also one sister, Elizabeth, who m. George Fox, of Perran, near Falmouth.

The greater part of the different branches of the family of Were, together with most of those of their several alliances, have for many generations belonged to the Society of Friends, of which highly respectable sect, very many of them still are members.

Another branch of the ancient family of Were became settled in the vicinity of Plymouth about the year 1700, by a marriage with Joan, daughter and at length sole heir of John Reid, esq. of Burrington, in Devonshire. The son of this marriage, John Were, esq. of Burrington, who died in 1778, left the whole of his property to his only child and heiress Mary, who wedded Richard Hall Clarke, esq. of Bridwell House, in Devonshire, and had issue,

* * * There is another branch of the family which still retain the original orthography of the name, and were formerly possessed of Manox and Giddis Court, in Herefordshire. They also appear to have used the arms as annexed, for many generations, as is to be seen on various old monuments in the parish church of Goodrick. Of this branch the present representative is Lieutenant-colonel THOMAS WEARE, of Hampton Bishop, in the county of Hereford, knight of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, and a magistrate for the said county, (at present commanding the provisional battalion at Chatham,) only son of the late Rev. Thomas Weare, of Jesus College, Oxford, who resided, and was a distinguished preacher, in that university for many years, and descended from the Weares of Manox, and Giddis Court, in the county of Hereford; where it appears, by reference to deeds, &c. they were residing previously to the year 1611.

Lieutenant-colonel Weare married Ann, daughter of the late John Pugh, esq. of Lowes, Radnorshire, and has two sons and one daughter, Thomas-William Weare, B.A. one of the Westminster students of Christ Church College, Oxford; Henry Edwin Weare, and Charlotte-Maria Weare.

Manox and Giddis Court, in Herefordshire, having descended to a female branch of the elder son, has since passed from the family by sale.

LUCAS, OF CASTLE SHANE.

LUCAS, EDWARD, esq. of Castle Shane, in the county of Monaghan, b. 27th September, 1787, m. Anne, daughter of William Ruxton, esq. of Ardee House, in the county of Louth, formerly Member for Ardee, in the Parliament of Ireland, and has issue,

Mr. Lucas succeeded his father in 1796, and represents the county of Monaghan in parliament. He is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant, and has served the office of sheriff.

Lineage.

In the early part of the 17th century, several members of the Lucas family migrated from England and settled in the sister island, where their descendants still remain, in the counties of Clare, Cork, King's County, and Monaghan. In the last named they acquired, partly by purchase and partly by royal grant, considerable estates, which were erected into a manor by patent of CHARLES II., in 1683, "to be called the manor of Castle Shane," and the principal part of which has ever since continued in the family.

O'MULLOY,

Standard-Bearer to the King in Ireland.

MULLOY, COOTE, esq. of Hughstown, in the county of Roscommon, chief and representative of the ancient Milesian family of O'Mulloy, "Standard Bearers to the Crowne of England in Ireland," m. in 1799, Mary, eldest daughter of William Lloyd, esq. of Rockville, in the same county, and has issue,

COOTE, in holy orders, who wedded Alicia, eldest dau. of the late Robert King Duke, esq. of New Park, in the county of Sligo, and has two sons, COOTE.

Robert.

William-James.

Mary.

Hessy.

Margaret.

Mr. Mulloy succeeded his father in 1825. He is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Roscommon.

Lineage.

The family of O'Mulloy,* of acknowledged Milesian descent, enjoys the hereditary honor of standard-bearer to the crown of England in Ireland. It derives from

* The following are some curious particulars relative to the early members of the family.

Upon the death of O'Hethe, Girald Barry (commonly called Cambrensis, archdeacon of St. David's) having refused the see (that of Ferns) from John, Earl of Morton (afterwards king), Albin O'Mulloy was elected. He was first a monk, and afterwards Abbot of Baltinglass, and appears to have been a zealous but intemperate man. He had a very angry dispute with Cambrensis in Mid-lent 1185. It was as follows:

John Comin (the Ai bishop) having convened a synod in Christchurch, preached himself the first day on the Sacraments. On the second day, Albin O'Mulloy (Abbot of Baltinglass, afterwards Bishop of Ferns) preached on clerical strictness of morals; whereon he inveighed bitterly against the English clergy, who came into Ireland, and by their evil examples had vitiated the probity and innocence of the clergy of Ireland, which drew upon him Cambrensis the moment he had ended.

Albin engaged in a far more serious and reasonable contest with William Marshal, Earl of Pembroke, who had forcibly dispossessed him of two manors belonging to his bishoprick. The earl being contumacious died under excommunication, and in 1220 the bishop went to London to complain of the injury done to the church. The king commanded him to go to the earl's tomb and absolve him, and promised he would endeavour to obtain him satisfaction from the young Earl William.

Whereupon the bishop, accompanied by the king, (HENRY III) went to the grave, and said, "O William, that here liest wrapped in the bonds of excommunication, if what thou hast injuriously taken be restored by the king, or thy heirs, or thy friends, with competent satisfaction, I absolve thee; otherwise, I ratify the sentence; that being wrapped in thy sins, thou mayest remain damned for ever!"

O'NIALL, of the nine hostages, MONARCH OF ALL IRELAND, A. D. 371, characterized as "one of the most gallant of all the princes of the Milesian race."

The king was displeased with the rigour of the bishop, but could not prevail with the young earl to restore the manors. The young earl and his four brothers died afterwards, without issue male, and the superstitious people thought it to be the effect of the excommunication. Our prelate died at an advanced age about the close of the year 1222, having governed the see of Ferns thirty-six years.

Curious circumstances attending the election of two knights of the shire, to serve in parliament for the King's County, which election took place 20th April, 1613.

Desiderata Curiosa Hibernica, vol. i. p. 349.

The freeholders assembled in Philipstown to elect knights, and some of the Irish having consulted together the same morning, attended the sheriff to the shire-house, between eight and nine o'clock, where the writ being read, Sir Francis Rushe, and Sir Adam Loftus, (ancestor of the first Viscounts Ely), were propounded by some of the freeholders as the fittest men to be elected. But Philip O'Dagan delivered to the sheriff two several lists of names in paper, who (he said) had given their names for "Sir John Mac Coughlan and Callagh O'Mulloy," whom they had chosen already, and would have none others; and upon delivering the list, they cried out "Mac Coughlan and O'Mulloy!" The other side, to the number of sixteen, gave their votes publicly for Sir F. Rushe and Sir A. Loftus. The under-sheriff received the papers, and made up the indentures for Mac Coughlan and O'Mulloy, (having the greatest number of names in the list), which indentures were accepted by the high-sheriff; yet, notwith-

Niall, whose designation "of the nine hostages" arose from his having nine captive princes at the same time in his keeping, had, with other issue,

EGAN, or OWEN, ancestor of the GREAT O'NIELL, from whom Tir-Owen, or Tyrope.

CONALL GULBANE, progenitor of O'DONNELL, chief of Tyrconnel.

FACHADA, from whom the O'MULLOYS. The Mulloy or O'Mulloy family is consequently of the Heremonean line, and entitled to the distinctive appellation of Hynalls; a title which in Irish history exclusively belongs to the descendants of Niall, the Great, and claims for its possessors the highest station amongst the distinguished families of Ireland.*

The ancient territory of this family, viz. Fercall,† (now comprehending the baronies of English and Ballyboy, in the King's county) was in their possession from the 5th century until long after the invasion of the English in 1179; in fact, until about the year 1641, the period of the great rebellion; for in the proclamation of attainder, which followed the failure of Roger Moore's insurrection, we see enumerated amongst his principal abettors the names of Art. O'Mulloy, of Rathlin Castle, and Owen O'Mulloy, of Clonkeene Castle.‡

In the "Desiderata Curiosa Hibernica," (vol. ii. p. 52.) the territory of Fercall is stated to have been 49,235 acres in extent. A recent writer of high respectability in the "Beauties of Ireland," observes, "that there are still in the King's County some respectable families belonging to the Sept of O'Mulloy, and the ruins of many ancient castles attest their former consequence and dignity." In "Slater's Itinerary," (King's County), as well as in the writer above named, we find the following enumerated, as some of the castles here alluded to:

1. Geslid Castle.
2. Erry Castle (ruins).
3. Lemanagh Castle.
4. Broghill Castle.
5. Rathlin Castle.
6. Clonkeene Castle, &c. &c.

Surnames were first given to distinguish families by Brian Boiroimhe, (the hero of the celebrated battle of Clontarf). The practice was then borrowed by the Germans, French, and Italians.§ The name of Mulloy is derived from the Irish words "Mulluagh ah Loah," i. e. "the front of the battle,"|| and this brave clan, by their unwearied opposition to the English in defence of their hereditary dominions, while a tenable position remained, abundantly proved that they merited the appellation. For a space of 484 years, that is from 1172 (when the English first got possession of the island) to 1557, (the 3rd of PHILIP and MARY), they maintained their independence against the invaders. Indeed, according to Sir James Ware, they were in opposition to the English government at a later period, for soon after the appointment of Sir Henry Sidney, as sole lord justice, we find, to use the words of Sir James,†† "he directed his colours against Arthur O'Mulloy, Lord of Fercally, who harboured rebels and began new factions, and a great part of that country being burned and plundered, he conferred the lordship on Theobald Mulloy, Arthur's brother, who gave his son as a pledge that he should be faithful to the queen." It may have been that peculiar severity was exercised by Sir Henry Sidney against this clan, inasmuch as their chief had, according to the authority of the above-mentioned historian, "sworn allegiance in the preceding year, 1557, to the queen, and given pledges," standing, he returned Sir A. Loftus and Sir F. Raske, alleging "that the greatest number of voices given publicly were for them. In which proceeding on the part of Mac Coughlan and O'Mulloy we find this miscarriage, that two gentlemen whose names were returned in the list, upon the reading, disavowed the same, and subscribed the other part. Some other also confessed he had set his hand to the list after the election was done; and Sir Terence O'Dempsey being absent, gave his voice by proxy to the said Mac Coughlan and O'Mulloy, which O'Mulloy cannot speak English!

This deficiency was not uncommon amongst the signatories of the land, for we read that amongst other articles of agreement by which Munogh O'Brien, Prince of Thomond, obtained (in June, 1543) the favour of King HENRY VIII., who created him in the same year Earl of Thomond, he promised "that he, his heirs, &c. &c. should use the English habit and manner, and to their knowledge, the English language, and to their power, bring up their children in the same." (Vide Lodge's Peerage, London edition, 1734).

And we further read (in the same work, vol. ii. p. 325) that in April, 1576, the Lord Deputy Sidney, in his account to the lords of the council of the state of affairs in the province of Connaught, informs them, that Mac William Ewghier (Sir Richard Bourke, ancestor to the Earls of Mayo, elected Lord Mac William Oughter in 1469) "very willingly came in to him," and "I found him," says he, "very sensible, though wanting the English tongue, yet understanding the Latin," &c. &c.

being caused so to do by Thomas Radcliffe, Earl of Sussex, then lord lieutenant of Ireland. Indeed we are told by Sir James Ware, that fifteen years previously, namely 1541, "almost all the great ones of the Irish extraction did likewise submit themselves to the Lord Deputy St. Leger, and took the oath of allegiance, as O'Carroll, O'Moore, O'Mulloy, O'Conor, &c. &c."

In the "Desiderata Curiosa Hibernica," (p. 63), we find it stated as follows: "The natives to be tied upon a proviso of forfeiture, neither to take upon them any Irish names of seignory, as O'Rooke, O'Mulloy, &c. &c. nor set up, nor assist any to usurp these names;" so jealous were the English of the hereditary claims and dignities by which the Milesian dynasts evidenced the superiority of their rights, over those which the former, as settlers, merely derived from conquest.

In that rare and invaluable MS. entitled, "Annals of the Four Masters," which has never been but partially translated into English, and which is deposited in the library of the Royal Irish Academy, a very curious list is to be found of all the chiefs of the great Milesian families who were entitled to attend the parliament of the whole kingdom in the year 1585. This is a remarkable period in Irish history, no other than a Pale Parliament having been previously held in Ireland. In this list Conall O'Mulloy (the then chief of Fercall) is expressly mentioned. Conall subsequently surrendered his lands to Queen ELIZABETH, and had a re-grant thereof by patent in 1590. A younger son of this ancient Sept.

CAPT. ANTHONY MULLOY (thirty-third in descent from Frachada, son of Niall of the nine hostages, and tenth from Hugh Mor, or Great O'Mulloy, lord of the territory of Fercall, chief of his name) emigrated to the county of Roscommon in the early part of ELIZABETH'S reign, and d. 20th July, 1603. Tradition affirms that Capt. Anthony Mulloy was sent into Connaught with powers but little inferior to those of the president of that province, and he is sometimes erroneously mentioned as the president himself. It is likely he was provost marshal, as he is constantly depicted in the most sanguinary colours. This office was some years after held by Sir Charles Coote, father of the first Earl of Mountrath.

Capt. Anthony Mulloy (commonly called Green Mulloy, from the colour of his uniform) procured a large grant of land, including the manor of Urthaheera (now Coote Hall), Hughstown (the seat of the present Coote Mulloy, esq.) &c. &c. He m. Honora Dowell (of the family of Dowell, of Mantua House) and had a son and successor,

WILLIAM O'MULLOY, who is styled by

Lodge, in his Peerage of Ireland, "the great O'Mulloy, of Ughterhera, in the county of Roscommon, knight of the shire and governor of that county." At a meeting of all the gentlemen of Roscommon, held at Ballintobber, at which Sir Lucas Dillon presided, we find his name enumerated (together with the names of Sir Ulick Bourke, Sir L. Dillon, &c. &c.) amongst those who attended and took an oath "for maintaining the king's prerogative and the Romish religion." He m. Margaret Clifford, and had four sons and three daughters, viz.

1. EDWARD, who m. Mary, daughter of the O'Conor Don, and had a son, GREEN MULLOY, who m. Elinor, dau. of Sir Maurice Hurley, knt. and was father of CAPT. WILLIAM MULLOY, in the service of JAMES II., who m. Alison, daughter of Sir Oliver Tuite, bart. of Sonnagh, in Westmeath, and had one son, Theobald Mulloy, captain in the service of the king of Portugal, d. s. p.

11. CONOR, of whom presently.

1. Anne, m. first, to Charles O'Conor, esq. of Ballintobber, son of Sir Hugh O'Conor, by whom she had issue, Owen O'Conor, who followed the fortunes of CHARLES II. to Flanders, and there obtained a company in the Duke of Gloucester's regiment. By the act of settlement his estates were restored to him. He became subsequently governor of Athlone, and being sent to England with the troops appointed to oppose WILLIAM'S landing, was made prisoner and confined in the castle of Chester, where he died in 1690, leaving, by Lady Tuite his wife, no male issue, whereupon his estates devolved on his brother.

Charles O'Conor, grandfather of the celebrated Charles O'Conor. M. R. I. A.

Anne (O'Mulloy) O'Conor wedded, secondly, Edmund Dillon, brother of Theobald, first Viscount Dillon.

11. Mary, m. to Philip Reily, esq. of Lisnure, in Cavan, by whom she had a son, John, who m. the eldest daughter of Lucas Dillon, brother to the Earl of Roscommon.

111. Eleanora, m. to Calher Roe M'Dernot, 20th chief of Moylurg (whose mother was Margaret de Burgo, of Clanricard).

The second son,

CONOR MULLOY, m. Jane, daughter of Sir Richard Rutledge, of Belleek, near Ballyshannon, by Miss O'Brien his wife, a descendant of the house of Thomond, and had a son,

THEOBALD MULLOY (called by corruption Tobias), who held the commission of captain of horse in King William's army at the battle of the Boyne (1690). It is stated that Capt. Mulloy, perceiving William's horse shot, rode up and gave his own charger to the king, and that for this seasonable service his majesty requested he would call at his tent after the action, and choose whatever horse he pleased from the royal stud. Mulloy selected one called Kaiser, the king's favourite, which William cheerfully gave him, with the housings and pistols. This horse, which lived to be forty years of age, never was allowed to be ridden by any but the old captain, and when he began to get stiff, was let run for life. He became so familiar, that he used to come to the hall door and eat bread out of the hand. Theobald, alias Tobias Mulloy, appears in the list of gentlemen attainted by the ill-fated James, and in an act for raising the sum of £120,000 on all lands, tenements, and hereditaments, made in 1695, Henry Lord Capel being then lord deputy, Captain Tobias Mulloy is appointed one of the commissioners for the county of Roscommon. He married twice: by his first wife, a daughter of Sir — King, he had no issue; but by the second, Frances Harlowe, he had two sons, Charles, his heir, and William, who d. at Exeter, a captain in the army. Capt. Theobald Mulloy, who was nominated four times successively high sheriff for the county of Roscommon in the reign of William III. d. in 1734, and was s. by his son,

CHARLES MULLOY, esq. This gentleman being at Athlone when some of King James's officers were raising recruits, was persuaded to fight for the deposed monarch, and had the singular fate of being taken prisoner by a party of the regiment of horse in which his father was captain, at the battle of the Boyne. He was then but seventeen, and for his father's sake his life was spared. He afterwards served in some of William's wars, and at the siege of Vigo was wounded in the leg. He m. Hester Adams (of the same family as the American president Adams) and had three sons,

JOHN, who m. Miss Cooper, of Cooper's Hill, in Sligo, but had no issue.

Charles, d. at college.

COOTE, of whom we have to treat.

Charles Mulloy d. in 1760, aged ninety-two, and was s. by his only surviving son,

COOTE MULLOY, esq. of Hughstown, b. in 1720, cornet in Hamilton's dragoons. This gentleman was considered a person of such solid judgment as to be frequently appointed sole arbitrator under the court of chancery, and his decisions were ever known to be reversed. The then lord chancellor used to say, "that one such man in every county would prove a national blessing."

Mr. Mulloy wedded in May, 1745, Margaret, daughter of James Dodd, esq. of Ardagh, (of the family of Dodd, of Swallowfield, in Berkshire) by Martha, his wife, daughter of Colonel Auchmuty, an officer in King William's army at the battle of the Boyne, and had issue, Margaret, m. to Thomas Mac Dermott Roe, esq. of Alderford, in the county of Roscommon, and had two sons and two daughters.

Rebecca, m. to John Phibbs, esq. of Lisconny, grandfather, by his first wife, of the present Countess of Norbury, who inherits his estate.

Helen, m. to the Rev. P. Birmingham.

Mr. Mulloy d. 7th January, 1796, and was s. by his son,

TOBIAS MULLOY, esq. of Hughstown, b. 6th May, 1748, who was called to the bar, but never practised. At the period of the union he published a pamphlet against Sir Hercules Laughrish, and in favour of triennial parliaments, which excited considerable attention at the time of its production. Mr. Mulloy m. Susannah,* daughter of Colonel Arthur Roche, (whose father, George Roche, represented the city of Limerick in three parliaments), and has issue,

Mr. Charles Mulloy d. at Collooney

* This Susannah Roche was cousin of the humorous Sir Boyle Roche, so well known in the Irish parliament.

Glebe, county of Sligo (of which place he was rector), in April, 1832. Mr. Mulloy d. 10th February, 1825, and was s. by his eldest son, the present COOTE MULLOY, esq. of Hughstown.

The office of hereditary standard bearer to the crown of England in Ireland, vests in this family, and Mr. Mulloy, of Oak Port, is in possession of a drawing copied from an original entry made in a record in the office of arms (Dublin Castle), by Thomas Preston, esq. Ulster king at arms, in the year 1634, and attested by Sir William Betham (the present Ulster), representing O'Mulloy invested with the coat armour proper to his office, mounted upon a steed richly caparisoned, bearing in his hand the standard of England, and upon his shield the family arms. The posterity of Hugh Mor (or great) O'Mulloy, Lord of Fircal, having failed in the elder line, in the person of Conall O'Mulloy, chief of his name, and Lord of Fercall (or Fircal) in the reign of Queen ELIZABETH, (vide O'Mulloy pedigree, office of arms) the honours of primogeniture devolve upon the posterity of Captain Anthony Mulloy, who, as we have already stated, was the first of the O'Mulloys who settled in Connaught, and tenth in descent in the younger line from the said Hugh Mor.

Coote Mulloy, esq. of Hughstown (the lineal descendant of Captain Anthony) is therefore the present chief of his name, and consequently hereditary standard bearer to the crown of England in Ireland. The present O'Mulloys in the King's county belong to a branch junior to that of which Captain Anthony was the founder, (vide O'Mulloy pedigree, office of arms). Brewer, in his "Beauties of Ireland," adverts to this circumstance (see vol. ii. Leinster, King's county), by observing that "O'Mulloy, of Wyhtcheese, county of Roscommon, (which place is now called Coote Hall) is supposed to be the chief of the name of O'Mulloy. When it recollects that William, commonly called the Great O'Mulloy, was, as has been already stated, present at a meeting of the Roscommon gentlemen, held at Balintobber, in the year 1641, and that he was one of those, who, upon that occasion, took an oath for maintaining the Roman Catholic religion (vide the above mentioned peerage, vol. iv. p. 192), it becomes scarcely matter of surprise, that in the great rebellion which broke out the following year, the possessions of this chieftain (if such he may be denominated) should have been forfeited. These possessions consisted of the grant already stated to have been made to Captain Anthony Mulloy (ELIZABETH'S reign), and were known by the name of Urthlaheera, which large tract of country fell, during the rebellion, into the hands of the Cootes, of whom the first that obtained a footing in Connaught, was Sir Charles Coote, father to the first Earl of Mountrath, and brother to Richard, Lord Colooney.

A division of that part of the manor of Coote Hall, which still retains the name, has, by purchase, latterly become the property of Hugh Barton, esq. from whom Mr. Mulloy, of Oak Port, holds it by lease. An extensive portion of the former manor of Coote Hall, now simply called Ballyfermoyle, has also by purchase come into the possession of the Oak Port family. Thus time has rendered to the descendants of the original proprietors, the justice of restoring to them part of the domains of their ancestors.

LESLIE, OF GLASSLOUGH.

LESLIE, CHARLES-POWELL, esq. of Glasslough, in the county of Monaghan, b. 13th September, 1821, succeeded his father 15th November, 1831.

Lineage.

JOHN LESLIE, the founder of the Glasslough branch of the Leslie family, in Ireland, a descendant of the house of Balquhair, in Aberdeenshire, was born in the north of Scotland, and educated first at Aberdeen and then at Oxford. Of this distinguished divine we have the following interesting account in Sir James Ware's History of Ireland, edited by Harris. "John Leslie spoke French, Spanish, and Italian, with the same propriety and fluency as the natives; and was so great a master of the Latin that it is said of him, when he was in Spain, "Solus Lesleius Latine loquitur." He continued twenty-two years abroad, and during that time was at the siege of Rochelle and the expedition of the Isle of Rhee, with the Duke of Buckingham. He was all along conversant in courts, where he learned that address which gave a peculiar grace even to his preaching. These accomplishments obtained him the favour of many princes abroad; and at home he was particularly happy in that of King CHARLES I., who admitted him into his privy council, both in Scotland and Ireland, in which stations he was continued by King CHARLES II. after the restoration of the royal family. His chief preferment in the church of Scotland was the bishoprick of Orkney, called the bishoprick of the Isles, from whence he was translated to Raphoe, on the 1st June, 1633, and was the same year admitted into the privy council of Ireland. When he first came to Raphoe, he found the revenues of it engrossed into the hands of several gentlemen, who combined together to maintain what they had gotten. But, by an expensive lawsuit, he retrieved the rights and estate of the see, and increased the income of it nearly one-third. He built a stately palace in his diocese for himself and his successors, contriving it for strength as well as beauty, which proved to be useful afterwards in the rebellion of 1641, and preserved a good part of that country, particularly those under his protection in his diocese. Yet he would not take military command on him, as judging it not suitable to his functions; though upon occasions we are told that he performed the office of a general, and even ventured to expose his own person, as particularly in the case of Sir Ralph Gore, who was besieged in Magherebeg, and reduced to great extremities. When the Lagan forces, consisting of three regiments, refused to hazard themselves for the relief of him and his party, yet this bishop with his company, tenants and friends, sallied forth amidst the flames of the whole country, relieved the besieged, and evidenced in the action as much personal valour as regular conduct.

After the declension of the king's cause in England, he raised a foot company for his majesty in Ireland, and maintained them, both officers and soldiers, at his own charge. He afterwards endured a siege in his castle of Raphoe, before he would surrender it to Oliver Cromwell, and held out the last in that country. After the king's restoration, he hastened with so much zeal to see him, that he rode from Chester to London in twenty-four hours.

He was translated to the see of Clogher on the 17th June, 1661; and it is said, the king would afterwards have given him more profitable preferments, but he excused himself, resolving to end his labours among those with whom he had suffered, and where his influence was most powerful.

He was a person of great temperance, and so great a stranger to covetousness, that he hardly understood money, which, however, he employed to the best uses. He wrote on the art of memory, and several other curious and learned treatises, which were designed for the public, but were all destroyed with his library, of many years collection, and several manuscripts, which he had gained in foreign countries, partly by the rapine of the Irish, and partly by King WILLIAM's army, in 1690, long after his death. He d. at his seat at Castlelesley, alias Glasslough, in September, 1671, and was there buried in a church of his own building, which he had procured to be made a parish church by act of parliament, and consecrated to St. Salvator. He was reckoned at the time of his death the oldest bishop then in the world, having been so about fifty years, from the time of his promotion to the bishoprick of the Isles till the time of his death." His lordship's son and successor,

CHARLES LESLIE, was admitted a fellow commoner in the college of Dublin in 1664, where he continued till he commenced master of arts, and then entered the Temple, in London, where he devoted himself to the study of the law; but after pursuing it some years, he at length declared himself so much disgusted with a professional casuistry, always on that side of the question which bears the golden fruit, that he relinquished the legal profession, in 1680, entered into holy orders, and, in 1687, became chancellor of the cathedral of Connor. At the Revolution refusing to take the oaths to King WILLIAM, he was deprived of his preferment, and followed the fortunes of the exiled monarch. Eventually, however, after having undergone many difficulties through good and bad report, he returned to Ireland in 1721, and died the March following, at his seat Glasslough, where, in the beginning of the year 1689, there had been a brisk skirmish, wherein nearly two hundred of the Irish were slain. Mr. Leslie wrote a great number of theological tracts and political papers, intended to serve the cause and party he had embraced. His son and successor,

ROBERT LESLIE, esq. of Glasslough, m. Frances, daughter of John Rogerson, chief-justice of the Court of King's Bench, in Ireland, by Elizabeth Ludlow his wife, aunt of the first Earl Ludlow, and had, with a daughter, Annabella, m. to the late Robert Leigh, esq. of Rose Garland, in the county of Wenford, a son and successor,

Lineage.

This family is of Saxon origin, and held Folefort, as it is written in Domesday Book, from which place the name is derived. Here, as it appears by records, as well as registries in the College of Arms, they were seated in the time of RICHARD I., and have continued in possession of the same name, in the male line, by uninterrupted descent during the long period of more than six hundred years. The mansion, which is a quadrangular pile of building, is still in good repair, though one of the most ancient in the west of England; standing in a park well diversified with fine timber, and with extensive woods and plantations around it. This house was garrisoned for CHARLES I., and was taken by a part of Fairfax's army under the command of Col. Okey, in December, 1645. Many knights of the family distinguished themselves in the Holy Land, Sir Baldwin de Fulford more particularly. Sir Thomas Fulford was one of the knights who went up with the Earl of Devon and relieved Exeter when besieged by Perkin Warbeck, in 1497.

According to the records in the Heralds' Office we find the first of the family is

WILLIAM DE FULFORD, who held Fulford temp. RICHARD I., and left a son, NICHOLAS FULFORD, of Fulford, who had a son,

SIR HENRY FULFORD, of Fulford, living temp. EDWARD III., said by Bishop Godwin to have sat in judgment with Chief-justice Gascoyne, and condemned Archbishop Scrope to be beheaded. He was s. by his son,

HENRY FULFORD, of Fulford, who m. the daughter and heir of Fitzurse, of Williton, Somerset, by whom he had

SIR BALDWIN FULFORD, of Fulford, sheriff of Devon 38th HENRY VI., Knight of the Sepulchre, and Under Admiral to Holland, Duke of Exeter, High Admiral of England. Prince styles Sir Baldwin "a great soldier and a traveller of so undaunted resolution, that, for the honour and liberty of a royal lady, in a castle besieged by the infidels, he fought a combat with a Sarazen; for bulk and bigness an unequal match, (as the representation of him cut in the wainscot in Fulford Hall doth plainly show,) whom yet he vanquished, and rescued the lady." He m. Elizabeth, daughter and co-heiress of Sir John Bozom, of Bozomzeal, and by her, who wedded secondly, Sir William Huddersfield, attorney-general to EDWARD IV., had issue,

1. THOMAS, his heir.
- ii. John, canon of Exeter Cathedral.

Lord Chamberlain to Queen ELIZABETH.

He wedded Philippa, daughter of Sir Philip Courtenay, of Powderham, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Walter, Lord Hungerford, High Treasurer of England temp. HENRY VI., and was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

He m. Lady Dorothy Bourchier, younger daughter of John, first Earl of Bath, by Cecilia his wife, sister and heiress of Henry D'Aubenev, Earl of Bridgewater, and had, with other issue, a daughter, Faith, m. to Capt. Davies, the great circumnavigator, and a son and heir,

SIR THOMAS FULFORD, knt. of Great Fulford, who m. Ursula, daughter of Richard Hampfield, esq. of Poltimore, and had inter alia a daughter, Bridget, married to Arthur Champernoune, esq. of Dartington, and a son and successor, sons, from a younger one of whom, George, the present family descends. Sir Francis died in 1664, and was s. by (the only son and heir of his eldest son, THOMAS FULFORD, esq. who was slain in the civil wars, at the siege of Exeter, in 1642) his grandson,

Mr. Phillipps s. his father 20th November, 1812. He is a justice of the peace for the county, and an alderman for the city of Hereford.

Lineage.

The constant tradition of this family has been that they descend from a younger branch of the Picton House, but after much laborious investigation, nothing has been ascertained capable of throwing any light on the point in question. That they are of Welsh origin is however certain, it having been proved by family evidences still in existence, that they were possessed of lands in the parish of Disserth, in Radnorshire about the middle of the reign of ELIZABETH, whence, later in the same reign, they removed into Herefordshire, still retaining possession of the Radnorshire property till the middle of the last century, when the estates called Upper and Lower Kilgainvin, in that parish, were disposed of in 1753, by Thomas Phillipps, esq. The first settler in Herefordshire.

OWEN PHILLIPPS, of the city of Hereford, younger brother of John Phillipps, of Kilgainvin, in the parish of Disserth, Radnorshire, held lands in Disserth, about the year 1595. He m. Joane — (whose will, dated 19th April, 1639, was proved 16th July, 1641) and had, with other issue,* a son,

WILLIAM PHILLIPPS, of Madley, in the county of Hereford, and afterwards of Huntington, in the parish of Holmer, in the same shire, who settles Kilgainvin on his marriage in 1631. He m. in that year, Anne, daughter of Henry Melling, † mayor

* The eldest son, Walter Phillipps, baptized at St. Peters, 14th November, 1595, m. Margerie — and was living in 1639, having then one son and five daughters.

† Mr. Melling was a royalist, and one of the contributors to the distresses of the king when at Oxford in 1644, at the period of the invasion of the Scots, as appears from the subjoined document in the possession of Mr. Phillipps, of Longworth. It is curious, as containing the king's sign manual, as well as the autograph of the lord keeper (Lytleton) and Sir Henry Lingden, then high sheriff, and one of the principal sufferers in the royal cause in the county of Hereford. The following is a copy of the original document:

CHARLES R.

Trusty and wel-beloved, we greet you well. Whereas all our subjects of the kingdom of England and Dominion of Wales, are both by their allegiance and the act of pacification, bound to resist and suppress all such of our subjects of Scotland, as have in a hostile manner already entered, or shall hereafter enter into this kingdom. And by lawe your personal service, attended in a warlike manner for the resistance of the invasion, may be required by us, which we desire to spare, chusing rather to invite your assistance for the maintenance of our army in a free and voluntary expression of your affections to our service and the safety of this kingdom. And whereas the mem-of Hereford, in 1638, and by her, whose will, dated 6th September, 1694, was proved 6th April, 1703, had issue, Caroline.

This gentleman, whose patronymic is GRAVENOR, succeeded to the estates, in Somerset and Devon, of his paternal great uncle, the Rev. Lancelot St. Albyn, M. A. (who died 22nd January, 1791,) on coming of age, 13th August, 1806, and on the 19th of the same month, in compliance with the will of the said Lancelot St. Albyn, assumed, by royal license, the surname and arms of ST. ALBYN only.

Mr. St. Albyn is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Somerset, and was for some years a captain in the West Somerset Local Militia, on the first enrollment of that force, commanded by Thomas Buckler Lethbridge, esq.

Lineage.

The ST. ALBYNS deduce their origin from Saint Albine in Normandy, and having followed WILLIAM the Conqueror into England, were for many centuries settled in the north of Devon, possessed of considerable estates in the several parishes of George Ham, Berynarber, and Paracombe.

At Pickwell, an ancient seat of the family, in the parish of George Ham, are to be seen the horse-lance and quoit of Maugre St. Albyn, and in the church of that place is his effigy, in a recumbent position, on his tomb.

In 1439, JOHN ST. ALBYN, esq. of Paracombe, married Joan, daughter and heir of Richard Popham, esq. of Alfoxton, in the county of Somerset, and widow of John Sydenham, esq. of Badialton, in the same county. This lady, having survived both her husbands, gave Orchard (now Orchard Wyadham), and the lands she had from her mother, to her son by Sydenham, and Alfoxton, and the lands she had from her father, to her son by St. Albyn; which latter

JOHN ST. ALBYN, of Alfoxton, m. Margaret, daughter of John Dodington, esq. of Dodington, in the county of Somerset, and had four sons and four daughters: the eldest son,

JOHN ST. ALBYN, succeeded to the estates, but d. without issue; and the second son, Christopher St. Albyn, never having married, the family succession was maintained by the third son,

LANCELOT ST. ALBYN, of Perry, in the parish of East Quantockshead, who m. Elizabeth, daughter of John St. Albyn, esq. of Nether Stowey, in the county of Somerset, and by her he had two daughters, and an only son,

JOHN ST. ALBYN, of Holford, who m. Amy, daughter of Francis Bawden, esq. of Stogursey, in the county of Somerset, by whom he had four sons and four daughters: the eldest son, Lieutenant-Colonel Spens succeeded to the representation of the ancient family of Spens of Lathallan on the demise of his brother in 1800.

Lineage.

The family of SPENS is of very high antiquity in Scotland, and in the opinion of some authors, descended from a younger son of the Earl of Fife, as it had been in the use of carrying in its armorial bearings the lion rampant of the great Macduff, which denotes descent from that illustrious house.

There were many considerable free barons of the name of Spens, who made a good figure both at home and abroad, several centuries ago, but that of Lathallan is documented for three or four generations before any of the others existed.

The Spenses of Kilspindy, who are undoubtedly descended of Lathallan, made a considerable figure in the reigns of Kings James I. and II. but are now extinct.

The Spenses of Bodham, in Aberdeenshire, which still exist, have been free barons ever since the time of JAMES III. and several other Spenses in the same county; also the Spenses of Berryhole, in Fife, &c. &c. are all descended of Lathallan, which their armorial bearing testifies.

The family of Wolmerston, another great branch of the name of Spens, produced many worthy patriots, who did honour to their country, both in the cabinet and in the field, and had also the lion rampant in their armorial bearings.

Count de Spens, who ranked amongst the first of the Swedish nobility, and was generalissimo of their forces, descended from the house of Wolmerston, but that branch of the family is now entirely extinct in Scotland.

The immediate ancestor of the family of Lathallan,

HENRY DE SPENS, who flourished in the reign of King ALEXANDER III. was compelled with most of the nobility and gentry of Scotland, to submit to King EDWARD III. in 1296. Contemporary with this Henry lived Nicol de Spens, who was also forced to swear fealty to King EDWARD, when he had overrun Scotland in the same year, 1296. What connexion Henry and Nicol had with one another does not appear. Henry died soon after the year 1300, and was succeeded by his son,

THOMAS DE SPENS, who in the reign of ROBERT BRUCE, is mentioned in a charter of donation to the monastery of Soltray, together with Sir Robert Keith, great marshall of Scotland, Sir Richard Keith, his brother, and John Keith, his son, &c. &c. This charter has no date, but appears to have been granted about the year 1320. He is witness in another charter to the same monastery, with the said Sir Robert Keith, &c. This charter also wants a date, but must have been in or before 1332, in which year Sir Robert Keith lost his life fighting in defence of the liberties of his country, at the disastrous battle of Duplin. Thomas de Spens died shortly after, and was succeeded by his son,

WILLIAM DE SPENS, who is mentioned in an authentic writ in favour of his son, hereafter narrated. He left issue, two sons,

WILLIAM, his heir.

Walter de Spens, who is witness in a will of the Bishop of Aberdeen, together with Robert, Earl of Fife and Monteath, anno 1382, but we can give no account of his posterity.

William died in the end of the reign of DAVID BRUCE, and was succeeded by his eldest son, WILLIAM DE SPENS, who was proprietor of the lands and barony of Lathallan, in Fife-shire, and several others, of which the Earls of Fife were superiors, till the forfeiture of Murdock, Duke of Albany and Earl of Fife, in 1425, after which this family held these lands of the crown, and Lathallan hath been their chief seat and title ever since the reign of ROBERT II. He married Isabel, daughter and heiress of Duncan Campbell, of Glen-Douglas, Tarbit, &c. in Dumbartonshire. This is instructed by a precept for infesting "William de Spens (therein designed son of William) and Isabel Campbell, his spouse, in the lands of Athaland, Kittedie, and Craig-Sanguhar, in the county of Fife, also the lands of Glen-Douglas, &c. in Dumbartonshire, and some tenements in and about the town of Perth, &c." The precept is dated the 5th, and the sasine following thereon, the 16th May, 1385.

In consequence of this marriage the family of Lathallan, with several of their cadets, added to their arms girony of eight, the paternal coat of the family of Argyll.

We shall only further observe that many descendants of this family have carried lozenges or mascles, as well as the lion, in their armorial bearings.

This William entered into an indenture with Duncan, Earl of Lennox, and with the consent of the said Isabel Campbell, his spouse, lets to the said earl for his lifetime, alienarily, part of the lands of Glen-Douglas, Tarbit, &c. for six merks yearly of lack-duty, &c. This curious deed is dated at Strealing, the 25th of July, 1392, to which Robert, Earl of Fife and Monteith, Sir Patrick de Graham, Sir Walter Buchanan, Duncan Campbell, &c. &c. are witnesses.

William de Spens afterwards got a charter from the Earl of Fife, which was ratified and confirmed in plerio parlamento, by a charter under the great seal from King JAMES I. Willielmo Spens et Isabella Campbell ejus sponse, terrarum de Lathallan, Kittedy Craig-Sanguhar, &c. cum potestate tenere curias vitæ et membrorum in prædictis terris, &c. and if a thief or robber shall be apprehended and condemned at said courts, he is to be hanged on the gallows belonging to the earldom of Fife, &c. &c. The confirmation of this curious charter is dated 13th February, 1430. By Isabel Campbell, his wife, he had two sons and one daughter,

- i. JOHN, his heir.
- ii. William, first of the Spenses of Kilspindy, a family which flourished with lustre in Perthshire, for three or four generations, when the male line failed, as before observed.
- iii. Isabel was m. to Andrew Balfour, a son of the family of Burleigh, who got with her a part of the lands of Glen-Douglas, &c. confirmed anno 1476.

WILLIAM, of Lathallan, lived to a great age; died about the year 1432, and was s. by his eldest son, JOHN DE SPENS, who in his father's lifetime was designated of Glen-Douglas, which title he retained as long as he lived. He was a man of parts and spirit, and extremely active in business. He was tutor in law to his nephew, Andrew Spens, of Kilspindy, son of his brother William, and became bound in an indenture, whereby the said Andrew, when he came of age, should marry a daughter of James Cochrane, &c. &c. This indenture is dated the 19th day of August, 1419. He got a charter from Sir John Arnot, of that ilk, Johanni Spens de Glen-Douglas, &c. of an annuity out of the barony of Arnot, in Fifehire, anno 1420. He got also a charter under the great seal, from KING JAMES I. of the lands of Torry, Drumgay, &c. dated the 24th day of April, 1430. After his father's death he got a charter of the lands of Lathallan, Kittedie, Craig-Sanguhar, &c. dated the 4th day of December, 1433; and, being a man of extraordinary abilities, and highly esteemed in his own country, was chosen one of the lords of the articles in a full parliament held at Perth by the same KING JAMES, anno 1434.

There is still preserved among the writs of this family, an indenture, in which are these words: "Between a worshipful and mighty lord, Walter of Staliburton, lord of Dirleton, upon the tae part, and John de Spens, lord of Glen-Douglas, on the t'other part: That notwithstanding the said lord of Dirleton had wadset to the said John de Spens the lands of Balnablain, &c. &c. for a certain sum of money then advanced by said John, &c. &c. yet the said lord may redeem the same upon repaying the said sum, &c. &c. &c." This indenture is dated the 24th May, 1435. He m. Isabel, daughter of Sir John Wemyss, of Rires, progenitor of the Earls of Wemyss, and by her he had four sons,

- i. ALEXANDER, his heir.
- ii. Robert, who got from his father the lands of Kittedie, in Fife, with some tenements about Perth, but his only son, JOHN, dying without issue, these lands returned to the family.
- iii. Thomas, who being bred a churchman, was first bishop of Galloway, then of Aberdeen. He was a man of extraordinary parts and learning, and made a great figure in his time. He was appointed lord privy seal for Scotland, and was often employed by the estates of the nation, as ambassador to negotiate the most arduous affairs in the reign of KING JAMES III. and always acquitted himself with honour. He erected an hospital at Edinburgh, where he died, and was buried in the Trinity College churchyard, at the foot of Leith-wynd, anno 1480.
- iv. Patrick, who having betaken himself to a military life, was an officer in the company of Scots Guards, sent from Scotland by KING JAMES II. to CHARLES VII. of France, anno 1450. He was ancestor of the family of Spens-Destignots, of France.

John, of Lathallan and Glen-Douglas, did not long survive his father, but died in the beginning of the reign of JAMES II. and was succeeded by his eldest son, ALEXANDER DE SPENS, of Lathallan, who being a man of authority and power, was by KING JAMES II. appointed high constable of the town of Craill for life, and got a charter under the great seal, de officio constabularii burgi de Craill in vicecomitatu de Fife, &c. &c. dated 29th of December, 1458. He m. Katharine, sister of Sir Andrew Wood, of Largo, and died in the reign of KING JAMES III. leaving a son,

ROBERT SPENS, of Lathallan, who succeeded him, and is particularly named in several of the family writs hereafter narrated. He died before the year 1474, and left issue a son and successor,

JOHN SPENS, of Lathallan, who was served and retoured heir to his father, Robert, in 1474. He got two sasines of the lands and barony of Lathallan, in which are these words: Honorabilis Johannes Spens filius et heres quondam Roberti Spens de Lathallan, &c. The first is dated 19th April, 1474, the other in July, 1475. He m. Margaret, dau. of Patrick Dunbar, of Kilconquhar, son and heir of George, twelfth Earl of March, and had two sons; JOHN, his heir, and David, rector of Flisk, who got a charter of the lands of Muirton, dated 1513. The elder daughter of Sir John Arnot, of that Ilk, and d. in 1520, leaving a son.

Lineage.

The family of TYNTE has maintained for centuries a leading position in the West of England; of its surname tradition has handed down the following derivation: In the year 1192, at the celebrated battle of Ascalon, a young knight of the noble house of Arundel, clad all in white, with his horse's housings of the same colour, so gallantly distinguished himself on that memorable field, that RICHARD Cœur de Lion remarked publicly after the victory, "that the maiden knight had borne himself as a lion, and done deeds equal to those of six Croises (or Crusaders)," whereupon he conferred on him, for arms, a lion gu. on a field arg. between six crosslets of the first, and for motto, “Tynetus cruore Saraceno.” His descendants thence assuming the surname of TYNTE, settled, after some generations, in Somersetshire, enjoying considerable influence, and intermarrying with the principal county families.

The representative of the Tynates at the close of the sixteenth century,

EDWARD TYNTE, esq. of Wrexhall, in the county of Somerset, living in 1585, married, and had two sons, EDWARD, his heir; and ROBERT (Sir), knt. who settled in Ireland in 1645, and who was ancestor of the baronets of the name, resident in that part of the kingdom. The elder son,

EDWARD TYNTE, esq. of Wrexhall, was father of

EDWARD TYNTE, esq. who purchased from his brother-in-law, John Aishe, esq. the manor of Chelvey, in the county of Somerset. He espoused Anne, daughter of Sir Edward Gorges, knt. of Wrexhall, in the same shire, and had JOHN, Robert, Hugh, Dorothy, and Florence. He d. in 1629, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN TYNTE, esq. of Chelvey, M. P. for Bridgewater in 1661, a devoted adherent of Royalty during the civil wars, and named in the list of gentlemen of large estates, intended to have been created knights of the Royal Oak. He m. Jane, daughter and heiress of Hugh Halsewell,* of Halsewell, in the county of Somerset, son of Sir Nicholas Halsewell, and thus acquired the estate which has since been the chief residence of the family. By the heiress of Halsewell, he left a son and successor,

HALSEWELL TYNTE, esq. of Halsewell, who was created a BARONET 7th June, 1673, in consideration of his father's distinguished services, and represented the town of Bridgewater in parliament in 1678. He m. Grace,

He m. Mary, daughter and heiress of John Walter, esq. of Brecon, and by her, who wedded secondly, in 1736, Pawlet St. John, esq. of Dogmersfield, had two daughters, who both died young. Sir Charles became, at the decease of his uncle, Sir Charles Kemeys, bart. of Kevanmably, representative of that very ancient family, and inherited their large estates in the counties of Glamorgan, Brecon, and Monmouth. He m. in March, 1737-8, Anne, daughter and co-heir of the Rev. Dr. Bushby, rector of Addington, in Bucks, but dying without issue, in 1785, his great possessions became vested in his niece, Colonel Kemeys Tynnt d. in 1807, and his widow in 1825, leaving, with two daughters both unmarried, an only son, the present CHARLES-KEMEYS KEMEYS-TYNTE, esq. of Halsewell House, in Somersetshire, and of Kevanmably, in Glamorganshire.

Kemeys, of Kevanmably.

The house of KEMEYS, originally De Camois, Camoes, and Camys, is of Norman extraction, and the name of its patriarch is to be found on the roll of Battle Abbey. Large possessions were granted to the family in the counties of Sussex and Surrey, and so early as the year 1258 Ralph de Camois was a baron by tenure. He was succeeded by his son, Ralph de Camois, who was summoned to parliament 49 HENRY III. and his descendants sat among the peers of the realm until the demise issueless in 5 HENRY VI. of Hugh de Camois, who left his sisters, Margaret, m. to Ralf Rademelde, and Eleanor, wife of Roger Lewknor, his coheirs, (see BURKE'S Extinct Peerage). A branch of the family, which had settled in Pembrokeshire, there enjoyed large possessions, and as Lords of Camaes and St. Dogmaels, exercised almost regal sway. In the conquest of Monmouthshire and Glamorganshire, the Camays were much distinguished, and were rewarded with grants of "Kemeys's Commander," and "Kemeys's Inferior." One branch* became established at Llanvarr Castle in Monmouthshire (now in the possession of Colonel Kemeys-Tynnt); and another, fixing itself at the Began, in Glamorganshire, erected the mansion of Cefn-Mably, the residence of the present chief of the family.

EDWARD KEMEYS, son of Edward Kemeys, who was at the conquest of Upper Gwent, married Nest, daughter and heiress of Andrew de Began, lord of Began, a lineal descendant of Blethyn Maynarch, lord of Brecon, and thus acquired the lordship of Began, which for centuries after was the principal abode of his descendants. His great-great-grandson, JENKIN KEMEYS, of Began, married Crisley, daughter of Morgan ap Llewellen, and had one son and a daughter, viz.

JEVAN, his heir.

Margaret, m. to Jevan ap Morgan, of New Church, near Cardiff, in the county of Glamorgan, and was grandmother of

HENRY VIII. who espoused the sister of Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Essex, and had a son,

Sir Richard Williams, who assumed at the desire of HENRY VIII. the surname of his uncle CROMWELL, and through the influence of that once powerful relative obtained wealth and station. His great-grandson was the Lord Protector OLIVER CROMWELL.

From Jenkin Kemeys's son Jevan lineally descended

DAVID KEMEYS, esq. of Kevanmably, in Glamorganshire, who m. Katherine, dau. of Sir William Bawdrripp, and was succeeded by his son,

RHYS KEMEYS, esq. of Llanvay, who wedded a daughter of William Aubrey, D.D. and was father of

SIR NICHOLAS KEMEYS, of Kevanmably, who represented the county of Glamorgan in parliament, and was created a BARONET 13th May, 1642. This gentleman, remarkable for his gigantic stature and strength, was preeminently distinguished by his loyalty to King CHARLES I. and on the breaking out of the civil war, having raised a regiment of cavalry, was invested with the command of Chepstow Castle, which he gallantly defended against a very superior force, under Cromwell himself; but that general's presence being required elsewhere, he left Colonel Ewer to prosecute the siege with seven companies of infantry, a train of artillery, and two squadrons of cavalry. The gallant Sir Nicholas Kemeys, however, with his son (afterwards Sir Charles) as his lieutenant, and one hundred and sixty men, held out and made several brilliant sorties, until the garrison being worn down with fatigue, a breach was made, and the brave governor and forty men died in defending the castle to the last. Of such importance did Cromwell consider the capture of the castle of Chepstow, that parliament voted thanks to Colonel Ewer and his army, and ordered fifty pounds to be given to the messenger who brought the intelligence.

* A branch settled in Ireland, and founded the present highly respectable house of the name in that kingdom, of which H. Kemmis, esq. of Dublin, late captain in the Grenadier Guards, and M.P. for East Looe, is married to Colonel Tynnt's youngest daughter, Henrietta.

Sir Nicholas M. Jane, daughter of Sir Rowland Williams, knt. of Langibby, and left at his decease a son and successor,

SIR CHARLES KEMEYS, the second baronet, of Kevanmably, M. P. for Glamorganshire, who m. first, Blanch, daughter of Sir Lewis Mansel, bart. but by her had no issue; and secondly, Margaret, daughter of Sir George Whitmore, lord mayor of London in 1631-2, by whom he left at his decease a son and successor,

SIR CHARLES KEMEYS, third baronet, of Kevanmably, who represented the county and borough of Monmouth in several parliaments. * There is an old manuscript at Grey Abbey, written about the year 1696, by William Montgomery, of that place, son of the Hon. Sir James Montgomery, giving an account of this family, in which he remarks, "For the honour of the nation in general, let it be known to all that there is at this day the title of a counte or earle of the name in all his Majesty's four kingdoms; viz. Count de Montgomerie, in France; Earl of Montgomerie, in England; Earl of Eglintoun, in Scotland; and Earl of Mount Alexander, in Ireland; the like whereof cannot be truly said (as I believe) of any other surname in all the world." In the same manuscript he states, alluding to ROGER, fifth Count de Montgomerie, who led the van at the battle of Hastings, "In anno 1652, I saw in Westminster Abbey, this ROGER's coat of arms and name written under it, as benefactor to the building thereof. He was in rank or place the seventh or eighth (as I remember) among the contributors to the said building, or to the convent thereof, but in anno 1664, I found that his name and arms, and all the rest (above forty noblemen's), were wholly razed out as writings (on a stone table book) are with a wet sponge."

Lineage.

This family, and that of Shardeloes, (vol. i. page 580) derive from a common progenitor, but the settlement in Ireland must have taken place at a remote period, for we find the "Drake of Drakerath" a distinguished person in the annals of that kingdom throughout the turbulent and tyrannic rule of the TUDORS and the STUARTS, the sanguinary despotism of CROMWELL, and the confiscating reign of WILLIAM.

The mansion of DRAKERATH was situated in the barony of Kells, in the county of Meath, (where the ruins still remain,) and was erected by a member of the family of DRAKE of ASHE,* in the county of Down, who acquired large estates in that part of Ireland, and settled there. Those estates continued vested in his descendants until the rebellion of 1641, when they were forfeited, but a small portion was subsequently restored by the court of claims in the beginning of CHARLES II.'s reign. A cadet of the family, Captain Peter Drake, a soldier of fortune, who followed the wars through all the fields of Europe in the beginning of the last century, published a very amusing detail of his adventures, which he begins with the situation of his house at the time of the Revolution. "I was born (he says) 12th October, 1671. My father's name was George, he was eldest son of William Drake, of Drakerath, and married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Patrick Stanley, esq. of Marlstown, in the county of Louth, and niece of John Stanley, esq. of Finner, near Slane, in Meath. The family remained in peaceable possession of the estate from their first arrival until the war of 1641, when with many more they forfeited, and were driven to shift for themselves. At the beginning of CHARLES II.'s reign, there was a court of claims set on foot, by which a few of the proprietors were restored, and my father was of the number. He became, however, possessed only of a part, and was at the eve of being restored to the whole, when an order came from the king to dissolve the court, so that an end for that time was put to his hopes. My father had some time before this with his family settled in the county of Kildare, having taken some lands from William, Lord Dungan, (to whom he had the honour of being related,) at Kildroughlet, where he built a handsome seat. Here he continued until the Revolution, when his affairs took a new turn. Some time before, or about the beginning of the troubles, Lord Dungan was created Earl of Limerick, and if I remember rightly, constituted governor of that city; thither his lordship repaired, taking my father with him, whom he soon after promoted. He was appointed one of the commissioners of the customs, and chief comptroller of the mint. As soon as King James came to Dublin, and called a parliament, my father was put into the commission of the peace for the county of Kildare, and declared himself a candidate for the borough of Navan. He was at the same time restored to the remainder of his estates; after which he returned to Limerick to fulfill his official duties. In June, 1690, he came to visit his family, and settle his affairs; but the loss of the battle of the Boyne (which happened the 1st July following) obliged him with all expedition to move off with his family for Limerick.

* From which also the DRAKES OF SHARDELOES.

staying but one day after the battle to inter Lord Dungan, only son to the Earl of Limerick, who was that day killed by a cannon ball, and brought to Castletown, the earl, his father's seat. This melancholy affair being at an end, the next day we set forward on our journey. Arriving at Limerick, we found all hands employed in repairing the old, and throwing up new works for the defence of the place, which was soon after besieged; the particulars of which are so well known already, that it would be needless to descend to minute relation."

From the Irish records it appears that in the 9th of RICHARD II., the King conceded to RICHARD DRAKE, of Drakestown, the office of high sheriff of the county of Meath; and that, in the 9th of Henry V., the same appointment was granted to John Drake, of Drakestown, to be held during pleasure. Among the other early ancestry of the family, Catherine, sister and heiress of Nicholas Drake, of Drakerath, married Richard Nugent, 2nd baron of Delvin, living in 1428; and about the same period, Sir Christopher Barnewall, of Crickstown, lord high treasurer of Ireland, married Matilda, dau. of the then Drake of Drakerath.*

The immediate progenitor of the family before us.

COLUMBUS DRAKE, esq. of Drakerath, in Meath, son of Patrick Drake, esq., was born in 1670, and married in 1705, Anne, only daughter of — Jennett, esq. of Oldbridge, in the county of Louth, who was slain at the battle of the Boyne in 1688, together with all his sons except the youngest,

* Contemporaneous with the branch of the family settled in Ireland, flourished in high repute the Drakes, of Ashe, in the county of Devon, of which, as stated in the beginning of the lineage, the Drakes, of Drakerath, were a scion.

This child and his sister, afterwards Mrs. Drake, were saved in a singular manner, by a faithful servant, who secreted them in baskets, and thus conveyed them across the river after the conflict. Colonel Frampton served as high sheriff for the county of Dorset in 1793.

Lineage.

JOHN DE FRAMPTON was returned to serve in parliament for the borough of Dorchester, 31 Edward III. He is supposed to have had two sons, namely, John de Frampton, (who was returned to parliament as a Burgess for the borough of Weymouth, 1355 and 1360; for Dorchester, 1357 and 1362; and as knight of the shire for the county of Dorset, 1372 and 1380, and seems to have been the father of Sir Henry Frampton, who was M. P. for Melcombe Regis in 1380, 1383, and 1384, and d. s. p.) and

WALTER DE FRAMPTON, who was M. P. for the borough of Melcombe Regis in 1357, 1362, and 1368. He was lord of the manor, and possessor of the advowson of Buckland Ripers, an estate adjacent to the towns of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis, in the county of Dorset, and acquired the manor and estate of Moreton, with other lands in its vicinity, by his marriage, which took place in or previous to 1366, with Margaret, the heiress of that property. What her surname has not been positively ascertained, but it seems nearly certain that she was of the family of Husee,* who were lords of this manor at a time immediately preceding the period at which it passed into the possession of the family of Frampton. Walter de Frampton d. 14th October, 1389, his wife having died before him, and left issue by her, besides a daughter, Joan, m. to Sir Thomas Stewell, knt. of Catherston, county Somerset, a son,

JOHN FRAMPTON, of Moreton, who was twenty-four years of age at his father's death. He was at the battle of Agincourt, and was returned six times to parliament as knight of the shire for the county of Dorset, from 1387 to 1405; and in 4 HENRY V. was appointed a commissioner to array the county of Dorset against a French invasion. He was three times married. By his first wife, Isabel, daughter of Robert Prouse, he had one daughter, Margaret, who m. Robert Bingham, of Bingham's Melcombe, in the county of Dorset, whose marriage articles, dated at Moreton, 21st September, 9 HENRY IV. are still extant amongst the family documents at Melcombe.

By Edith, daughter of Sir Matthew Stawell,

knt. of Catherston, county of Somerset, his second wife, he had three sons,

I. ROBERT, who succeeded him at Moreton.

II. JOHN, M. P. for the borough of Lyme Regis, father of JOHN, of Potterne and Echilhampton, Wilts, who, by Johanna, his wife, daughter and heir of Edward Mareschall, of Woodcote, Hants, had two sons, ROGER, of Potterne, who eventually inherited Moreton.

Edward, who d. before 1330, leaving by his wife, a daughter of — Hunsell, of Symondsburry, a son,

JOHN.

III. William, who was M. P. for Dorchester, 1431 and 1450, and for Weymouth, 1433.

John Frampton d. 26th May, 1426, leaving Margaret, his third wife, surviving him, and was succeeded at Moreton by his eldest son,

ROBERT FRAMPTON, of Moreton, who was twenty-six years of age and upwards at his father's death, 4 HENRY VI. His name appears in a list of considerable men of the county of Dorset, who were able to spend £12 per annum, returned into chancery 12 HENRY VI. By Alice, his first wife, daughter and heir of Hugh Deverell, he acquired lands in Coomb Deverell, in the county of Dorset, and had several children, who all predeceased their fathers s. p. His second wife was Alianor, daughter and heiress of William Browning, of Melbury Sampford, Dorset, and of Upton Lovell, in the county of Wilts (who m. secondly, Walter Barough, of Charford, in the same shire), and dying 4th February, 1465, left by her,

JAMES FRAMPTON, of Moreton, his son and heir, who was born in 1452. He m. Anastasia, daughter of Sir John Newborough, knt. of Lullworth, in the county of Dorset, and d. 5th June, 1523, as appears by a monument to his memory, whereon is his effigy in brass, in the church at Moreton. Leaving no legitimate issue, he settled his estates on James Frampton, his bastard son, who m. Avice, daughter of Sir Thomas de la Lynde, knt. of Winterborn

* In 31 EDWARD I. 1303, John Husee had a grant of free warren in all his demesne lands at Moreton. Roger Husee, his son and heir, was summoned to parliament 22 and 23 EDWARD III. amongst the barons of the realm, and died 35 EDWARD III. 1361, seized, amongst other lands, of the manor and advowson of Moreton. Leaving no issue, his estates devolved, by virtue of an entail, on John Husee, jun. then thirty years of age and upwards. Of the death or heir of this John Husee, we have no certain account, but as the manor of Moreton was settled upon him and the heirs of his body, with remainder to the right heirs of the aforesaid Roger, it may be conjectured with the greatest probability, that Margaret, the wife of Walter Frampton, was daughter of the last mentioned John Husee, and succeeded to the property by virtue of this entail.

Clenston, in the county of Dorset (who afterwards became successively the wife of Thomas Trenchard, of Lytchett, and Gilbert Wallis, esq. of Langton Wallis, in the county of Dorset), and d. s. p. before 22nd August, 1525.

On his decease the manor of Moreton, with other appendant estates, descended to

ROGER FRAMPTON, (the grandson of John, the second son of John Frampton, of Moreton, who d. in 1426). This Roger was found by inquisition, 17 HENRY VIII. to be cousin and heir male of James Frampton, of Moreton, and succeeded, as before mentioned, to the family estates in Dorsetshire. He was b. in 1495, and m. Alice Trenchard, but d. s. p. 3rd May, 1530, whereupon the manor of Moreton, together with his other estates, devolved on his nephew (the son of his brother Edward),

JOHN FRAMPTON, who then became of Moreton. He was b. in 1516, and d. 14th November, 1557, leaving issue by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Nicholas Willoughby, of Tonerispiddle, in the county of Dorset, who d. in his lifetime,

i. ROBERT, his heir.

ii. John, of Upway, in the county of Dorset, who, by Anne, his wife, daughter of Henry Willoughby, of Upway, aforesaid, had

1. ROBERT, his eldest son.

iv. WILLIAM, who s. to the Moreton estates.

Dying in 1631, he was s. at Buckland by his son,

JAMES FRAMPTON, esq. of Buckland Ripers, aged twenty-five at the herald's visitation in 1623. His name is found amongst the gentlemen of the king's party in the county of Dorset, during the civil war, and his estates being sequestered, he compounded for that of Buckland Ripers for £420. He d. and was buried at Buckland, 13th July, 1655, having been twice married. By Katherine, his first wife, daughter of Berkeley, of Pill, in Somersetshire, he had

By Elizabeth, his wife, (who d. in 1706), daughter of Amias Fulford, son of Sir Francis Fulford, of Great Fulford, in Devon, and of Toller Porcorum, in Dorsetshire, he had issue, beside James, who d. young, three other sons, on whom, in succession, the estate of Moreton was entailed by their cousin, William Frampton, viz.

i. THOMAS, the eldest, d. v. p. s. p. in 1571.

ii. Charles, who appears to have had a wife named Ursula, but probably d. without surviving issue, as his uncle William became possessed of the Moreton estates.

i. Elizabeth, m. in 1593, to William Daccomb, son of James Daccomb, of Iwerne Stepleton, in the county of Dorset.

WILLIAM FRAMPTON, fourth son of John Frampton and Elizabeth Willoughby, became as above stated, possessed of the manor and estates of Moreton. 2. JOHN, b. in 1582, who succeeded his brother at Gracedieu, and was created a BARONET, 29th June, 1626. This gentleman enjoyed considerable reputation as a poet, and is highly commended by his contemporaries. His chief work was "Bosworth Field," a poem, descriptive of the famous battle fought there between

RICHARD III. and the Earl of Richmond, meriting (to quote the opinion of Headley) republication, for the easy flow of its numbers and the spirit with which it is written. His minor productions have been much admired, and the verses he addressed to King JAMES I. on the true form of English poetry, entitle their author to a place among the most judicious critics of his time. 3. FRANCIS, born at Gracedieu, in 1586, the celebrated Dramatic poet. In 1596, this distinguished person was admitted (with his two brothers, Henry and John,) a gentleman commoner of Broadgate's Hall, now Pembroke College, Oxford, and he subsequently became a member of the Inner Temple. The Dramatic muse had, however, too many attractions to allow him to apply with much assiduity to the dry study of the laws, and so early as 1607, when BEAUMONT was in his twenty-first year, his first play, in conjunction with FLETCHER, is dated. The connexion of these gifted writers continued during the short span

ERLE-DRAX, OF CHARBOROUGH.

DRAX-ERLE SAWBRIDGE, JOHN-SAMUEL-WANLEY, esq. of Charborough Park, in the county of Dorset, and of Ellerton Abbey, in Yorkshire, b. 6th October, 1800, m. 1st May, 1827, at St. George's Church, Hanover Square, London, Jane-Frances, only daughter of Richard-Erle-Drax Grosvenor, esq. and has issue, Maria-Caroline.

Sarah Frances-Elizabeth.

This gentleman, whose patronymic is SAWBRIDGE, succeeded to the estates in right of his wife, upon the demise of that lady's brother, Richard-Edward Erle-Drax, esq., 13th August, 1828, and assumed in consequence, the surnames and arms of ERLE-DRAX. He is Captain in the East Kent militia, and Captain Commandant of the Charborough Yeomanry Cavalry, which troop he raised and maintained at his own expense during the disturbances in the year 1830.

Lineage.

The Erles are of ancient and knightly descent. The first ancestor that occurs in the pedigree is Henry de Erle, Lord of Newton in Somersetshire, 35 HENRY III., but the family was long previously settled in that county: so far back as the 7th HENRY II. John de Erlegh paid five marks for the scutage of his lands at Beckington in Somersetshire. He died 11 HENRY II. and was succeeded by WILLIAM DE ERLEGH, his son, who is certified to hold a knight's fee in capite of the King, by which he had a right to be his Chamberlain. This William founded Buckland Priory, and was father of John de Erlegh, who paid scutage 6 RICHARD I. and 1 JOHN, holding the manor and hundred of North Petherton, in the county of Somerset. He left a son and successor, William de Erlegh, who had issue, John, who d. s. p. 12 HENRY III. and HENRY, sheriff of Dorset and Somerset in that year. The descendant of the latter, JOHN DE ERLE, served in the Scottish wars of that monarch's reign. He was sheriff of the two counties, and knight of the shire temp. EDWARD II. His grandson, SIR JOHN DE ERLEGH, attended the Black Prince at the battle of Najara, and participated in several other engagements in Spain, in one of which he was wounded and taken prisoner, and as ransom, was obliged to sell a considerable portion of his ancient inheritance. He was succeeded in the remainder by his eldest son, SIR JOHN DE ERLEGH, whose only daughter, Margaret,* marrying John

St. Maur, conveyed to her husband the manor of Beckington.

The descendant of a branch of this ancient line,

WALTER ERLE, esq. (son of John Erle of Culhampton in Devon, by Thomasine, daughter of — Beare, of Somersetshire, and grandson of John Erle of Culhampton, who was son of John the second son of John Erle of Ashburton in Devon,) became possessed of Charborough, in the county of Dorset, by his marriage with Margery, daughter and co-heir of Richard Wikes, of Charborough, who had inherited Charborough from the family of Camel of Shakwycke and Charborough. Walter Erle d. in 1581, leaving issue,

THOMAS, his heir.

Honor, m. to John Giffard, esq. of Brightley. (See p. 293.)

The son and heir,

THOMAS ERLE, esq. of Charborough, who m. Dorothy, daughter of William Pole, esq. of Columpton, in the county of Devon, and by her, who m. 2ndly, Sir Walter Vaughan, knt. had issue,

I. WALTER, his heir.

II. Christopher, of Stourminster Marshal.

III. John, d. young.

IV. Thomas, d. young in 1592.

I. Elizabeth, m. to Sir Richard Strode, knt. of Devon.

II. Dorothy, d. young.

Thomas Erle died 16th March, 1597, and was interred at East Morden, where a handsome monument is erected to his memory. His son and successor,

SIR WALTER ERLE, of Charborough, received the honour of knighthood in 1616, and in 1641, was one of the managers against the Earl of Strafford at his trial. On the breaking out of the civil wars he sided with the parliament, and the active part he bore in those unhappy times, may be seen in Rushworth and Whitlock. He was governor of Dorchester and lieutenant of the Ordnance, in which latter appointment he succeeded Mr. Pym in 1643. In 1645 he deciphered some important letters which had been intercepted, and received for this service the thanks of the House of Commons. In 1646, he was one of the four commissioners to the King for peace; and in 1647, a commission passed for him to be master of the Ordnance. Sir Walter, together with Mr. Hollis, and other Ephori, (as Lord Clarendon styles them), and 7000 foot, 800 horse, and four pieces of cannon, came from Wells to Sherbourne to oppose the Marquis of Hertford. On the approach of the Earl of Caernarvon, he raised the siege of Corfe Castle.

Sir Walter m. Anne, daughter and heir of Francis Dymoke, and sister of Sir Henry Dymoke, kn. and with her acquired the manors of Erckington and Pipe, in the county of Warwick, which he sold, 1 CHARLES I. to Sir Walter Devereux, bart. By this lady, who d. in 1665, he had issue,

THOMAS, aged 2, in 1623, who m. Susanna, 4th daughter of William Fiennes, 3rd Viscount Say and Sele, and by her, who m. 2ndly, Robert Hawley, esq. left at his decease, which occurred during the lifetime of his father, two sons and two daughters. The former were Walter, who m. Anne, daughter of Thomas Trenchard, esq. and THOMAS, of whom presently, as successor to his grandfather.

Anne, m. to Norton of Hampshire.

Sir Walter died in 1665, and his son having pre-deceased him, the estates eventually devolved on his grandson,

GENERAL THOMAS ERLE, of Charborough, a military officer of high reputation, who commanded in Ireland and Flanders in the wars of King WILLIAM and Queen ANNE: in 1714 he was appointed lieutenant-general of the Ordnance, governor of Portsmouth and Southsea Castle, and in 1716 made general of foot. He was likewise privy councillor to Queen ANNE and GEORGE I. "At the battle of Aghrim in 1691, Major-general Mackay, observing several bodies of the enemy's horse and foot draw off from the line and move towards the road, where they were hard put to it by the English, laid hold of the opportunity, and ordered his troops to march over the bog which fronted the enemy's main body. The regiments of ERLE, Herbert, Creighton, and Brewer, going over the narrowest place, where the hedges on the hostile side ran farthest into the bog, they had orders to march to the lowest of the ditches adjoining to the side of the bog, and there to post themselves till the horse should come about by Aghrim Castle and sustain them, and till the other foot had marched over the other bog before, where it was broader, and were supported by Foulks and Brigadier Stuart's regiment. Erle's, and the other three regiments, pursuant to their orders, advanced over the bog, most of them passing up to the middle in mud and water; and upon their near approach to the ditches, received the enemy's fire, which yet did not hinder them from marching to the lowest hedge, and beating the Irish from them, and so on from hedge to hedge, till they were got very near their main body. But the Irish had so well ordered the matter, that they had an easy passage for their horse among all these hedges and ditches; which yet being observed by the valiant Colonel Erle, he encouraged his men by telling them, "there was no way to come off but to be brave." However, the English being both flanked and fronted, and exposed to all the enemy's fire from the neighbouring hedges, were forced from their ground, and obliged to retreat again to the bog with considerable loss. And amongst others, the brave colonels Erle and Herbert being made prisoners, the former, after being twice taken and retaken, at last got clear of the enemy; but the other (as was reported), was barbarously murdered by the Irish, when they saw he was likely to be rescued."

General Erle commanded as lieutenant-general the centre of the army at the battle of Almanza in 1709, as the Earl of Galway did the left wing, and lost his right hand in the engagement.

This gallant officer m. Elizabeth, 2nd daughter of Sir William Wyndham, bart. of Orchard Wyndham in Somersetshire, and dying in 1720, left an only dau. and heir,

‡ The family of Drax appears to have been anciently seated in the county of York. In 1647, Colonel Drax, Colonel Modiford, Colonel Walrond, and other cavaliers, having converted their estates into money, and not being able to reside in England under the usurpation, retired to Barbadoes, where Colonel Drax acquired, in a few years, an estate of 8 or £9,000 per annum, and married the daughter of the Earl of Carlisle, then proprietor of the island.

He died 9th May, 1820, when his baronetcy expired. He had an only sister, Sarah Sophia, who died unmarried.

Family of Holme.

The family of Holme, from which Mr. Bankes, of Winstanley Hall, is paternally descended, has been seated in Lancashire, in different branches, from a period shortly subsequent to the Norman Conquest. The surname, which was originally and properly spelt Hulme, is local, and derived from the manor of that name between Trafford and Manchester, formerly possessed by the family.

In the 3rd vol. of Holinshed's Chronicle, among the number of the Norman gentlemen attending on William the Conqueror, is mentioned the Seigneur de Houlme, but whether he was the father of Ranulph or Randulphus, who was possessed of Hulme about the end of the 11th century, is not clearly ascertained. The great-grandson of this Randulphus,

JOHN DE HULME, knt. "occupied the ancient manor-house, temp. HENRY II."

THOMAS DE HULME, of Hulme, son and heir, anno 2 RICHARD I.

SIMON DE HULME, of Hulme, son and heir.

ADAM DE HULME, of Hulme, son and heir.

THOMAS DE HULME, of Hulme, son and heir, temp. HENRY III.

ADAM DE HULME, of Hulme Hall, son and heir, living 34 EDWARD I.

THOMAS DE HULME, of Hulme Hall, son and heir, living anno 30 EDWARD I. left issue.

Geoffrey de Hulme, knt. eldest son and heir, mentioned as tenant of Hulme in the Roll of those holding under the Earl of Lancaster in 1311, d. s. p.

JOHN DE HULME, who succeeded his brother.

Robert de Hulme, one of the Lancashire gentlemen who made oath at Preston, A.D. 1359, before Thomas de Seton and others, touching certain differences between Roger le Ware, lord of Manchester, and the bailiffs of the Duke of Lancaster. (Corry's Lanc. Part iv. p. 398.) From a son of this Robert a family of Hulme claimed descent, which is mentioned in the Visitation of 1664, and is supposed to be still existing.

Felicia de Hulme, m. Ralph de Wilburgham, lord of Radnor, ancestor of Lord Skelmersdale.

JOHN DE HULME, succeeded his elder brother Geoffrey, and was father of

SIR WILLIAM (OR RALPH) DE HULME, knt. of Hulme Hall, who obtained the augmentation of the canton argent charged with a chaplet gules, which his descendants still bear in their arms, for his services in France, where he received knighthood from the Black Prince; he afterwards served in Spain, and went on an embassy to the court of Castile. He was living anno 46 EDWARD III. His son and heir,

JACOBUS, OR JAMES DE HULME, of Hulme Hall, was living as late as the 9th year of HENRY V., when he was one of the witnesses to the license for the foundation of Manchester College by Thomas de la Warr. He was succeeded at Hulme by his son William, who either alienated or forfeited the manor of Hulme, as Radulphus de Prestwyche appears seised of it anno 1434-9, and it continued in the Prestwyche family more than two hundred years. The descendants of William de Hulme continued however to hold property near Hulme, till the line terminated somewhere about the end of the 17th century in an heiress, who m. George Hope, esq. of Hope Hall. But the younger brother of James de Hulme, WILLIAM HOLME, (the name so spelt in the Cheshire Visitations), "second son of Holme, of Holme, county of Lancaster," (Chesh. Vis. 1566, fol. 73.) settled at Tilston, in Cheshire, and left issue by a daughter of — Pygot (?), of Limme, county of Chester, a son,

Lineage.

The family of Cleland (formerly spelt Kneland) is of great antiquity in Scotland. Their coat of Arms, tradition states, was acquired by their being hereditary foresters to the ancient Earls of Douglas.

JAMES CLELAND, of that Ilk, in the county of Lanark, ancestor of the Clelands of that Ilk and of several other families of the same surname,† joined his cousin Sir William Wallace in the year 1296, for the relief of his country against the English, along with the following noblemen and gentlemen, viz.

* By his wife, Anne, daughter of William Hawkins, esq. of Abingdon, and his wife Henrietta Baker.

He was present at, and assisted Sir William Wallace in most of his exploits, particularly in taking prisoner Thomas of Longueville, commonly called the Red Rover; Blind Harry in his History of Wallace, in enumerating the friends of Wallace, he says:

"Kneland was yar, ner cusyng to Wallace, Synne baid with hym in mony perelows place."

And in relating the battle at sea with "The Red Reffayr," Wallace says:

"Kneland, cusyng, cum tak ze ster in hand,
Her on ye wail ner by ye I sall stand."

After the death of Sir William Wallace he firmly supported the cause of King ROBERT the Bruce, and for his loyalty and good services that king gave to him several lands in the Barony of Calder, in West Lothian.

WILLIAM CLELAND, of that Ilk, was fifth in descent from the above James Cleland, and in the reign of King JAMES III. of Scotland, about the year 1462, m. Jean Somerville, daughter of William de Somerville, second Lord Somerville, by his wife Janet Mowat, daughter of Sir John Mowat, of Stenhouse. His son and successor,

ALEXANDER CLELAND, of that Ilk, was killed on the 9th September, 1513, at the fatal battle of Flodden, along with his cousin William Cleland, of Faskine, fighting valiantly in defence of their king, JAMES IV. of Scotland. To a charter of the date 1498,

* This Janet Muirhead, who, for her great beauty was commonly called, "The Fair Maid," or, "The Bonny Lass of Lechbrunach," was daughter of Sir William Muirhead, of Lauchop, by his wife Dame Jane Hay, daughter of Sir William Hay, of Locharret, ancestor of the Lords of Yester, and of the Earls and Marquises of Tweeddale, was married "de facto," privately, "sed non de jure secundum canones," to Gavin Hamilton, son of Sir James Hamilton, of Cadyow, and brother-german to James, first Lord Hamilton. The marriage, they say, was private, and the parties, "inter gradus a jure prohibitos," within the degrees of consanguinity, prohibited by the canons or laws of the church; and a previous dispensation had not been obtained by them from the pope before the marriage, and the children so procreate, "ex occulto et clandestino matrimonio," were looked on as spurious. However, this lady bore five sons, and after that he left off cohabiting with the gentlewoman, he went into orders, and came to be provost of the collegiate church at Bothwell, of the Earl of Douglas's patronage.

He does not, indeed, call his children his own sons, when he disposes the lands of Orbieston to the eldest, Mr. Robert Hamilton, whom he

By Matilda his wife, Richard de Ryvers had three sons, 1, Richard; 2, John; and 3, Baldwin; Richard, the eldest, died in the lifetime of his mother, leaving Richard his only son and heir (for whose wardship Philip Basset gave 1000 marks) surviving, who had in frankmarriage the manors of Westthrop and Hampton, in Wiltshire, and Storden, in Gloucestershire, &c.; he d. s. p., and was succeeded by his uncle, JOHN DE RYVERS, de Ripariis, of Ongar Castle, Lord of Ongar, Stanford Ryvers, Tormerton, Littleton, &c.; he d. 22 EDWARD I. leaving two sons,

1. JOHN, his heir.

ii. Richard, who had the manors of Westthrop and Hampton, ratione fratris, he left two sons, John and Richard, who succeeded to them, and d. s. p.

The elder son,

JOHN, LORD DE RYVERS, of Ongar Castle, Lord of Ongar, Tormerton, Littleton, &c. was summoned to and sat in Parliament.

as a baron, by the name of Johannes de Ripariis, on the 8th March, 1299, 6th March, 1300, 20th January, 1301, and, on the 12th February following, joined the barons in an address to the Pope, which he signed by the style and title of "Johannes de Ripariis, Du's de Angre;" his lordship was also summoned to, and sat in Parliament as a baron, on the 1st July and 29th September, 1302, 16th February, 1305, 20th January, and 13th October, 1307; Lord de Ryvers was summoned amongst the barons to the coronation of King EDWARD the Second, on the 18th February, 1308; he d. s. p. 5 EDWARD II. seized of "Aungre Hundr," leaving two sons; 1, John; and 2, Sir RICHARD, of Ryvers Hall, of whom presently; he was succeeded in his title and estates by his eldest son and heir,

JOHN, LORD DE RYVERS, de Ripariis, of Ongar Castle, Lord of Ongar, Tormerton, Littleton, &c. who was summoned to, and sat in Parliament as a baron, on the 18th March, 8th July, and 23rd September, 1313, 21st April, and 9th September, 1314, and 20th January, 1315, and d. s. p. 8 EDWARD II. seized of the manors of Esthornyngdone Somerset, Tormerton and Littleton, Wormenhale, Bucks, Wotton, (or Wootton-Ryvers) Wilts, and half a knight's fee in Acton-Turvile, Glouc., leaving by Dionysia his wife, who had the township of Stretlee, in Cambridgeshire, a son and heir only; JOHN DE RYVERS, who sold the Ongar estate to John de Sutton 13 EDWARD III. and d. s. p. 32 EDWARD III. His uncle and heir,

SIR RICHARD DE RYVERS, de Ripariis, of Ryvers Hall, and Boxted, in Essex, succeeded to the manors of Tormerton, Littleton, Westrop, Hampton, Wyke, Storden, &c. and m. first, Maude, daughter and heiress of Sir John le Breton, who died 34 EDWARD I. seized of certain demesnes in Boxted, and lands at Dodyngton, Blatherwyk, and Leyton, or Laxton, in Northamptonshire, by whom he had one child, Margaret, who d. s. p. 49 EDWARD III. seized of the Dodyngton and Blatherwyk estate, which ultimately passed to Sir Robert de Swillington hereafter noticed.

Sir Richard de Ryvers m. secondly, Matilda, the daughter and heiress of Sir John de Heriz, of South Winfield, in Derbyshire, who settled by fine, 18 EDWARD II., the manors of Widmerpool and Gunnelveston, in Nottinghamshire and Winfield (or South Winfield) and Tibshelf, in Derbyshire, on himself for life; then on Roger Beler (of whom presently) for his life; afterwards to Roger, the son of Roger Beler, and Margaret, the elder daughter of Sir Richard de Ryvers (therein called Richard de la Ryvere, Knight) and the heirs of their bodies; afterwards to Thomas, son of Roger Beler, and Margaret the younger daughter of Sir Richard de Ryvers (or De la Ryvere) and the heirs of their bodies; remainder to the right heirs of Sir John de Heriz, who d. s. p. seized of these manors, 3 EDWARD III.

Sir John de Heriz was the son and heir of John, brother and heir of Henry, grandson and heir of Robert, brother and heir of William de Heriz, of Wyverton, in Nottinghamshire, a branch by a younger son of the House of Vendôme, and who is mentioned under the scutage of the barons, 18 HENRY II.

The issue of Sir Richard de Ryvers and Matilda de Heriz his second wife were three daughters; Margaret the elder, and Margaret the younger, of whom presently; and Sarah, who m. John Garlek, who had with her a moiety of the Dodyngton estate, by whom she had Walter, her only child, who d. s. p., hence the entirety of that property passed to Sir Robert de Swillington.

Sir Richard de Ryvers d. s. p. 36 EDWARD III. leaving also by Emma his third wife, two sons, SIR THOMAS, and Henry, who had Tormerton, ratione fratriagii, and was high sheriff of Gloucestershire. He d. s. p. 3 HENRY IV.

The son of Sir Richard, by Emma, his third wife,

SIR THOMAS DE RYVERS, succeeded to the manors of Tormerton,* Littleton, Westrop, Hampton, Wyke, Storden, &c. and d. s. p. 7 HENRY IV., seized of Westrop manor, leaving Isabel, his wife, surviving, who had the manors of Tormerton, Littleton, Shirwell, and Yate, of which she d. s. p. 15 HENRY VI. The lineage, therefore, of Sir Richard de Ryvers by his first and third wives became entirely extinct. Sir Thomas's half sister, MARGARET DE RYVERS the elder, m. Sir ROGER BELER.

Previously to continuing the descendants of Margaret de Ryvers, we will give some details of the family of her husband:

Sir Roger Beler was the eldest son of Roger, Lord Beler, baron of Criche, in Derbyshire, who had there a capital mansion, park, and jurisdiction, 18 EDWARD II. son of William de Beler, of Kirkby Park, in Leicestershire, 14 EDWARD I., son of Roger, son of Ralph, Lord Beler, son of Sampson, son of Hamon, Lord Beler, who took that surname, son of Nigel, Lord

* Tormerton very anciently had its baronial hall, the principal part of which was demolished in the great rebellion, but the ruins of a stately lodge appear to have been standing in the last century. The manor had passed through the families of Willington and Drayton, by whom it had been held at intervals. After the family of De Ryvers, Sir John St. Loe became the next proprietor.

D'Albini and Gundred, his wife, daughter of Hugh, Earl of Gournay, and Editha, his wife, daughter of William, Earl of Warrenne and Gundred, his wife, daughter of WILLIAM I. King of England, and Maude, the Queen, daughter of Baldwin, Count of Flanders, whose mother, Alice, was the daughter of Robert, King of France.

Lord Beler of Criche, by Alice his wife, the daughter of William, son of Peter de Wakebrugge and Juliana his wife, the sister of Hubert Fitz-Ralph, Baron of Criche, in the reign of King JOHN, had two sons and a daughter: Sir Roger before mentioned (whose issue by Margaret de Ryvers the elder, and his other wives will be noticed presently); Thomas, of whom hereafter; and Avice, who m. Sir Ralph Cromwell, the grandfather of Ralph, Lord Cromwell, Baron of Tatshall, and treasurer of England, temp. HENRY VI.

The manor of Criche, or Cruch, was purchased by Lord Beler, of Ralph, Lord Frescheville, who in right of this manor was summoned to and sat in Parliament, as a peer of the realm, on the 24th February, 1297, (25 EDWARD I.) and who conveyed it by feoffment and fine 18 EDWARD II., with license of the king, to him and his heirs for ever. Lord Beler held the manor of Criche by Barony, viz. of the King in capite, as of his crown, by the service of one knight's fee, and so d. seized of it in his own demesne as of fee, 19 EDWARD II.; he also d. seized of Bunny Park, in Nottinghamshire, and other considerable possessions. The tragical rencontre which occasioned his death is recorded as follows:—

Eustace de Folville, of Ashby Folville, his two brothers, and Eudo de la Zouch, of Haryngworth, having been threatened by Lord Beler, one of the justices itinerant, and very old, they way-laid and barbarously murdered the judge, in a valley near Reresby. Dodsworth has this remark on the occurrence: "Anno mcccxxvi., quarto Kal. Februarii occisus est Dominus Rogerus Beler in comitatu Leycestrie. Iste Rogerus fundavit cantariam secularium sacerdotum apud Kirkeby Beler, in comitatu Leycestrie; quam post multos annos uxor ejusdem Rogeri, cum concessu Rogeri filiorum, transtulit in usum canonicorum regularium, instituens ibidem primum priorem loci de Abbatia de Olvestone. Hic Rogerus occisus est a quodam Eustachio de Folville, ac fratribus suis, quibus prius minas ingererat et injurias; interfectus erat a tribus fratribus in quadam valle juxta Reresby. Hic oppressor fuit ecclesiarum et aliorum vicinorum religiosorum, pro cupiditate possessionum, quas cupierit ad donationem cantarie sue."

The Folvilles being indicted for the murder, their lands at Reresby were seized by the king, and were never restored to them.

"Anno 1326, Eudo de la Zouch indictatus pro morte ejusdem Rogeri de Beler, ob metum indictmenti transfretavit sine licentia Regis; et ea occasione terre ejus capte sunt in manum d'ni Regis, et idem Eudo obiit Parisiis eodem anno."

In Ashby Folville church, says Wyrley, is an ancient altar tomb of one of the Folvilles, in armour; on his breast, the crest of Folville, but no inscription. This monument is still in the South chapel, under the South window, and is said to be for old Folville who slew Beler. A large rusty helmet remains on it with part of his gauntlets and several fragments of armour. Folville's effigy is mutilated; the features of the face scarcely visible; his arms broken off; shoes square toed, which rest against a lion couchant regardant; a girdle round his waist, but no sword; his breast very prominent; on the right side of which is an iron blunted spike, or dagger, fixed in the stone with lead, apparently coeval with the figure itself; his head rested on a double pillow, which appears to have been originally supported by two angels, their hands and part of the drapery being yet visible.

The church at Criche contains an old tomb, and upon it an effigy, according to the tradition of the place, of Lord Beler.

His lordship was succeeded in his title and estates, which were very considerable, by his eldest son,

SIR ROGER BELER, who, paying his relief and doing his homage, had livery of his lands; he m. firstly, Margaret de Ryvers the elder, before mentioned, by whom he had one child only, Margaret, who m. Sir Robert de Swillington, and afterwards John de Aylesford, by the latter she had no issue: by Sir Robert de Swillington, who d. 15 RICHARD II. seized of Ryvers Hall, Boxted, Brampton, and the Dodyngton estate, she had a son and heir; Sir Roger de Swillington, who had two sons and one daughter only: Sir John and Sir Robert, who had both d. s. p., the former 6 HENRY V. and the latter, 8 HENRY V. and Margaret, heiress, who m. Sir John Gra of Ingleby, in Lincolnshire, and who d. s. p. 8 HENRY VI. Sir Roger Beler m. secondly, Margaret, (the daughter of John, Lord Grey, of Codnor Castle) who d. 8 EDWARD III., by whom he had no issue; thirdly, Elizabeth, who d. 36 EDWARD III., by whom he had no issue; fourthly, Catharine, who d. 5 RICHARD II., by whom he had one child only, Thomasine (co-heiress with his daughter Margaret by his first wife) who d. 5 RICHARD II. and was never married; fifthly, Mary, who died 15 RICHARD II. by whom he had no issue. Hence the lineage of Lord Beler, the son, became entirely extinct; his lordship held the manor of Criche, by barony, as his father did, and so died seised of it in his own demesne, as of fee, 4 RICHARD II.; he also died seised of Bunny, Widmerpool, Gunnelveston, South Winfield, Tibshelf, and a large estate.

It should be observed, that Sir John Gra, and Margaret, his wife, settled part of the Heriz and Beler estates on the family of Pierrepointe (Sir Robert de Pierrepointe having married Sarah, the sister of Sir John de Heriz) and Criche, Bunny, and South Winfield, on the family of Cromwell, before spoken of, about which estates, for a series of years afterwards, they had great suits and controversies. Lord Cromwell, however, in the reign of HENRY VI. erected a magnificent mansion at South Winfield, memorable from the circumstance of the unfortunate Mary, the Scottish queen, being imprisoned there, in charge of George, Earl of Shrewsbury, to whose ancestor the Crom-wells sold the manor. The extensive and interesting ruins of this stately edifice, which was dismantled in the civil war, the grandeur of its woodland scenery, their solemn and impressive effect, excite the admiration of every tourist.

TAYLOR, OF PENNINGTON.

TAYLOR, PRINGLE, esq. of Pennington House, in the county of Southampton, a major in the army, and a knight of the Royal Guelphic order, m. at St. Marylebone, London, on 12th July, 1827, Adelaide-Frances, eldest daughter of Colonel John Shedden,* formerly of the 15th Hussars, of Eastonton, near Andover, and of Efford, near Lymington, Hants, by Sophia-Elizabeth, daughter of Matthew Lewis, deputy-secretary at war, (by Fanny-Maria, daughter of Sir Robert Sewell, bart.), and co-heiress with her sister Maria, wife of Sir Henry Lushington, bart. on the death of their brother, Matthew-Gregory Lewis, esq. M.P. author of the Monk, &c. By this marriage Major Pringle Taylor has had issue,

JOHN-CORTLANDT SKINNER, b. 4th September, 1828.
 Lewis-William Mulcaster, b. 28th February, 1830.

 19th April, 1832, and buried at Boldre.
 Isabel-Sophia-Eliza, b. 25th January, 1833.

From Major Pringle Taylor first entering the army in 1811, his conduct and character acquired for him the most honourable testimonials from every officer under whom he served: his behaviour in battle was noticed on several occasions with the highest applause, particularly as Brigade-Major to the Cavalry at Ashta, on the 20th February, 1818 (the Action of most importance from its results of any fought during the Deccan War, and which was confined to the Cavalry peculiarly under his control, upon the Brigadier-General falling insensible from a sabre wound); and also as a volunteer in leading the Forlorn Hope on the storm of Copaul, on the 13th May, 1819, when he was shot through the body and lungs, at the moment of complete success, in the capture of that strongly fortified hill. For his services during the Deccan War, he was recommended on "public grounds," by General the Marquess of Hastings, Governor General of India, for the favourable consideration of His Royal Highness the Duke of York, Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

Major Pringle Taylor served in the East Indies in the late 22nd Light Dragoons, and on the Staff in the field in that country; in the interior of the Cape of Good Hope colony, in the late Cape corps of Cavalry; in the Mediterranean, in the 95th Regiment; a short time in England in that corps, and also for one year in the 61st Regiment, from which he retired on half pay as major.

Lineage.

The name of this family has not been exempted from the corruption in spelling, which is to be traced in the records of many other family names.

Their ancestor was the Norman Baron Taillefer, who accompanied WILLIAM the Conqueror in his invasion of Great Britain, and of whom Wace, the Anglo-Norman poet, speaks, in describing the battle of Hastings, which took place on Saturday, the 14th October, 1066.

Taillefer qui moult bien chantoit
 Sur un cheval qui tot alloit
 Devant eux alloit chantant

De Kalemagne et de Roland
 Et D'Olivier et des Vassals
 Qui moururent a Rousecvalles.

A deed bearing date 19th November, 1681, conveys from certain Indians therein named to the Lady (Elizabeth) Carteret, in trust for Matthew Taylor, of New York, a tract of land on the Rariton river, beginning at a place called Aqueckson and running to Tuckaramochachinge, in depth on both sides of the river four miles. Matthew Taylor, by his will dated at New York in 1687, bequeathed ten guineas to his friend J. This John was Sheriff of New Jersey, and for many years one of the Justices and one of the Judges of his Majesty's Court at Monmouth, in that Colony. On Lord Howe going out as Commissioner and Commander-in-Chief for the American colonies, Judge Taylor was appointed (1776) his Majesty's Lord High Commissioner for New Jersey. In which influential station the conscientious discharge of his duty, added to the fact of all his children having joined the British army, brought down upon him the hostility of the revolutionary party, and the Colonial Association having declared in 1778, that any one who supported the British cause was guilty of high treason, Judge Taylor was imprisoned and tried for his life on several indictments for high treason; his property was at the same time seized and appropriated to the use of the revolted state; and he was subsequently obliged to accept for that property, sold at the greatest disadvantage, the bills of Congress, when those bills were scarcely worth anything. Lineage.

The old and knightly family of Trafford, seated at Trafford, in the county Palatine of Lancaster, from a period antecedent to the Norman conquest, has preserved time memorial an unbroken male-descent. The first recorded ancestor,

RANDOLPHUS DE TRAFFORD, who flourished "ante Conquestum," as the family pedigree sets forth, was father of another

RANDOLPHUS, of whom mention is made in two deeds to "Radulphus filius Radulphi," by which it appeareth that Radulphus, the father, "was then dead and had flourished in King CANUTE the Dane his time, about the yeare 1030, and perhaps died after in St. Edward the Confessor his time, about the year 1050: hee had noe surname, as then few of our Saxon nobilitie or gentry had." Randolphus was Lord of this family and in age. (his son Robert, grandchild to Randle, being then at man's estate), at or immediately after the conquest, and about the year 1080, Radulph and his son, received the King's peace and protection from Sir Hamon

To Geoffrey he assigned the manor of Catherton and Foxdenton, "which he and his ancestors possessed long," and to the elder son, OLIPHANT, OF GASK.

OLIPHANT, JAMES-BLAIR, esq. of Gask, in the county of Perth, succeeded his brother Laurence in 1825, and is a deputy lieutenant for Perthshire.

Lineage.

The family of Oliphant, of Gask, has long been recognised as representing in the male line, the ancient and ennobled house of Oliphant; and it may be remarked as a singular circumstance that beside their male descent, now about to be traced, they are also by two marriages heirs-general to the last acknowledged Lord Oliphant, and to the principal branch of the family derived from William, of Berriedale, second son of the first lord.

Referring to Chalmers' Caledonia, and the Peerages of Scotland, for the more early pedigree, it is only necessary to mention that the sixth in descent from Sir William Oliphant, of Aberdalgie, the knightly warrior, who so gallantly defended Stirling Castle against EDWARD I. in 1304, and whose tombstone is still extant, recording his death on the 5th February, 1329, was

LAURENCE OLIPHANT, a minor in 1450, who was created BARON OLIPHANT before 1456, when he got a seisin of Auchterhouse, and was designed a noble and worshipful man, Laurence, Lord Oliphant and Aberdalgie. He obtained bonds of manrent from thirteen gentlemen in his neighbourhood, binding themselves to be his followers. He d. soon after 1495, leaving two sons, namely,

JOHN, his heir.

William, of Berriedale, who m. Christian, only daughter and heir of Alexander Sutherland, of Duffus, in Moray, Strabrok, in Linlithgow, and Berriedale, in Caithness. As the connexion with the latter county is important to the history of this family, it may be remarked that Christian, besides representing a branch of the Earls of Sutherland, and the Morays, Cheynes, and Chisholms, of Moray, was co-heir to the earldom of Caithness, of which she inherited a fourth part. Their son Andrew was so harassed in that district, where he was looked on as an intruder, that at length having no son by Dame Janet Sinclair his wife, he gave up his estates to his chief in 1520, on condition that Lord Oliphant should provide suitable matches and tochers (fortunes) for his daughters. He accordingly married two of the three to cousins of his and their own, probably at a small expense, viz.

MARGARET, m. to WILLIAM OLIPHANT of Newton.

KATHERINE, m. to Andrew Oliphant, of Binzian.

HELEN.

The eldest son,

JOHN, 2nd LORD OLIPHANT, was served heir in 1500. He had been married by his father to Elizabeth daughter of Colin, first Earl of Argyll; and her brother Archibald, second earl, settled lands upon them by indenture, 10th October, 1493, a few months after he succeeded his father. His lordship d. in 1516, leaving his wife surviving.

His eldest son,

COLIN, MASTER OF OLIPHANT, never succeeded, having been slain at Flodden in 1513. He had a grant of lands to himself and Elizabeth Keith, his spouse, 1st March, 1504-5. By that lady, who survived him, and m. William, Lord Sinclair, the Master left two sons, viz.

1. LAURENCE, third Lord Oliphant, then a minor, who is designed son and heir of Umquhill Colin, Master of Oliphant, and grandson and heir of the said Umquhill John, Lord Oliphant, 18th November, 1516, when a gift of the ward of his lands passed. From him descended the succeeding lords down to 1748. The third lord purchased his cousin's whole estate in Caithness, of which he had a charter 30th March, 1526, and another 28th Jan. 1552-3, when the non-entry duties for 120 years amounted to £7000. He d. at Aldwick, in Caithness, 26th March, 1566, leaving LAURENCE fourth Lord Oliphant, whose elder son Laurence dying before him, left one son, LAURENCE, fifth Lord, heir to his grandfather in 1593, father of an only child ANNE, whose claim to the peerage was compromised by giving her husband the title of Mordington, while that of Oliphant was confirmed to her father's cousin-german Patrick, grandson of the fourth Lord by his only younger son, John. PATRICK, who thus became sixth Lord, had by his first wife an only child, m. to SIR LAURENCE OLIPHANT, of Gask; and by his second wife, had Charles, seventh Lord; William, ninth Lord; and Francis, tenth Lord, who d. without issue, in 1748.

II. WILLIAM, of whose line we have to treat.

The second son,

WILLIAM OLIPHANT, of Newton, in Perthshire, (brother to Laurence, third Lord Oliphant), is mentioned in a complaint to the Privy Council, 21st November, 1587, by Laurence, Lord Oliphant, against George, Earl of Caithness, that Daniel Sinclair natural brother of the earl, in July, 1583, had got William Oliphant, of Newton, forth of the town and lands of Thrumbister, then possessed by the said William Oliphant as tenant to the said lord. His relationship to his nephew is again specified in the same record and in the same year, as well as in 1606, proving the correctness of the old and almost contemporary MSS. of Lord Ochiltree, of Sir Patrick Lyon, of Carse, Lord of Sessions, of Sir George Mackenzie, Lord Advocate, and of an unknown author whose papers are at Gask, who unite in saying that Colin, Master of Oliphant, had a second son who was styled of Newton. The last also mentions his marriage to Margaret Oliphant, heir of Berrydale and Strabrok. This alliance, which accounts for William's residing so much in Caithness, has already been noticed, and is verified by various judicial proceedings in 1551, 1553, and 1556-7, when the parties are stated to be Margaret Oliphant, Katherine Oliphant, and Helen Oliphant "airs of Berridale, William Oliphant, spouse to the said Margaret, &c. &c. also Margaret Oliphant, eldest dochter to Umquhill Dame Janet Sinclair, Lady Berydail, and William Oliphant her spouse. Again, Margaret Oliphant, Katherine Oliphant, and Helen Oliphant, dochteris and airs of Umquhill Andre Oliphant of Berydail." There is still further confirmation from the surrender in 1625, by Laurence Oliphant of Gask, grandson and heir of Margaret Oliphant and William Oliphant, of Newton, of all claim to Strabrok, which had belonged to her father Andre of Berydail. This William Oliphant, of Newton, had two sons, LAURENCE and John, as appears from a settlement, 19th December, 1586, on John, upon his agreeing to surrender a deed, by which his father had disinherited his brother in his favour. He had a remission for slaughter, 1576.

The elder son,

LAURENCE OLIPHANT, sometimes styled, of Newton, and sometimes of Thrumster, who was, from his extreme height, called Long Laurence, succeeded his father, and on the 10th November, 1575, an action was raised against him as son of William Oliphant, of Newton. He m. Mary, daughter of Andrew Rollo, of Duncrub, ancestor of the Lords Rollo, and had Laurence his heir; Captain Patrick, John and William. The eldest son,

LAURENCE OLIPHANT, of Gask, formerly of Ross, and in Lamerkin, from his residence previous to the acquisition of Gask. On the 12th March, 1601, in a deed by George, Earl of Caithness, who finally bought up all Lord Oliphant's rights in 1606, he says, "understanding that Umquhill William Oliphant, of Newton, kindly tenant of Thrumbister, and Laurence Oliphant, grandson to the said William, also kindly tenant of Thrumbister," &c. On the 6th Apr. 1605, he appears in an action against Sir James Scott, of Balweary, as eldest lawful son of Umquhill Laurence Oliphant, of Thrumbister, whose obligation was dated in 1595; and on the 10th January, 1605, there is a ratification by Margaret Sinclair, Lady Westrow, to him as son of Laurence Oliphant, stillit of Newton. In 1606, he m. Lillias, daughter of Patrick Graham, of Inchbraikie (who had the gift of his escheat) relict of William Colville, of Condie, as whose widow she appears in a discharge penult March, 1621, with consent of her spouse Laurence Oliphant, "sone lawfull to Laurence Oliphant, sumtyme of Newton." He and Lillias Graham his wife had charters of Lamerk in 1616, Ross, 1618, and Gask in 1625, which last had for some time been the inheritance of a branch of the same noble family descended from the third lord. By the said Lillias, Laurence Oliphant had issue,

LAURENCE (Sir) his heir.

Patrick.

James, of Souterton.

William.

Jean, m. first to John Drummond, of Pitkellony, and secondly, to Gavin Drummond.

Margaret, m. to Alexander Inglis.

The eldest son,

SIR LAURENCE OLIPHANT, of Gask, was knighted before 1651. He m. in 1634, Lillias, only child of Patrick, sixth Lord Oliphant, by Elizabeth his first wife, daughter of Sir Patrick Cheyne, knight, of Esselmont, and had issue,

1. PATRICK, of whom presently.

- ii. Laurence, who, in 1659, had the estate settled on him by his father, and was styled younger of Gask. He m. in 1661, Anne, daughter of Sir George Preston, of Valleyfield, and had issue,

GEORGE.
LAURENCE.
WILLIAM.

Kate, m. to Hugh Paterson.
Anne.

Laurence Oliphant, d. before his father, in 1672. His widow m. secondly, James Hay, of Pitfour. Laurence's eldest son,

GEORGE OLIPHANT, s. his grandfather. He m. first, in 1681, Ann, daughter of Sir John Malcolm, baronet, of Balbedie, and secondly, in 1684, Jean, daughter of James, third Lord Burreigh; but dying in that year without issue, his only surviving brother, WILLIAM OLIPHANT, became of "Gask," but on his demise unmarried in 1704, it reverted to the right heirs.

- iii. Andrew.
iv. James.
v. David.

- vi. Archibald.
i. Lillias, m. in 1668, to James Graham, of Orchill.
ii. Ann, m. in 1672, to Colin Campbell, of Mougie.
iii. Elizabeth, m. to Gavin Drummond, of Belliclone.

Sir Laurence, who made his will, 5th June, 1679, d. on the 20th of the following July. His eldest son,

PATRICK OLIPHANT, of Williamston, incurred by his marriage the displeasure of his father, and was in consequence disinherited. He wedded Margaret, daughter of the Rev. John Murray, minister of Trinity, Gask, and sister of another Rev. John Murray, his successor therein. By her he had

- i. JAMES.
ii. Thomas.
iii. Laurence.
i. Anna.
ii. Lillias, m. 1694, to Mr. David Shaw, minister at Aberdalgie.
iii. Margaret.

Patrick Oliphant d. in 1694, and was s. by his son,

JAMES OLIPHANT, of Gask, who succeeded upon the demise of his cousin WILLIAM, in 1704. On the 16th July, 1689, he m. Janet, daughter of the Rev. Anthony Murray, of Woodend, from which family sprang the Duchess of Lauderdale, Countess of Dysart. She was co-heir to her brother Thomas Murray, of Woodend. They had

- i. LAURENCE.
ii. James.
iii. Thomas.

i. Lillias, m. 1718, Laurence Oliphant, of Condie.

ii. Catherine, m. Robert Græme, of Garvock. (See vol. iii. p. 126.)

The eldest son,

LAURENCE OLIPHANT, of Gask, b. 1691. m. the Honourable Amelia Nairne, daughter of William, second Lord Nairne, brother of John, first Duke of Athol, and had

- i. LAURENCE.
ii. Margaret, m. 1748, Patrick Græme, of Inchbraikie.

i. Janet, m. William-Drummond Macgregor, of Balhady.

The eldest son,

LAURENCE OLIPHANT, of Gask, m. in 1755, his cousin Margaret, daughter of Duncan Robertson, of Strowan, by the daughter of Lord Nairne. On the death of her brother the aged chief of Strowan, his grand-nephew, of Gask, became heir of line of the family, but the feudal predilections of this last of this Scots French gentleman in favour of heirs male, induced him to pass over his near relations and allow a search for any heir male, however distant, in preference. They had,

- i. LAURENCE.
i. A daughter, m. Alexander Stuart, of Bouskeid.
ii. Amelia, m. Charles Stuart, of Dalguise.
iii. Caroline, m. William, third Lord Nairne.
iv. Margaret, m. in April, 1811, Alexander Keith, of Ravelston.

The son and successor,

LAURENCE OLIPHANT, of Gask, m. the only daughter and heir of Dr. Joseph Robertson Blair, of Ardblair, by Rachel, daughter of James Blair, of Ardblair, and had,

- i. LAURENCE, who succeeded, but d. unmarried in 1825.
ii. JAMES-BLAIR.
i. Rachel, unmarried.
ii. Margaret, m. Mr. Kington.

The eldest son,

LAURENCE OLIPHANT, of Gask, dying unmarried in 1825, was s. by his brother the present JAMES BLAIR OLIPHANT, of Gask and Ardblair, who is thirteenth in descent from the first lord, and twenty-third from David, who is said to have been godson of King DAVID I. Being heir male of the only brother of the third lord, he appears to be the head of the family and has a claim to the peerage which King CHARLES I. after a celebrated trial in his own presence, adjudged to the heir male in 1633; while he at the same time conferred a new title with the same precedence on the husband of the heiress who thus got the style of Lord Mordington, with nearly 200 years antiquity. A curious instance of one peerage being split into two.

BURTON, OF LONGNER.

BURTON, ROBERT, esq., of Longner Hall, in the county of Salop, m. in 1798, Rose, second daughter and co-heir of John Smitheman, esq. of Little Wenlock, which lady d. in 1830, without issue. He s. his father in 1803, and served as high sheriff for Shropshire, in the following year.

Mr. Burton took down the old mansion house at Longner, and built an elegant Gothic residence on its site, the tomb of his ancestor being carefully preserved in the garden.

Lineage.

The Burtons of Longner in Shropshire, are by some conjectured to have come out of Yorkshire; and there are traditional accounts of their descent from Lionel, Duke of Clarence, by Alice Burton, and of their possessing Burton Constable, in Yorkshire, which was sold to Lord Scrope, in the reign of EDWARD III. But these facts are not well substantiated, while there is abundant proof of their having been seated for many centuries in Shropshire. One antiquary, viz. William Burton, B.L. in his Commentary on Antoninus's Itinerary, says, "they were of Shropshire, a family sometime for no ordinary relations, very gracious with the several princes of the royal house of York;" and another (Browne Willis, esq. M.P. of Whaddon, Bucks), tells us that "they were a family of great antiquity, being possessors of Longner in the time of EDWARD IV., and before that being seated at Burton or Boerton, in the parish of Condober, Shropshire." The name was anciently written de Burton, de Borton, de Burghton, Beorton, and Burton. By the Ledger book of Haghman Abbey, now in possession of the Corbets, of Sundorne, Shropshire, Roger de Burton gave to

Haghman Abbey, all the lands given his father, Thomas de Burton, on his marriage with the daughter of the Lord of Codarcote, from whom the descent may be traced as follows:—

THOMAS DE BURTON, m. Aliscia, daughter of John, Lord of Codarcote (now Cothercote) in the reign of HENRY III.

ROGER DE BURTON, living in the same reign.

WALTER DE BURTON, living in the tenth year of EDWARD II.

EDMUND DE BURGHTON, m. in the reign of EDWARD III. Agnes, daughter of Hugh de la Hulle de Wlonkeslowe. He was sheriff in 1371.

WILLIAM BEORTON, } living temp.
RICHARD DE BEORTON, } RICHARD II.
WILLIAM BURTON, }

WILLIAM BURTON, in the reign of HENRY VI.

SIR EDWARD BURTON, knight, banneret, in the reign of EDWARD IV. of whom more hereafter.

A JOHN DE BURTON, was sheriff for Shropshire, from 1354 to 1359.

WILLIAM BURTON, was member for Shrewsbury, 1379.

RICHARD DE BEORTON, M.P. for Shrewsbury, 1381.

WILLIAM BURTON, M.P. for Shrewsbury, 1383, 1384, and 1385.

WILLIAM BURTON, M.P. for Shrewsbury, 1436 and 1442.

Of the above Sir Edward Burton, the author of the Commentary on Antoninus thus writes: "Edward Burton, of Longner, was with King EDWARD IV. successful in fourteen set battels, between the houses of York and Lancaster; and for his great royalty (loyalty?) and service he was made knight banneret, under the royal standard in the field." A. D. 1460. His son,

SIR ROBERT BURTON, knight, had the first grant of arms, dated May 22nd, 1478; he m. Christian Stapleton, daughter and heir of Sir John Stapleton, knight, of Stapleton, and relict of Robert Cressett, of Upton Cressett; by whom he had a son,

EDWARD BURTON, who d. 23rd April, 1524, and was buried at St. Chadd's, Shrewsbury. Some of the records and pedigrees style him Sir Edward Burton, knight, and some, groom of the stole to HENRY VII.; but a handsome alabaster stone to his memory and that of his wife Jocosæ Coyney, removed to Ateham church on the fall of St. Chadd's, 1788, simply calls him "Edward Burton." By his first wife Joyce, daughter to Harry Griffin, esq. he had a son,

JOHN BURTON, who m. Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Poyner, esq. and d. October 22, 1543, leaving a son,

EDWARD BURTON, b. 1510, who m. Ann, daughter and co-heir of Nicholas Madocks, esq. of Wem, Coton and Whixhall, Salop. This Edward Burton was a zealous Protestant in the days of Queen MARY, and on that account essayed many hair-breadth escapes, which it is to be lamented Fox the martyrologist has not related where he thus speaks of him: "The like example of charitable affection in these Catholic churchmen is also to be seen and noted in the burying of one Maister Edward Burton, esquire, who in the same diocese of Chester, departing out of this world the very day before Queene ELIZABETH was crowned, required of his frendes as they would answer for it that his bodye should be buried in his parish church (which was St. Chadd's, in Shrewsbury), and that no masse monger should be present thereat, which thing being declared to the curate of that parish, named Sir John Marshall, and the bodye being withall brought to the burying upon the same daye that the Queene was crowned, the curate being therewith offended, sayd playnly that he should not be buried in the church there, whereunto one of his frendes named Georg Torpelley answering agayne, sayd that God would judge him in the last day, &c. Then the curate sayd 'Judge God or devill the bodye shall not come there.' And so they buried him in his owne garden, where he is no doubt as neare the kingdom of heaven as if he had bene buried in the midst of the church."

But the story is best told by William Burton, great grandson of the Edward Burton in question, in his Commentary on the Itinerary of Antoninus.* "Edward Burton, esq. a religious assenter of the Gospel in Queen MARIE'S time, and by the author of the Acts and Monuments of the Church of England, named among those that escaped the persecution then for that cause. But the whole story is this; he was a man indeed, who, by many waies and courses he took for his safety (too long to be told here) and to evade the hands of such as lay in wait for him; when, one day sitting alone in his upper parlour at Longner, in meditation no doubt of God's deliverance of his people; he heard a general ring of all the bells in Shrewsbury, whereunto in St. Chadda's parish his house belonged, whereat his right divining soul told him it was for Queen MARIE'S death, yet longing to know the truth more certainly, and loath to trust his servants therein for some reasons he sent his eldest son, my grandfather bears then but a boy of sixteen years of age, calling him to throw up his hat if it were so, impatient was his expectation, who finding it, and doing accordingly as he was directed the good man retiring presently from the window and recovering his chair, for extremity of joy which he conceived for the deliverance of the saints of God, he suddenly expired. And this was his nunc dimittis Domine. But neither was the storm of persecution so quite blown over hereby, but that still some scatterings did fall upon the servants of God, for they suffered some grievances still, among which was their being debarred from Christian interment in churches. But facilis jactura sepulcri. His friends made a shift to bury him in his garden by the fish ponds, and set a monument over him, which being defaced by time and rain, it happened in the year MDCXIV. that Edward Burton, esq. his grandson, inviting to dinner the noble Sir Andrew Corbet, then lieutenant of the shire, with divers other gentlemen of quality; that the good baronet desirous to see the place which preserved the reliques and memory of that excellent man, as good men are still inquisitive after them, whose virtues they honour; but finding it much decayed by the weather after a friendly correction of his host, and serious enjoyment to repair the tomb, whereby the memory of his most deserving grandfather was kept alive; he without any ado, effected what he spake for, and promised himself to become the poet for an epitaph, which he accordingly wrote." This Edward Burton d. in 1558, and left a son and successor,

THOMAS BURTON, esq. of Longner, b. 1542, who m. Catherine, daughter and co-heir of William Biest, esq. of Atcham Grange, and d. 1619, leaving a son,

Estates—Longner, of which no certain account can be given as to the date of the family being first possessed of it; but there are no records of its ever having been purchased, and it seems certain the family have for centuries been seated there. Preston, Shelton, Chilton Grove, Atcham Grange, (inherited from a marriage with a Biest, heir of that property in the sixteenth century), Lawley, and Dawley, all in county of Salop; Radbrook, county of Gloucester, the ancient family seat of the Lingens.

Advowson of Atcham vicarage, in the county of Salop.

Seats—Longner Hall, near Shrewsbury, Radbrook, Gloucestershire.

Lingen, of Radbrook, Gloucestershire.

The family of Lingen is of extreme antiquity, and was originally seated at a small village of that name, about two miles from Wigmore, in Herefordshire; the lord of which castle, Ralph de Mortimer, held also at the time of Domesday, Lingham (as it is there written). The occupant of Lingham under Mortimer was Turstin, a native of Flanders, usually styled Turstin de Wigmore. There is a town called Lingen in Westphalia, not far removed from the limits of ancient Flanders, and it is not improbable that Turstin, who is called the Flandrian in Domesday, may have come thence, and have given its name to the village he acquired near Wigmore. One of the name Richard de Lingen, was among the northern adventurers who settled in the south of Italy, and became Count of Andria in Apulia. (See Chron. Normann. ap. du Chesne, sub. ann. 1154.) This Turstin m. Agnes, daughter of Alured de Merleberge, and was the ancestor of Ralph de Wigmore, from whom the Lingens descend. Sir John de Lingeayne, who had a grant of free warren in the 40th of HENRY III., had a daughter Constance, m. to Grimbald, son and heir of Sir Richard Pauncefort, who distinguished her conjugal attachment by cutting off her right hand to rescue her husband from captivity. Ralph de Wigmore, Lord of Lingayne, was founder of the priory of Lyngbroke, though Leland attributes that foundation to a Mortimer; and was ancestor to three John de Lingains in lineal succession. In the 44th of HENRY III. John Lingain was one of the "dictators" on the king's part of the truce between him and Llewelin, Prince of Wales. The last of the three Johns, was father to a Ralph Lingain, M.P. for Herefordshire, in EDWARD III., who m. Margery, daughter of Fulke de Pembroke, of Tong Castle, by whom, besides a son RALPH, he had a daughter Isabel, who founded a college at Tonge in 1411, and was thrice married: first, to her cousin, Fulke Pembroke; secondly, to Sir John Ludlowe; thirdly, to Sir Thomas Peytevine. The son Ralph de Lingeayne, was resident at Sutton, and by his will dated 1452, had four sons, and a daughter Isolda, m. in the reign of HENRY IV. to * Brian Harley, ancestor of the Earls of Oxford; while the eldest son,

SIR JOHN LINGEYN, of Lingeyn and Sutton, who was sheriff for Herefordshire, in the reigns of EDWARD IV. and HENRY VII. m. Isabel, third daughter and co-heir of Sir John Burgh, by Jane, daughter and co-heir of Sir William Clopton, of Clopton, Warwickshire, and Radbrook, Gloucestershire, which last property is now in the possession of Robert Burton, esq. representative of the Lingen family.

We must deviate awhile from tracing the descent of the Lingens, to speak of the magnificent pedigree of the Lords of Morothwy, the heiress of whom m. Sir Hugh de Burgh, whose grand-daughter Isabel, m. the above named Sir John Lingeyn. This pedigree, now in possession of Robert Burton, esq. of Longner Hall, carries up the descent through many illustrious and royal names to the ancient princes of Powis, from whom it seems the historical house of Burgh derived the principal part of their vast estates. Sir John Burgh, son of the above Sir Hugh, had issue by his wife, Jane Clopton, four daughters only, viz. 1. Elizabeth, m. Thomas Newport, esq. ancestor of the Earls of Bradford, a title which became extinct in 1762, in the person of Earl Thomas, and was revived in 1794, when his nephew Sir Henry Bridgeman, bart. was created Lord Bradford. 2. Ancreda, m. John Leighton, esq. ancestor to the present Sir Baldwin Leighton, bart., of Loton Park, county of Salop. 3. Isabel, m. Sir John Lingen, knight; and 4. Elenor, m. to Thomas Mitton, esq. ancestor of the Myttons of Halston, county of Salop.

Of the issue of the marriage of this Sir John Lingeyn with Isabel de Burgh, the pedigree of the family preserved in an Harleian Manuscript, gives but one daughter; but the manuscript of Simwnt Vychan (a distinguished bard in the reign of ELIZABETH) written in the Welsh language, and now in possession of John Vaughan, esq. gives as issue, fifteen children, of whom, Jane, m. Thomas Acton; Margaret, m. Rydderch ap Rys, Lord of Tywyn, South Wales; and Mary, m. John Wigmore, heir to the lands of Walter Wigmore, while

* " Brian de Harley, esq. succeeding his father was denominated of Brampton Castle, in Herefordshire; he was governor of Montgomery and Dolverin Castles in the reign of HENRY IV. which he bravely defended against the famous Owen Glendowr, who was forced by his valour to return from them, in memory of which he changed his crest from a buck's head proper to a demi-hungules, issuing out of the top of a tower, triple-towered proper. He m. Isolda Lingayne."—Vide Collin's Peerage, vol. iv. p. 233, 5th edition.

SIR JOHN LINGEYN the son, sheriff of Herefordshire, 21 HENRY VII. and 8 and 12 HENRY VIII., and who died 1530, m. 1514, Eleanor, daughter and heir of Thomas Milewater, esq. of * Stoke Edyth, in the county of Hereford, by whom he had a son,

JOHN LINGEYN, who m. Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Englefield, of Englefield in Berkshire, and Rossall near Shrewsbury, speaker of the house of Commons, chief justice of Chester, and knight of the bath; by whom he had a son,

JOHN LINGEN, M. P. for Herefordshire, who d. 1554, leaving by Isabel his wife, daughter of John and Sibell Bryenton, of Stretton, county of Hereford, one only daughter † Jane, who m. William Shelley, esq. of Michel Grove, Surrey, and d. without issue 1610, bequeathing her family inheritance of Sutton Court, to her cousin-german,

EDWARD LINGEN, who was son of William Lingen, the second son of the above John and Sibell Lingen, by Cicely, daughter of Richard Ingram, of Walford, in the county of Warwick. This Edward Lingen, m. Blanch, only daughter of Sir Roger Bodenham, K. B. of Rotheras, county of Hereford, and had a numerous family; one son, John Lingen, captain in the royal service, was killed at Ledbury; and the eldest son,

SIR HENRY LINGEN, knight of Sutton and Stoke Edith, was greatly distinguished for his attachment to CHARLES I. in whose service he maintained a regiment of horse; and besides the vast expenses he incurred in the course of his active services compounded for his estates with the Parliament by a fine of £6342. He was M.P. for Hereford, 1661, and d. January, 1662. He m. Alice, daughter of Sir Walter Pye, knight, of the Meend, by whom he had two sons and fifteen daughters, but only two of this numerous family left issue, Frances, m. to John Unett, and Alice to Herbert Herring; and by their descendants part of Sutton is still enjoyed. The male line of the family was continued by Sir Henry's brother,

ROGER LINGEN, esq. who bought Radbrook, the inheritance of his ancestors, from Lord Dingwall: he m. Anne, daughter of Fulk Walwyn, esq. of Much Marcle, county of Hereford, and had a son, †

ROGER LINGEN, esq. who m. Rachel, daughter of the great physician, Dr. Willis, and aunt of Browne Willis, M.P. of Whaddon, county of Bucks, the celebrated antiquarian, and had a son,

THOMAS LINGEN, esq. of Radbrook, who d. 1742, leaving by Ann his wife, only dau. of Robert Burton, of Longuer, county of Salop, esq. (and sister and heir to her brother Thomas Burton, as well as to her uncle,) a son, ROBERT LINGEN, who assumed the name of BURTON, and the arms of Burton in conjunction with those of Lingen.

The collateral branches of the Lingen family are exceedingly numerous and interesting. In the collection of Mr. Owen Salusbury, of Râg, and Mr. John Salusbury, of Erbistock, made in the seventeenth century, and now in possession of Sir Watkin Williams-Wynne, bart., there is a long descent traced from a William Lingen, of the county of Hereford, to a William Lingen, esquire of the body to HENRY VII., who m. Margaret, daughter to William Sutton, Lord Zouch, to Augustin Lingen, who acquired Bettws by marriage with the sole daughter of John ap David Lloyd, from whom descended in the female line the late learned Archdeacon Hugh Owen, of Shrewsbury, whose son, the Rev. Edward Pryce Owen, is the present possessor.

* Stoke Edith was afterwards sold by Henry Lingen to Paul Foley, ancestor of the present possessor.

† This Mrs. Shelley, in the stormy times of the Reformation, was a firm adherent to the ancient faith, and her husband was attainted in 1583, and she was for some time confined in the Fleet. An Harleian Manuscript (No. 2030) contains many curious letters to her there, particularly one of an offer of marriage in her widowhood, from Francis, youngest son of the first Lord St. John. Queen ELIZABETH had certainly a kindness for Mrs. Shelley, as evinced by some memorials (Harl. MSS. 2120, p. 8. B.), and restored her a house and demesne, which seems to have been Sutton; for another letter to her in the same collection speaks in affecting terms of the attachment of the neighbourhood to the Lingen family, and of their disquietness in having heard a false report that "the Lingen's lands would be gone from the name of Lingen for ever." Great part of her rich inheritance, including Radbrook in Gloucestershire, and her Shropshire estates, passed on her death to a hungry Scot of the court of James I., Sir Richard Preston, Lord Dingwall, but Radbrook was repurchased. Mrs. Shelley founded Shelley's Hospital in Hereford.

‡ This Roger Lingen had a sister Frances, m. to the Rev. — Hanbury, of Much Marcle, county of Hereford, who d. in 1758, at the advanced age of 106.

 - IV. Mary-Agnes.
 - V. Emma-Isabella, m. 16th August, 1832, to James Salmond, esq. captain 2nd Dragoon Guards, and has issue.

Mr. Coke, who succeeded to the estates upon the decease of his father, the Rev. D'Ewes Coke, B.L., 12th April, 1811, is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Derby, and was formerly recorder of Newark and deputy-recorder of Grantham.

Lineage.

This ancient and respectable family, which can trace its descent in a direct male line for upwards of five hundred years, settled at Trusley, in the county of Derby, in the early part of the reign of EDWARD III., at which time

HUGH, son of Robert Coke, m. Agnes, daughter and sole heir of Robert Owen, of Marchington* Woodhouse, in the county of Stafford. His grandson,

THOMAS COKE wedded, about the year 1418, Elizabeth, daughter and co-heiress of Thomas de Odingsell, of Trusley. Through this alliance a considerable portion of the landed property in the parish of Trusley, as well as a moiety of the manor and the advowson, passed into the possession of the Coke family; Thomas de Lyes, lord of two parts of the latter, having conveyed it to William de Odingsell and Maud his wife, by a deed bearing date 1314. The Odingsells had long been persons of distinction, Gerard de Odingsells, son of Basilia and Hugh de Odingsells, having a knight's fee in Eperstone so far back as the time of HENRY III.

* It appears by an old deed, bearing date 46 EDWARD III. that Hugh Coke had lands in Marchington; and by another deed, dated 4 RICHARD II. Agnes, his widow, gave to John Coke, her second son, lands in Witchnor.

WILLIAM COKE, fourth in descent from Hugh, m. in 1448, Joan, daughter of John Hilton, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM COKE, who having been married twice, died A.D. 1514, leaving as his successor,

WILLIAM COKE, who m. Isabel, daughter of Sir Ralph Longford, of Longford, high sheriff for the county of Derby in 1501. In the reign of EDWARD III. Sir Ralph Longford, an ancestor of the above Sir Ralph, married one of the two daughters of Sir William le Wyne, to whom the manor of Pinxton (or as it is written in old writings Penkeston) belonged. Sir Ralph sold his moiety to Francis Coke. The other daughter was married to Sir John Sulney, whose portion descended to the Staffords, and from them to the Revells, from whom it was purchased by the grandfather of the present owner of Brookhill. William Coke died 1518, leaving one son, WILLIAM COKE, who m. Dorothy, daughter of Robert Fitzherbert, of the ancient and ennobled family residing at Tissington, in the county of Derby, and whose ancestor's name appears in the "Roll of Battel Abbeie." He died A.D. 1576, and left, with other issue,

- i. RICHARD, his heir.
- ii. John, rector of North Wingfield, in the county of Derby.

1. Elizabeth, m. to John Bird, or Bride, of Locko, in the county of Derby, which family had possessed the manor of Nether Locko as early as the reign of HENRY IV. She survived her husband, having had issue a son, William, who sold the manor in the reign of QUEEN ELIZABETH to William Gilbert, then of Barrow, his mother's second husband. The Gilbert family consequently removed there and resided at Locko Park for several generations. John Gilbert, William's descendant, became possessed of Thurgarton Priory, in the county of Nottingham, by bequest from the Coopers, and took the name of Cooper by act of Parliament in 1736, and having about the same time sold Locko to the Lowe family, who at present reside there, removed to Thurgarton, which place was sold a short time previous to his death by Colonel John-Gilbert-Cooper Gardiner, who d. unmarried in 1833. In the year 1630 there was another intermarriage between the Gilberts and Cokes, of which presently.

- ii. Elena, m. to Robert Key, Keyes or Kays.
- iii. Margaret, m. to Geoffrey Whalley.
- iv. Dorothy, m. to Christopher Thacker, whose family, in 1540, had a grant of Repton Priory from HENRY VIII. Gilbert Thacker, the last of this family, d. in 1712.
- v. Isabel, m. to John Danvers, of Swithland, in the county of Leicester.
- vi. Anne, m. to Philip Streethay, of Streethay, in the county of Stafford.

The eldest son,

RICHARD COKE, m. Mary, daughter and heir of Thomas Sacheverell,* of Kirkby, in the county of Nottingham, descendant of Sacheverell, of Snitterton and Hopwell, in the county of Derby. The pedigree of this family, in the visitation of 1569, begins with Patrick Sacheverell, lord of Hopwell in the reign of EDWARD I. Thoroton describes John de Sacheverell as having married a co-heiress of Fitz-ercald, five generations before 15 EDWARD I. (about the year 1020). William, a younger son of John Sacheverell, of Hopwell, by the co-heiress of Leche, married the heiress of Snitterton, and was of Ible and Snitterton. Thomas Sacheverell, his grandson, sold Ible about 1498; Snitterton was retained longer. Thomas Sacheverell, son of Thomas, lived at Kirkby, which had been acquired in marriage with the heiress of Kirkby; he had an only daughter, married to Coke of Trusley. By this marriage, Kirkby Hall, and property in that parish, was conveyed to, and has ever since remained in the family of Coke, it having been acquired by the great-grandfather of Mary Sacheverell in marriage with the sole heiress of Richard Kirkby. Richard Coke d. in 1582, leaving, with a daughter, Dorothy, m. to Valentine Carey, D.D. Bishop of Exeter, five sons, viz.

- i. FRANCIS (Sir), his heir.
- ii. John (Sir), who bore a pre-eminent part in the public affairs of the stormy period in which he lived, being principal secretary of state for upwards of twenty years to the unfortunate CHARLES I. It required a man of no ordinary abilities to steer a happy course between the contending parties of those troubled days, and the soundest discretion to reconcile oftentimes the king his master and the factious parliament. His sole desire was, as he expressed it in that house on the 22nd of March, 1627, "not to stir, but to be quiet; not to provoke, but to appease—my desire is," he continued, "that every one resort to his own heart to reunite the king and state, and to take away the scandal from us." His life and character cannot be better drawn

* The name is derived from "Saint de Chevrenil," The celebrated Dr. Sacheverell is said to have been of this family, but it is not clear that he was descended from them. He possessed an estate in Derbyshire by gift from George Sacheverell of that county, who admired his political zeal and esteemed him as a cousin, and before whom, as high sheriff for the county in the 9th of Queen ANNE, he preached one of his inflammatory sermons, which brought him before the House of Lords by impeachment of the Commons.

than in the words of David Lloyd, author of a work, published in 1670, entitled "State Worthies, or the Statesmen and Favourites of England since the Reformation." "Sir John Coke, younger brother to Sir Francis Coke, born at Trusley, in Derbyshire, of ancient and worshipful family, and allied to the best family in that country, was bred fellow of Trinity college, in Cambridge, where his wit being designed his estate, he was chosen rhetorick lecturer in the university, where he grew eminent for his ingenious and critical reading in that school, where rhetorick seemed not to be so much an art, as his nature; being not only the subject but the very frame of his discourse. Then travelled he beyond the seas for some years (when his judgment was fitted for foreign observations by domestic experience) in the company of a person of quality, returning thence rich in languages, remarks and experience, having all the dangers incident to him for his religion by a wary profession, that he came to learn and not to search; being first related to Sir Fulke Greville, Lord Brook, who did all men's business but his own: he was thence preferred to be secretary to the Navy, then master of the requests, and at last secretary of state for twenty years together. Being a very zealous Protestant, he did all good offices for the advancement of true religion: his contemporaries character him a grave and a prudent man in gait, apparel and speech; one that had his intellectuals very perfect in the dispatch of business, till he was eighty years old, when foreseeing those intrigues that might be too hard for his years, he with his majesty's good leave retired as Moses did, to die when his eyes were not dim, &c. having kept himself strictly to the law of the land: insomuch so that being sent to command Bishop Williams from Westminster, and being asked by the stout bishop, by what authority he commanded a man out of his house and freehold, he was so tender of the point that he never rested till he had his pardon for it. * * * * * Never was any man more put to it to reconcile the two readings of that text, καρῶν ἐβλήνιν, which he could never have done, but that his old rule safeguarded him, viz. "That no man should let what is unjustifiable or dangerous appear under his hand, to give envy a steady aim at his place or person. * * * * * Indeed he had an happy mixture of discretion and charity whereby he could allow to things and persons more than men of straighter apprehensions or narrower affections were able to do." He settled at Melbourne, in the county of Derby, as lessee under the Bishop of Carlisle, under which see the palace, now Melbourne Hall, together with the impropriate parsonage, was long held under lease. The bishops of Carlisle had occasionally resided at the palace, to which a large park was attached. During a great part of his official life Sir John Coke resided in a house which had been the residence of the Hynninghams, called the Black House, opposite to White Hart Lane. Bedwell, in his History of Tottenham in 1631, says that he had read the following inscription, in a chamber over the hall: "In this chamber King HENRY VIII. hath often lyen." It was pulled down about ninety years ago. Sir John m. Mary, daughter of — Powell, esq. of Presteign, in Radnorshire, and left two sons and three daughters,

1. John (Sir), his heir, who was a member of the committee of sequestrators appointed by parliament for the county of Derby, 31st March, 1643, and also one of that for the purpose of raising 516*l.* levied upon the county, for the maintenance of Fairfax's army from 1st February to 1st December, 1644; and in 1646 was one of the receivers (Sir John Curzon being the other) of 5000*l.* raised in the county for the disbanding of the Derbyshire forces, which money was to be repaid out of the composition of delinquent's estates in the said county. He was also one of the representatives of the county in the 16 CHARLES I. He sold to Sir William Boothby the manor of Ashbourne, which had been granted by King CHARLES I. to William Scriven and Philip Eden, and by them conveyed to his father Sir John Coke. Dying without issue at Paris, he was succeeded at Melbourne by his brother.
2. Thomas, who m. Mary, daughter of — Pope, esq. He compounded for his estate in 1655 for the sum of 2200*l.*, agreeable to an ordinance by the parliament for the "Decimation of the Cavaliers."

whereby all who had borne arms for CHARLES I., or declared themselves in his interest, were to pay the tenth of their estates that were left, to support the charge of the commonwealth without regard to future compositions, or any articles upon which they surrendered. We find the Gilberts, Harpurs and Fitzherberts, with whom the Cokes had intermarried, subjected to equally heavy penalties. He d. in 1656, and was s. by his son,

JOHN, who represented the borough of Derby in the first Parliament of JAMES II. The following spirited anecdote is related of him while occupying his seat in the house. In the year 1685 when James, contrary to the act of Parliament then extant, required the test to be taken by every one possessed of a public office, and told the Commons that instead of the militia he should employ a standing army, in which it was well known he had appointed a great many Roman Catholic officers, the house of commons voted an address to his majesty, remonstrating against the illegality of his purpose. This address was very ill received by that despotic prince, and his own determination was repeated with violent expressions. "The commons," says Hume, "were so daunted with his reply, that they kept silence a long time, and when Coke, member for Derby, rose up and said, 'I hope we are all Englishmen, and not to be frightened with a few hard words: so little spirit appeared in that assembly, often so refractory and mutinous, that they sent him to the Tower for bluntly expressing a free and generous spirit.'" William Allestreay was his colleague at this time, and he was again returned as member for the borough in the 1st of WILLIAM and MARY, in conjunction with the Hon. Anchetil Gray. His successor,

Thomas, in 1701, made an agreement with Bishop

Nicholson, that in consequence of an increase of the annual rent of Melbourne from 45*l.* to 70*l.*, and of the vicar's stipend from 20*l.* to 30*l., the fee should be vested in perpetuity in Thomas Coke, his heirs and assigns. This agreement was confirmed by act of Parliament in 1704. The last heir male of this branch of the family was George-Lewis Coke, who died in 1750, when the Melbourne property, as well as the manorial rights of the subordinate manor of Over-Haddon and lands in Bakewell, in the county of Derby, devolved upon his sister and sole heiress CHARLOTTE, the daughter of the Hon. Thomas Coke, teller of the exchequer and vice-chamberlain to Queen ANNE. She was m. to Sir Matthew Lambe, bart. and was mother of

Sir Peniston Lambe, created, in 1770, an Irish peer, as Baron Melbourne, deriving his title from the estate acquired by his father's marriage with the representative of this branch of the Coke family. He was s. in 1828, by his son,

William, Viscount Melbourne, the present prime minister of England. Melbourne Hall and the parsonage manor, which abound with memorials of the Coke family, are his occasional residence, but the park has long been converted into tillage.

1. Anne, Sir John Coke's eldest daughter, was m. to Henry Sacheverell, of Morley, 20th November, 1638. He suffered much during the civil war, his house being plundered by the Cromwellians to the amount of 3000*l.* in money, in addition to the seizure of his horses and a large proportion of his goods. He was a branch of the same family, of which Richard Coke had married an heiress about the year 1560. Robert Sacheverell, the last of the Morley branch, died in 1714; his daughters and co-heirs married Clifton and Pole, of Radburn, a descendant of Sir John de la Pole. She was m. secondly, to Henry Danvers, of Swithland.
2. Elizabeth, m. first, to Anthony Faunt; secondly, to Thomas Stocke, of London.
- III. Thomas, third son of Richard, died at Padua 1623, s. p.
- IV. Philip, fellow of Trinity college, Cambridge, and died there.
- V. George, D.D. rector of Bygrave, in the county of Hertford, was, in the year 1633, promoted to the see of Bristol, and in 1636 translated to Hereford. He was one of the twelve bishops who signed the petition and protestation to CHARLES I. and the house of lords against any laws which had been passed during their forced and violent absence from the house; and upon the accusation by the commons of high treason, he was, with the other subscribers, committed to the Tower of London, where they remained until the bill for putting them out of the house was passed, which was not till many months after. Walker, in his "Sufferings of the Clergy," describes George Coke as being "born at Trusley, in Derbyshire, of a family that continued several hundreds of years on that estate," and "that he had his education at Pembroke Hall, in Cambridge, where he was taxer in the year 1605." He further states, that when "Colonel Birch took the city of Hereford, in 1645, he risted this good bishop's palace, and afterwards took up his habitation there till the restoration, and what is more had great part of the revenues of the bishoprick to his own use; and to this day the manor of Whitbourn, by the sorry compliance of those who might have prevented it, continues in his family. He had a temporal estate also in the parish of Eardisley, called Quistmoor; this the committee of Hereford laid their paws upon August 12 1646, and let it out to a tenant upon condition to pay to the wife and children of the said Dr. Coke such exhibition as by ordinance is allowed unto them, provided that neither she nor the said Dr. himself 'do hereafter act, abet, contrive or procure any act or thing against or contrary to the votes, &c. &c. of the Parliament, or aid or assist the malignant party.' By this and such other methods, he was reduced so low, that though he was otherwise a very thrifty man, yet he had wanted had not his relations supported him. This hard usage, as I am informed, hastened his death, which happened in the year 1646, though Lloyd saith that he bore his sufferings with admirable calmness and serenity, and adds that he was a pious and learned man." He m. Jane, daughter of William, son of Sir Clement Heigham, of Suffolk, and dying in 1646 was buried in Eardisley church, where a brass plate, with brief inscription, records the event,* while in Hereford cathedral a handsome cenotaph was raised to his memory, containing an inscription, which, as has been aptly observed, is indeed composed in the most unchastised spirit of the restoration; yet after due allowance has been made for the times in which it was written, there can be but little doubt that he was a man of distinguished learning and ability, of great firmness and discretion, and of singular piety. A perusal of the inscription is to the Christian classic a matter of considerable interest, for by him alone can the forcible and happy expression of "sui Iesu," and the concluding sentence, "verbo unico sed latissimo semper pronuntiasset Resurgam," be fully appreciated. The Rev. George Coke, of Lower Moor, (of whom presently), has in his possession a singular ring, which has been handed down from genera-

These three I give to thee
Till the fourth set me free.

He has also a blood-stone necklace, once the property of the above lady, which bears a great name in the parish where its owner resides, as possessing the charm of stopping violent bleeding, for which purpose its aid is often requested, and the application is still supposed never to fail. Bishop Coke had issue,

He m. Mary, daughter of John Kayse, of the county of Gloucester, and was s. by his only son, Heigham, who m. Mary, dau. of Sir Nicholas Lechmere, one of the barons of the exchequer, by whom he had issue one daughter. He m. secondly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Willoughby D'Ewes, of Stow Langtoft Hall, in the county of Suffolk, a descendant of Sir Symonds D'Ewes, the great antiquarian and topographical collector, whose very curious life, written by himself, is to be seen in the British Museum. His ancestor, Adrian D'Ewes, descended from the ancient stem of Des Ewes, dynasts or lords of the Dition of Kessel, in the dutchy of Gelderland, had settled in England not many years after the beginning of HENRY VIII., when that duchy had been so much wasted and depopulated by the intestine wars which raged there between Charles the Duke, Philip the Archduke, and Charles his son. Weever, in his ancient funeral monuments (1631), gives descriptions and drawings of some curious monuments and testimonials to Geeradt D'Ewes and others of the same family, in churches within the diocese of London. 2. John, second son of the Bishop of Hereford, was rector of Whitborn and Ross, in the county of Hereford, and prebendary of Moreton Magna. He was deprived of the former of these livings by the committee of Hereford, 24th Sept. 1646, as related by Walker in his Sufferings of the Clergy (p. 36, fol. edit.), but so warmly were his flock attached to their pastor, that forcible means were ultimately resorted to to dispossess him. The crimes alleged against him were scandal and being an incendiary against the Parliament. He lived however to be restored to his living at Whitborn, and died there at a good old age; his successor at Ross being the celebrated Mr. Tombs. His widow Eleanor at her death bequeathed the property to his nephew, Heigham, son of Richard Coke, of Suckley.
3. William, of Quistmoor, in the county of Hereford, prebendary of Colwall, vicar of Bosbury and portionist of Bromyard, who left, by Elizabeth his wife, five daughters and one son, FRANCIS, of Quistmoor and Lower Moor, ancestor of the Cokes of Lower Moor.*

He left at his decease (his widow dying 1st September, 1781, at the advanced age of ninety-six) a son and successor,

* They are buried with two of their children, Isabella and Henry, on the south side of the chancel, just below the steps of the altar. The inscription is nearly effaced on the slabs which are placed over their graves, but there is a singular memorandum made at the beginning of the first register kept in the parish. (the first entry in which is "Maria, filia Gulielmi Coke, A.D. 1628"), it is a drawing of the monumental stones, with the inscriptions which were placed over William Coke and Maud his wife. They run as follows: "Here lieth the body of William Coke, esq. son and heir of Francis Coke, of Trusley, in the county of Derby, knight, who married Maud, eldest daughter of Hen. Beresford, of Alsop, &c. by whom he had issue four sons and four daughters. He being of the age of forty-seven years, March 27, Anno Dom. 1641. Lived godly and died comfortably." The other: "Here lieth interred the body of Maud Coke, wife of William Coke, of Kerkby Hall, in the county of Nottingham, esq., daughter and co-heir of Henry Beresford, of Alsop in Le dale, in the county of Derby, who lived religiously and died 16th March, 1628, aged thirty-seven."

worthy of having such a mark of distinction conferred upon them. This honorary reward to be bestowed upon the loyal and firm adherents of royalty in its darkest days was never carried into effect; the advisers of CHARLES II., prudently considering that such a step would only have a tendency to keep alive those dissensions and party feuds which every true patriot would wish to consign to oblivion. Richard died 12th March, 1664, leaving eight daughters and one son,

* The following inscription is to be seen in the church of All Saints', Derby, which is in the immediate vicinity of the college, the residence of the late Daniel-Parker Coke: "In a vault near this pillar are deposited the remains of Thomas Coke, esq. and Matilda his wife. He departed this life on the 15th November, 1776, aged seventy-six. She on the 1st of Aug. 1777, aged seventy-one. They lived together man and wife more than forty years, (in times not abounding with such instances), in perfect harmony and affection, and in the evening of their days, when this world could afford nothing to them but what is inseparably the lot of humanity in so advanced a period, infirmities, they followed each other to a better and more perfect state, where they will receive the reward of their virtues. Out of filial gratitude and from sincere respect, this monument was erected to their memory by their only son, Daniel-Parker Coke, esq."

† He was buried in All Saints' church, where a white marble monument, bearing the following inscription, is erected:—

"Sacred to the memory of Daniel-Parker Coke, barrister-at-law, and for thirty-five years representative in Parliament for the town of Nottingham, in discharge of which trust his devoted attention to the interests of his trust, was no less conspicuous than was, in the whole of his political and private life, the most disinterested independence and thoughtlessness of self. In the unpaid and voluntary duties of the magistracy, sedulous and constant in attendance, high-minded, and in its true and just sense liberal, and by his mild and engaging manners endeared to all. In a state of protracted and hopeless infirmity, he sunk at last, regretted by all, closing an active and useful life on the 6th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1825, aged eighty."

The eldest son,

WILLIAM COKE, esq. of Trusley, m. Catharine, daughter of Paul Ballidon, esq. of Derby, by whom he acquired a moiety of the manor of Stanley, in Derbyshire, (now in the possession of Sir Hugh Bateman, bart.), and dying the 20th of January, 1718, at the age of thirty-nine, without male issue, the elder branch of the family became extinct. Of his daughters,

I. CATHERINE-CASSANDRA-ISABELLA, was m. to her cousin Edward Wilmot, of Spondon, barrister-at-law, second son of Edward Wilmot. Her husband, who thus became inheritor of the patrimonial estate of the Trusley branch of the Cokes, was descended from one of the most ancient families in the land. Speed, in his succession of Saxon Monarchs, mentions a nobleman of that name so early as the reign of ETHELRED (A.D. 1008). At the time of the conquest the family was settled at Sutton-upon-Soar, in the county of Nottingham, and removed to Derbyshire in the reign of HENRY VIII.; part of the family residing at Spondon, and part at Chad-desden, in the immediate vicinity of the former place. The present Sir Robert Wilmot, of Chaddesden, whose grandfather, Edward, was created a baronet in 32 GEORGE II. is lineally descended from Edward Wilmot who m. Susanna Coke, of Trusley, on 30th May, 1667. Edward Wilmot dying the 1st January, 1748, was buried in

Trusley church, and was s. by his son and heir,

Francis Ballidon Wilmot, who m. Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Wilmot, of Derby, by Henrietta, daughter of William Cavendish, and left issue one son and one daughter, viz.

Arms—Gules, three crescents, and a canton or.

It is generally supposed that the crescents and the sun were adopted by the family at the time of the crusades to Palestine, when Richard introduced the custom of wearing coats of arms and of having them engraved upon seals. His own broad seal, when he embarked for the Holy Land, contained two crescents (the Turkish ensign), and they seem not to have been uncommon emblems, as we read of another prince (according to Speed) who going against the Turks adopted a crescent, with this motto: "Plenior redibo," ("I will return more full.") Richard I. after his return from captivity, ordered a new broad seal to be engraved, bearing a full moon, which Speed thinks was done emblematically. The adoption also of one of the heavenly bodies as a crest strengthens the probability of the coat of arms originating with the family in the manner described, and that they took arms from the badges of Richard—the moon and stars—which were emblazoned upon all his standards, and are cut upon his great seals.

Quarterings—Owens.
Odingsell.
Kirkby.
Sacheverell.
Beresford.
Snitterton.
Hopwell.

Crest—The sun in splendor, or.

Motto—Non aliunde pendere.

Estates—Brookhill was granted by JAMES I. to Middleton, and by him to Thomas Lindley, of Skegby, who sold it to the Revells, in whose hands it continued till it was sold by them to Sir Eardley Wilmot, and by him to the Lillymans, and by them devised to the present owner's ancestor. The manor of Pinxton is supposed to have been the Snodeswic, which was given by Wulfric Spott, as an appendage to Morton, to Barton Abbey; and the Esnotrewic of the Domesday survey, which was held by Drogo under William Peverel. It has for several centuries passed with one of the moieties of South Normanton, and is the property of D'Ewes Coke, esq. who is also patron of the rectory. There is a very ancient register of the parish in the family; it commences in 1540, sometime before registers were established by law.

The manor of Trusley (Toxenai), now the property of John Coke, esq. in right of his wife, was held by one Hugh under Henry de Ferrars, when the survey of Domesday was taken. Oliver de Odingsells purchased it of Ralph de Beaufey in the reign of HENRY III. The co-heiresses of this family brought it in moieties to Richard Piper and Thomas Coke: the former's moiety passed to the Vernons, and was purchased of the Manners family in 1569 by Richard Coke for 520*l.* and a douceur of 10*l.* to Mr. Manners. The manor-house, the ancient seat of the Cokes, was taken down by Edward Wilmot.

The College, in the parish of All Saints, Derby, which had been the habitation of the canons, passed into lay hands after the Reformation. It was some time in the possession of the Allestreys family, who sold it to the Goodwins. It came by marriage from the latter to Daniel-Parker Coke, and at his death, with his other landed property, to the heirs at law, D'Ewes Coke and Susanna, wife of John Coke.

Debdale, purchased by John Coke, esq. Spondon, by marriage with the Wilmots. Brimington and Totley by marriage with the Heywoods. The old mansion-house at Brimington was the property and residence of Colouel Gill, one of Cromwell's officers during the civil war.

Lower Moor, in Herefordshire, by descent from George Coke, Bishop of Hereford, who purchased the estate of the Earl of Worcester.

Seats—Brookhill Hall, Debdale, and Lower Moor.

RICHARD SCRASE, of Hambleton, in Sussex, styled "Valettus ad coronam Domini Regis Edwardi Quarti." This Richard was buried in the chancel of Preston, as appears by a brass plate on his tomb, which records the period of his death to have been in the year 1409, and was s. by his son,

Mr. Orpen succeeded his father in 1805.

Lineage.

The family of ORPEN is of remote antiquity, and is stated to derive its descent from ERPEN, second son of Varnacker, (maire of the palace to CLOTHAIRE I.), who was son of Meroveus, and grandson of Theodorick, son of CLOVIS, King of France. This Erpen, in the year 571, was governor to Gontram, son of CLOTHAIRE I., and Gregory of Tours styles him "Duke." In his time a church which had been burnt down in Orbin Street, in the city of Tours, was rebuilt. The name, thus originally ERPEN, often pronounced Alpen, and by the ancient historians who wrote in Latin called Erpinus, Alpinus, and Albon, is varied in all the following forms, prior to the settlement in England of that branch of the family whence the present Orpens descend; Erpen, Arpen, Harpin, Erpon, Herpon, and by the French D'Arpin, D'Harpin, Torpin, Arpinus, Erpinus, Harpinus, Herpon, Albon and Albin. Several of the family still reside in France, known by the appellations of D'Herpin and D'Harpin. The name* comprises two words, "Er," signifying "Dwellers," and "Pen," "the Summit." Under the monarchs of the early French dynasties, many of the family acted a brilliant and distinguished part, but our limits preclude us from reverting to more than one of those ancient warriors, namely, Eudes ERPEN, who appears to have been a man of high character and martial fame. Gilbert Abbas calls him "Vir magnificus," and he is generally known in the old historians, by the name of "Herpinus Bituricensis," or Erpen of Bourges. Partaking of the religious enthusiasm of the times, Eudes Erpen sold the Comté de Bourges to PHILIP I. King of France, for 60,000 crowns, and joined the followers of the cross, who, with Prince Robert, son of WILLIAM the Conqueror, then set out for Palestine. His services in the Holy Land are frequently alluded to in the ancient chroniclers, and Gilbert Abbas mentions that Baldwin (son of Godfrey, of Bouillon) having determined to attack the army of the Saracens near Ascalon, Count Erpen remonstrated with him, and urged delay until those chiefs who had withdrawn should return, and all the forces be collected. Baldwin having, however, tauntingly replied, "Si timeas, fuge Biturigas," Erpen immediately joined in the attack, but the Christian forces were, as he predicted, totally defeated, Baldwin alone escaped to Jerusalem. Count Erpen, together with Stephen Count of Blois, Stephen of Burgundy, Conrad, and the remains of the army, retreated to the town of Ramoth. Here they were besieged by the Saracens, and, after some time, the walls being battered down, the city was taken by storm. Count Erpen, and the other leaders, retired into a tower where they defended themselves, with eminent valour, for three days, until at length the enemy, having succeeded in effecting a breach, set fire to the tower. Count Erpen, and the others, sallied out and made immense slaughter among the infidels; so great indeed that they fell back, and calling out to Conrad, who particularly distinguished himself, offered terms if he would surrender: he accordingly did so, and Count Erpen, with all the survivors, were made prisoners. Ordericus Vitalis says, that Count Erpen was conveyed a captive to Babylon, (the author of "L'Art de Vérifier les Dates," alters it to Bagdad) and remained there for a considerable time, until some merchants from Constantinople, happening to discover the place of his confinement, he sent a message to Alexius-Augustus, then emperor, entreating him to procure his release, which the emperor having immediately demanded, Erpen was set free, and returned to France. On his way he visited Pope Paschal II. to consult his holiness as to the course he should in future adopt, broken down as he was by toil and suffering. Ordericus Vitalis gives at full length the Pope's speech to him, and mentions that in the sequel the aged warrior, following the pious advice then given, retired to the monastery of Cluny, in Burgundy, and there, having become a monk, continued in the service of God until his death. The son of this redoubted and valiant soldier (by Matilda his wife, daughter of Gilo, lord of Sully, Seulli, or Sauhier) was ROBERT D'ERPEN, who held a knight's fee of the honour of Pont Audemar. He is stated to have accompanied the CONQUEROR to England, and to have fixed his residence at Erpingham, in the county of Norfolk, (where some of the Erpen family are supposed to have settled so early as the time of EDWARD the Confessor). His son was John de Erpingham in 1100, to whom followed Peter, who was succeeded by Robert, and he, in 1200, by John, to whom succeeded, in 1277, Robert, who had a brother, Thomas, rector of Henderby, in Suffolk, ancestor probably of the Orpens of Suffolk, Kent, Essex and Sussex. Robert died in 1345, and was succeeded by his eldest son, John. He must have had another son

* Froissart spells the name Orpham, or Orpham; and Erpingham is written Orpingham in Speed's Theat. Brit. Thus it became gradually changed into Orphen and Orpen, and this latter orthography has been continued by the family, claiming descent from the ERPINGHAM branch, in contradistinction to the rest of the family, who derive from the collateral branches separated, it is supposed, before the establishment of the family at Erpingham or Orpingham.

named Robert, probably by his second wife, Agnes, for in 1351, (25 EDWARD III.) he was appointed to defend the coast, and in 1359 to raise men in the county of Norfolk.

The grandfather of the first who settled in Ireland, and a lineal descendant of the Erpingham family,

ROBERT ORPEN, esq. was son of Sir John Orpen, knt. and grandson of Francis Orpen who lived near Farleigh Castle, in Somersetshire, by Agnes Edwards his wife. He m. a lady named Stephenson, one of whose sisters wedded O'Donoghue, of Ross, whose ancestors were formerly princes in that part of the county of Kerry which borders on the lakes of Killarney, and another was the wife of M'Carthy More. Thus the Orpens became connected with many of the leading families of Kerry, and this alliance afterwards gave Richard Orpen, of the White House, considerable influence in that county. Robert Orpen came occasionally to visit his brothers-in-law near Killarney, and had some property there, but never settled in Ireland. His son,

RICHARD ORPEN, esq. m. Mary, daughter of Henry Ley, esq. of Teffont Ewyas, Wilts, and sister to Sir James Ley, lord chief justice of the court of King's Bench, (who was created Earl of Marlborough in 1626, see BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage), and had by her a son, ROBERT. Richard Orpen, during the unhappy struggles which distracted the reign of the ill-fated CHARLES I. adhered with desperate fidelity to the royal cause, had his estate in England confiscated, and at length was killed at the battle of Naseby in 1646. His son and successor,

ROBERT ORPEN, esq. born about the year 1637, appears by an inquisition dated in 1661, to have resided at a place called Ne-flaherolin, (sometimes named Killorglin), in the county of Kerry. He m. Lucy Chichester, and had issue,

- I. RICHARD, his heir.
- II. Robert, who returned to England, and died there.
- I. Rachel, m. — Mayberry, esq. and had a son, Richard Mayberry, who m. a sister of William Duckett, and had issue.
- II. Dorcas, m. to Francis Crumpe, esq. and had issue.

The eldest son of Robert Orpen,

RICHARD ORPEN, esq. was the first of the family who settled on the river Kenmare. He first resided at Gortkialinny, and soon afterwards at a strong house he had at the head of the river, (about the year 1670), still known by the name of the White House. This gentleman had a lease for ninety-nine years, renewable for ever, of a great part of the estate of the Hon. H. S. Petty, afterwards Earl of Shelburne, in the county of Kerry, and he acted as agent to the Dowager Lady Shelburne in superintending the iron mines which were at that period worked there, for which purpose he removed from his father's residence at Killorglin. He also took valuable leases of very large tracts of land, in trust for several of the principal Catholic families about the year 1696, as they could not themselves by law hold such leases: all these trusts were punctually and honourably fulfilled, and the descendants of those families still enjoy a great portion of those lands. His connexion with the native houses, through the Stephensons, was one reason for their selecting him as their trustee. He m. Isabella, daughter of the Rev. Richard Orpen acquired very considerable property, and from his activity and determined courage, appears to have taken the lead amongst the Protestant settlers in that part of Kerry. In 1688, after the abdication of the English throne by JAMES II., Mr. Orpen garrisoned his house at Killowen, and received into it all the neighbouring Protestant families; but Captain Phelim M'Carthy, with three thousand Irish soldiers, appearing before the gates of the garrison, the besieged, after some hesitation, and when no hope remained of succour, surrendered upon very advantageous terms, which however were shamefully violated. After enduring the most severe hardships, Mr. Orpen and his fellow-sufferers at length effected their escape in two vessels which happened to be at hand, and remained in England* until the following year, when he returned to Ireland as a commissary, with the rank of captain in the army of King WILLIAM, and on the 1st of July eminently distinguished himself at the battle of the Boyne. Soon after he retired with his family to Killowen, and was appointed a magistrate for the county of Kerry about the year 1692.† Mr. Orpen, who had received his education at one of the English universities, possessed considerable literary attainments and published some works, his name occurring in Sir James Ware's list of Irish authors. He was s. at his decease by his son, KEIGWIN, OF MOUSEHOLE.

KEIGWIN, The Reverend JAMES-PHILIP, B. A. born 31st October, 1811, succeeded his father as representative of his family, August, 1829.

Lineage.

The family of KEIGWIN, though probably of Welsh origin, is of considerable antiquity in Cornwall; and their Arms are evidently derived from the name, which, in the Cornish language, signifies "White Dog."* The first person recorded in the Heralds Colledge was JENKIN KEIGWIN, who was settled at Mousehole, near Penzance, in the reign of Queen ELIZABETH, and whose fate is connected with one of the most memorable events in the history of Cornwall.

In July, 1595, some Spanish galleys attacked and burnt the towns of Mousehole, Newlyn, and Penzance; which circumstance is remarkable for being, as Camden observes, the only occasion on which the Spaniards ever landed in this country as enemies. It is thus described by Carew, who wrote his "Survey of Cornwall" a few years after it occurred:—"The 23rd July, 1595, soon after the sun was risen, and had chased a fog, which before kept the sea out of sight, four galleys of the enemy presented themselves upon the coast, over against Mousehole, and there, in a fair bay, landed about two hundred men, pikes and shot, who forthwith sent their forlorn hope, consisting of their basest people, unto the straggled houses of the country, about half a mile compass or more, by whom were burned, not only the houses they went to, but also the parish church of Paul, the force of the fire being such as it utterly ruined all the great stone pillars thereof.† Others of them, in that time, burned that fisher town, Mousehole: the rest marched as a guard for defence of these firers. The inhabitants, being feared with the Spaniards' landing and burning, fled from their dwellings, and, very meanly armed, met with Sir Francis Godolphin, on a green on the west side of Penzance; who that forenoon coming from his house, for pacifying some controversies in those western parts, and from the hills espying the fires in that town, church, and houses, hastened thither: who forthwith sent to all the captains of those parts for their speedy repair with their companies; and also sent by post to Sir Francis Drake and Sir John Hawkins (then at Plymouth, with a fleet bound for the Indies) advertisement of the arrival of these four galleys, and of their burnings, advising them to look to themselves, if there were any greater fleet of the enemies at sea, and to send west, with all haste, what succours by sea or land they could spare. Then Sir Francis Godolphin advised that weak assembly to retire into Penzance, and to prepare it for defence, until the coming of the country forces that he had sent for. But they, finding themselves in number something above a hundred, wherein were about thirty or forty shot, though scarce one third of them were serviceable, insisted to march against the enemies, to repel them from farther spoils of their houses; but while they were marching towards them, the Spaniards returned aboard their galleys, and presently removed them farther into the bay, where they anchored again, before and near a lesser fisher town, called Newlyn."‡ Carew then describes the invasion of Newlyn and Penzance, and concludes in these words: "Thus have you a summary report of the Spaniard's glorious enterprise, and the Cornish-

† The pedigrees of Keigwin in the College of Arms, from which the above account has been taken, are registered in the books marked "Howard;" "Norfolk, vol. v." Though Jenkin Keigwin is the first person mentioned in those pedigrees, it is said, in Borlase's MSS. in the possession of Sir John St. Aubyn, bart. that, in 1410, John Polkingborne, of Cornwall, married Margaret, daughter of Carne Keigwin. A John Kegewyn, priest, was vicar of Newbottle, in Northamptonshire, in February, 1432.

‡ "The ancient porch, partly consumed, yet offers its scorched remains to the eye, undecayed by time, having been screened long ago by a new portico, the framers whereof had too much of the love of antiquity in them to destroy what was left of its predecessor." Tales of the West, vol. i. p. 108.

'men's infamous cowardice; which,' however, he says, "he could qualify by many reasons."*

One of the Harleian MSS.† in the British Museum, contains a letter from Lord Buckhurst, then lord lieutenant of Sussex, to his deputy lieutenants, written in consequence of this affair. It is dated on the 26th July, 1595, and acquaints them that "the Quenes Majestie having received certaine advertisement that there is come into the seas upon the coast of Corneweale and Devonshier a fletee of Spayne to the number of 60 sayle, and that they have landed divers souldiors in Cornewaile, and have burnt certaine villages there with purpose as it is dowbted to make incursions and spoyles upon all the mara-time coste upon the narrow seas," her Majesty had commanded him to desire them "to put in readines the forces of that shire." The same volume likewise contains a letter from the Privy Council, dated on the 30th of July, to Lord Charles Howard, the lord admiral, and to Lord Buckhurst, commanding them to adopt measures for the protection of the realm, in consequence of the "late discoverie of some Spanish gallies on the westerne partes of this realme, and some attempt made by them to lande and burne on the shore."‡

The Spaniards having set fire to the church of Paul, the original parish register was destroyed, and the circumstance is thus noticed in the present register: "Register of St. Pawle in the countie of Cornwall from the 23 daye Julie the yeare of our gracious Lord God 1595 on the which daie, soon after the sun was risen, the church, tower, bells, and all other things pertaining to the same, together with the houses and goods was burned and spoiled by the Spaniards in the saide parish being Wensdaie the daie aforesaide in the 37th yeare of the raigne of our Sovereaine Lady Elizabeth."

By one of the shots§ fired on that occasion, Jenkin Keigwin lost his life, and his burial at Paul is thus recorded in the parish register: "1595 Jenkin Keigwin of Mousehole, being killed by the Spaniards was buried the 24th of Julie."

Though the property of the Keigwins at Mousehole and in its immediate neighbourhood has long since passed into other hands, the extensive influence which they once possessed there is still remembered by the inhabitants; and in an interesting tale, written by Mr. Carne, of which that village is the scene, their former importance is very pleasantly described: "Although its inhabitants were now, with regard to the possessions of this world, in general, on a happy footing of equality, possessing a bare competence, free alike from riches and penury, this had not always been the case. The roomy and massive dwelling|| of the last survivor of an old family, the only grandee of the place, had not very remotely become the chief inn in the village; yet the faded portraits on some of the walls, the gloomy air of many of the spacious apartments, and, above all, the decaying walls, on parts of which ivy had grown, of the ancient and now neglected garden, proved that the possessor had been a man of opulence, and, as was still recollected, of influence in the village, almost equal to that of a feudal chieftain."¶

During the civil wars, the Keigwins appear to have continued loyal to their sovereign. Their names are not to be found among the gentry of the neighbourhood who subscribed a resolution in 1638 to support the Protector;  and the representative of the family married the daughter of a distinguished royalist. In the following letter from one of the Parliamentary commanders, a Keigwin is said to have been actively engaged in the King's service:

SIR,

30th June, 1646.

I believe the castle of Pendennis will not be long out of our hands; a dogger boat with four guns I have taken, whereof one Kedgwin of Penzant was captain, a notable active knave against the Parliament, and had the King's commission; but now would fain be a merchant man, and was balasted with salt and had divers letters in her for Pendennis castle. Aboard the Andrew before Pendennis castle. W. BATTEN.††

Lineage.

An account of the family of NICOLAS will be found in a former page of this volume,* where it is stated that SIR HARRIS NICOLAS is the fourth son of Captain JOHN-HARRIS NICOLAS, of the royal navy, the representative of one of those Protestant Refugees, whom the revocation of the Edict of Nantes drove into an honourable exile in this country. The words of the biographer of Sir Samuel Romilly, when speaking of his ancestor, who fled from persecution on the same occasion, are strictly applicable to the ancestor of this family: "Proscribed by a bigoted and arbitrary government for his adherence to the doctrines of the Reformed Religion, this excellent man resolved to tear himself from his birth-place and his friends, and to seek a country where he might worship God after the faith of his fathers, and the dictates of his own heart. The land of his choice was England—then happily an asylum to the victims of oppression in every quarter of the world. Here, with few means of support beyond his own exertions, he embarked in trade, educated his sons to similar occupations, and was contented at his death to leave them, instead of his original patrimony, no other inheritance than the example of his own industrious habits and virtuous life, an hereditary detestation of tyranny and injustice, and an ardent zeal in the cause of Civil and Religious liberty."

Captain JOHN-HARRIS NICOLAS, † m. Margaret, the youngest daughter and co-heiress of John Blake, (by Anne, second daughter and co-heiress of the Rev. John Keigwin, second son of John Keigwin, esq. of Mousehole,) by whom he has five sons,

- ii. Paul-Harris, first-lieutenant of the royal marines.
- iii. William-Keigwin, lieutenant of the navy.
- iv. NICHOLAS-HARRIS (Sir).
- v. Charles-Henry.

It is stated in the account of the family of KEIGWIN, ‡ that the Rev. John Keigwin, above mentioned, married Prudence, sister and heiress of WILLIAM BUSVARGUS, esq. of Busvargus, in Cornwall, and that his mother was Margaret, the daughter of Colonel JOHN GIFFARD, of Brightley, in Devonshire, of which families we shall state some particulars.

Giffard, of Brightley.

The family of GIFFARD is of great antiquity in Devonshire, where it flourished as early as the reign of HENRY II.

SIR ROGER GIFFARD, a younger son of John Giffard, of Halesbury, having married Margaret, daughter and co-heiress of John Cobleigh, of Brightley, near Chittlehampton, acquired with her that estate, which he had inherited from the Fitzwarines, who assumed the name of Brightley. Their son,

JOHN GIFFARD, esq. m. Mary, daughter of Sir Richard Granville, of Stow, in Cornwall, (ancestor of the Earls of Bath,) by Maud, daughter and co-heir of John Beville, esq. of Gwarnock, in that county; and by her had, besides many other children, his eldest son,

JOHN GIFFARD, esq. of Brightley, who m. Honor, daughter of Walter Erle, esq. of Charlborough, in the county of Dorset, and was father of

ARTHUR GIFFARD, esq. who m. Anne, daughter of Thomas Leigh, esq. of Borough, in Devonshire, and had, besides four daughters, five sons, viz.

| Lewis, aged twelve | |
| Thomas, aged nine | |

The eldest son,

JOHN GIFFARD, esq. b. 1602, succeeded his father, at Brightley, in 1616, and during the Civil Wars was one of the staunchest adherents of his sovereign. He was "decimated, sequestered, and imprisoned,"† and paid £1136 as a composition for his estates. After the Restoration he was selected to be a Knight of the proposed order of the Royal Oak, and d. in 1666. According to his biographer, "he was a gentleman of a very grave and comely aspect, of an obliging carriage, of a sober life, and a pious conversation. Such was his deportment towards men in all his actions, as if he were conscious that the eye of God was upon him; and such his behaviour towards God, in the instances of devotion and religion, as if he thought he was a spectacle to angels and to men. Insomuch, his sobriety and piety brought great reputation to the Royal cause in those parts where he lived; and he was an excellent ornament to his profession, both as a subject and a Christian." †

Colonel Giffard married Joan, the youngest daughter of Sir John Wyndham, of Orchard Wyndham, in Somersetshire, by Joan, daughter of Sir Henry Portman, and by her had three sons‡ and several daughters. Of those daughters,

He obtained the rectory of Hiddleford through his relative, the Earl of Bath, from which living, in common with numerous other loyal clergymen, he was ejected. He was, however, restored on the return of CHARLES II. and d. in March, 1668.

Sir Hardinge Giffard visited Brightley, the seat of his ancestors in 1791, and expressed his feelings on the occasion in some spirited verses which were printed in the Gentleman's Magazine, for March, 1799. Alluding to the services of Colonel Giffard to CHARLES the First, the Colonel's spirit is supposed to say,

"Though proud achievements prove our spotless birth,
Our loyalty a prouder boast shall prove;
For while we trod in mortal form the earth,
Our King possess'd our lives,—our swords—our love!

But ere my wearied bones had sunk to rest,
I saw my Monarch's son regain his throne,
The glorious vision calm'd my aching breast,
I sunk in death without a parting groan.

And you, my son, attend to my command,
Defend your King—be loyalty your pride;
And should contending factions tear the land,
Prove it most firmly when most firmly tried."

Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, K.G. m. Elizabeth, sister and co-heir of Thomas, Earl of Arundel, K.G. Their eldest daughter, and eventually co-heir, Margaret-Mowbray, m. Sir Robert Howard, and left issue.

John Howard, Duke of Norfolk, K.G. Earl Marshal, who was slain at Bosworth Field, August, 1485, m. Katherine, daughter of William, Lord Molines, and, besides other issue, had,

Margaret-Howard, m. Sir John Wyndham, of Felbrigg, in Norfolk. Their son,

Sir John Wyndham, of Orchard, m. Eleanor, daughter and co-heir of Sir Richard Scrope, and had issue, as is above-mentioned.

The loyalty of the Wyndham family became proverbial from the emphatic admonition of Sir Thomas Wyndham to his son, "not to desert the Crown though it hung upon a bush;" and an interesting relic of the attachment which Colonel Giffard bore to his Sovereign has descended from his daughter, Mrs. Keigwin, to her great-great-grandson, Captain Toup Nicolas. It consists of a small gold ring, set with diamonds, within which is a concealed miniature of CHARLES I., beautifully enamelled on a turquoise. Mrs. Keigwin appears to have been a woman of superior attainments; and the following verses on the death of her grandmother, Joan, daughter of Sir Henry Portman, of Orchard, in Somersetshire, who d. 1633, were written before she was eighteen.

"On the memory of the most virtuous and honourable lady, the Lady Joan Wyndham.

Two Orchards¹ had a several right to thee,
A Portman's graft, a Wyndham's fruitful tree;
The one gave her life and being, but the other
Made her a fruitful wife and happy mother.
She, on her Orchard, like a dew distill'd,
And all her house with a rich plenty fill'd.
Wisdom she made her guide, and providence
The measure of her fair and large exence;
So that the fountain never was drawn dry
Of her most constant hospitality.
She, skillfully putting the same in cure,
And hence she made her Knight's dear heart secure.

The greater is his loss, but that he knew
The sun at length exhales the fruitful dew.
But no less happy in her motherhood,
She had a numerous issue, and a good.
For nine brave sons she educated, saw
In arts, in arms, in courtship, and in law,²
Which they assumed, not, as is now the fashion,
Only for refuge, but for recreation:
They needed not those helps for to increase
Their private portions, but their country's peace.
Besides six daughters, whom her prudent care
And pattern framed, as virtuous as fair,
And all in freshest flower of their age,
She saw with comfort join'd in marriage.
By whom, to make her happiness the more,
She saw her children's children's happy store.
Faithful and happy, fruitful, full of days,
God took her hence, with her immortal praise;
For 'twas not fit an Orchard here below,
Should keep the tree that should in Eden grow.

MARGARET GIFFARD."

² Sir Hugh Wyndham, the sixth son, was a judge of the Common Pleas, and Sir Wadham Wyndham, the seventh son, was one of the Justices of the King's Bench, and father of Thomas Wyndham, Lord Chancellor of Ireland.

Family of Busvargus.

The original name of the BUSVARGUS family was LETHON. JOHN LETHON having purchased the estate of BUSVARGUS, (which name signifies, in the Cornish language, "The house on the top of the wood,") in the parish of St. Just, in Penwith, first adopted the name of Busvargus as an alias, but soon afterwards abandoned that of Lethon altogether. He was living at Busvargus in the 20th ELIZABETH, 1578, and by Janepher, daughter of John Sparnon, of Breage, in the county of Cornwall, had,

I. JOHN.

II. Thomas, living 1608.

JOHN BUSVARGUS, the eldest son, d. 1st May, 1607, and, by Mary, daughter of Thomas Randall, of Mabe, (who m. secondly, in June, 1611, John Noy, of St. Burian, d. March, 1614,) had,

II. Alice, m. Nicholas Balson, of Paul, and was living in 1620.

* The family of HILL of TRENETHICK was one of the most ancient in Cornwall. John Hill, alias Bodow, m. Jane, daughter and heir of John de Bodow, by the daughter and heir of Walter le Seneschall, eight generations before 1620, and his descendants having formed alliances with the families of Trefusis, Vyvyan, Erisey, and Penrose, became related to those of Granville, Gilbert, Gorges, Bonville, Arundell, Carminow, Rasleigh, Enys, Killigrew, Petit, and many others of equal respectability.

† A curious inventory of his effects is printed in the Gentleman's Magazine for January, 1827.

‡ A pedigree of the PAWLEY family, attested by George Owen, York herald, of which a copy is preserved in the College of Arms, is said "to have been in the keeping of Mrs. Busvargus, of St. Just, in Penwith, 19th March, 1747." It commences with STEPHEN PAWLEY, of Gunwin, in Cornwall, who m. Margery, daughter and co-heir of Ambrose Brea, of Paul, whose son and heir, STEPHEN PAWLEY, m. June, daughter of Hugh Samford, of Combflorie, in Somersetshire. He died without issue, 20th April, 1641, being then seised of that property, as appears by the inquisition taken on his decease, and leaving his brother.

WILLIAM BUSVARGUS, his heir, who was bapt. 9th February, 1623. He signed the resolution of the gentry in his neighbourhood to support the Protector in 1658, and died at Busvargus, in April, 1665, leaving, by Prudence, daughter of Hugh Pawley, of Lelant, gentleman,‡ whom he married in June, 1648, and who survived until December, 1708,

This gentleman, whose patronymic is DOWNING, assumed the surname and arms of FULLERTON on inheriting the property of his maternal great uncle.

Lineage.

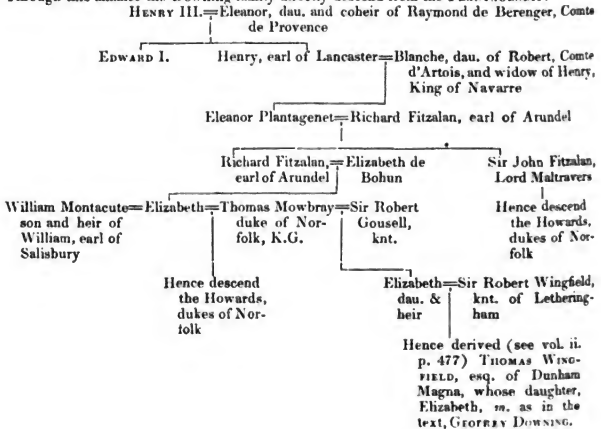

The family of Downing, as recorded by authentic documents, is of very ancient descent, and was settled, in the time of HENRY VIII., in the county of Essex; the head of the house described then as a person of rank and fortune,

GOFFREY DOWNYNG, gent. of Poles Belcham, in Essex, m. Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Wingfield,* esq. of Dunham Magna, in Norfolk, son of Sir John Wingfield, of Dunham Magna, and grandson of Sir John Wingfield, K.B. of Letheringham (see vol. ii. p. 477), and had a son, ARTHUR DOWNYNG, esq. of Lexham, in Norfolk, who m. Susan, daughter (and co-heir with her sister Anne, wife of John

* Through this alliance the Downing family directly descend from the PLANTAGENETS:

Wingfield, esq. of Upton) of Thomas Calybut, esq. of Castle Acre, in Norfolk, and had a son,

CALYBUT DOWNING, esq. of Shennington, in Gloucestershire, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Wingfield, esq. of Upton, in Northamptonshire, by Elizabeth, his wife, sister of William Cecil, Lord Burghley, treasurer to Queen Elizabeth, and was father of

CALYBUT DOWNING, who became a commoner in Oriol College, Oxford, in 1623, and subsequently entering into holy orders, was made rector of Hickford, in Buckinghamshire, and of West Ildesley, in Berkshire; which latter he afterwards exchanged for the living of Hackney, in Middlesex. He m. Margaret, daughter and coheir of Robert Brett, D.D., and dying in 1644, left issue,

1. GEORGE, (Sir) of East Hatley, in Cambridgeshire, who was created a BARONET, 1st July, 1663. This distinguished person, who acted a prominent part in the eventful period in which he lived, was sent, during the Protectorate, ambassador to the States General of Holland. He sat for several years in parliament; and after the Restoration, became secretary of the treasury, teller of the exchequer, and one of his majesty's commissioners of customs. With Sir George Downing, when secretary of the treasury, originated the important act of the 17 CHARLES II., "To make all the money that was to be raised by this bill to be applied only to those ends to which it was given, which was the carrying on of the war, and to no other purpose whatsoever, or by what authority soever." This important innovation, and one which was the origin of estimates being laid before the House of Commons, was the more necessary in that reign, as it was well known the public service was much injured by the application of money to the purposes of the pleasures of the court, instead of the interests and defence of the country. Sir George Downing was opposed violently by Lord Clarendon, who was such a slave to his narrow prepossessions, that he would rather see the dissolute excesses he abhorred, derive nourishment from that revenue which had been allotted to maintain the national honour, and which, by its deficiencies thus aggravated, had caused the navy to be laid up, and the coasts to be left defenceless, than suffer them to be restrained by the only power to which thoughtless luxury would submit. In 1670, Sir George Downing proceeded again as ambassador to Holland, on the recall of Sir W. Temple, and remained there until 1672, when the war again broke out. He m. a lady greatly distinguished for beauty, Frances, fourth daughter of Sir William Howard, knt. of Naworth Castle, in Cumberland, and sister to the first Earl of Carlisle, and dying in 1684, left issue,

1. GEORGE (Sir), 2nd baronet, of East Hatley, one of the tellers of the exchequer temp. JAMES II., who m. Catharine, eldest daughter of James, Earl of Salisbury, by Margaret, his wife, daughter of John, Earl of Rutland, and had an only son, GEORGE (Rt. Hon. Sir), 3rd bart. of East Hatley, knight of the bath, and FOUNDER of DOWNING COLLEGE, Cambridge. He m. Miss Forester, daughter of Sir William Forester, knt. of Watling-street, in Shropshire, and died s. p. in 1749. By a will dated in 1717, he devised all his property to his cousin and heir, Sir JACOB DOWNING; and in case his line failed, he directed the foundation of a college at Cambridge, which event took place in 1800, after much litigation. Sir George represented Dunwich in parliament.

2. William died s. p.

3. Charles, comptroller of the customs, who m. Sarah, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Garrard, bart., and d. 15th April, 1740, leaving a son,

- IV. Anne.

The second son,

HENRY DOWNING, esq. was father of

COLONEL ADAM DOWNING, who went over to Ireland with WILLIAM III., and held the rank of colonel in his army. He was present at the siege of Derry, and there gave early and signal proofs of his courage. Subsequently he raised a body of men at his own expense, and served during the war in Ireland, participating in the battle of the Boyne, and contributing eminently by his gallantry and skill, to the success of the party with which he was engaged. For these services he received the appointments of deputy governor of the county of Derry, colonel of the militia, and one of the commissioners of array, and was also granted by his royal master, a large tract of land in the county of Derry, still possessed by his descendant. He m. Margaret, daughter of Thomas Jackson, esq. of Coleraine, ancestor of Sir George Jackson, bart., by Margaret Beresford, of the noble family of Waterford, and had a son and successor.

JOHN DOWNING, esq. of Dawson's-bridge, who inherited the spirit of his father, and raised, during the rebellion of 1745, at considerable expense, a body of men to serve his king and country in a moment of great difficulty and danger. He m. Margaret, daughter and heir of the Rev. J. Rowe,

D.D., descended from an ancient Devonshire family, and had three sons, namely, CLOTWORTHY, his heir, who had two sons, John and Giffard. The latter, a military officer, was severely wounded at Corunna.

John, who served in Germany, and d. s. p.

DAWSON, of whose line we have to treat.

The youngest son,

DAWSON DOWNING, esq. of Rowsgift, in the county of Londonderry, married Catherine Fullerton, niece and heiress of Alexander Fullerton, esq. of Ballintoy Castle, in the county of Antrim, descended from a branch of the ancient Scottish family of that name, and had one son, George Alexander, who, having inherited a considerable property from his great uncle, assumed, in compliance with that gentleman's testamentary injunction, the surname and arms of FULLERTON, and is the present GEORGE-ALEXANDER FULLERTON, esq. of Westwood and Ballintoy.

THORNBROUGH, OF BISHOPSTEIGNTON.

THORNBROUGH, EDWARD-LECRAS, esq. of Clifton, in the county of Gloucester, captain R. N. b. at Portsmouth, 1st December, 1795, m. 30th November, 1820, Emily-Raikes, second daughter of Daniel Garrett, esq. of Dawlish, in the county of Devon. Mrs. Thornbrough is granddaughter of Robert Raikes, esq. of Gloucester, the celebrated founder of Sunday Schools.

The Thornbrough family, or, as it was formerly written, Thornborough, was long settled in the county of Devon; and one of its distinguished ancestors is recorded in Prince's Worthies of that shire, as having had, while bishop of Limerick, in Ireland, a most miraculous escape from destruction, with all his family, by the falling in of the roof of the house during the night. This bishop was afterwards translated to Worcester. To another of its members, in the reign of Queen ELIZABETH, a monument was erected in Westminster Abbey, bearing the exact arms of the present family, and having the following epitaph:—"Here lies an honest courtier."

services, &c. and was buried at South Stoke, Arundel, Sussex, leaving, with two daughters, the elder of whom m. to Mr. Parker,* of Gloucester, and the younger, Elizabeth, to Lieutenant Blaxton, R.N. a son,

EDWARD THORNBROUGH, b. at Plymouth Dock, now Devonport, in 1754. He entered the naval service of his country at a very early age, and maintained the highest reputation in his gallant profession, being constantly employed under flag and pendant for half a century—the most eventful and brilliant period of our naval annals. In the year 1775 he was lieutenant of the Falcon, one of the vessels covering the attack on Bunker's Hill; and on the 3rd of August, that year, distinguished himself by cutting out an armed schooner near Cape Ann Harbour, Bay of Fundy, where he was severely wounded in three places. Lieut. Thornbrough was then appointed first lieutenant of the Flota, commanded by Captain Pierre Williams,† and on the 1st August, 1780, fell in with the French frigate La Nymph, off Ushant, which was captured after a most desperate resistance. Lieutenant Thornbrough's gallantry was conspicuous on this occasion, having at last carried her by boarding, and by his example greatly assisting towards the successful termination of the contest. He was early rewarded for his conduct, having been immediately made a commander, and soon after appointed to a ship, and ordered to the coast of America. The following year he was raised to the rank of post captain, and given the command of the Blonde frigate, 32 guns. In this ship he served under Admiral Digby, in North America, and cruised in company with Lord Nelson. In May, 1782, the Blonde being ordered to cruise off Boston, in the hope of intercepting a frigate of the same name, which was the only ship of war then belonging to the Americans, fell in with seven armed ships, and after a sharp engagement, succeeded in capturing one of the largest, mounting twenty-two guns, laden with choice spars and stores for the French fleet. While towing her prize into port, she unfortunately struck on a rock off the Seal Islands, and was totally lost. The crew having, by means of a raft, succeeded in reaching a desert island, affording nothing eatable but vetches, they remained there some days in the utmost distress, exposed to incessant rain, until they were providentially relieved by two American cruisers, who, upon recognizing Captain Thornbrough, treated him with the kindest attention, and in grateful return for his uniform humanity and kindness to his prisoners, took them on board, and landed part of them at Halifax. The rest, with Captain Thornbrough, having fallen in with his Majesty's brig Observer, Lieutenant Grimes, went on board, and the next day, meeting with a large American privateer of Sambro Lighthouse, called the Saucy Jack, they captured her, after a severe action. Captain Thornbrough having been acquitted at Halifax for the loss of his ship, returned to England, and shortly after received an appointment to the Hebe, of thirty-eight guns, in which his present Majesty was appointed a lieutenant in June, 1785. In the same month, the broad pendant of the Honorable J. L. Gower, having been hoisted on board the Hebe, she proceeded on a cruise round Great Britain; after which, Prince WILLIAM-HENRY continued to serve with Captain Thornbrough until February, 1786. The captain retained the command of the Hebe for six years, which was considered an extraordinary mark of favour during peace. In 1790, he was appointed to the Scipio, sixty-four guns, which was paid off after the adjustment of the Spanish disturbance, and Captain Thornbrough retired on half-pay.

On the declaration of war with France, in 1793, Captain Thornbrough was appointed to the Latona, a choice thirty-eight-gun frigate, on the home station, and, in the course of the summer, captured several French merchant vessels, besides three mischievous privateers, called l'Amérique, le Franklin, and l'Ambitieux, of ten guns each; and in the following November, when attached to Lord Howe's fleet, he particularly distinguished himself in the pursuit of part of Vaustabel's fleet, which, however, made their escape. On the 27th of November the Latona and Phæton captured the national ship Blonde, of twenty-eight guns. Captain Thornbrough, the following winter and spring, was employed in watching the Brest fleet; and during the night previous to the glorious battle of the 1st of June, was stationed by Lord Howe between the two fleets, to keep the enemy in sight.‡

Captain Thornbrough was shortly afterwards appointed to the Robust, seventy-four, in which ship he remained under Lord

* The issue of this marriage was a son and daughter. The former, EDWARD THORNBROUGH PRINCE, commander, R. N. was mortally wounded at the attack on Boulogne, under Lord Nelson, and was buried at Deal.

† His present Majesty, on coming to the throne, selected Sir Edward Thornbrough to convey to his old captain, Admiral Pierre-Williams Freeman, then ninety years of age, and admiral of the fleet, the baton of office which had been given to his present Majesty by GEORGE IV.

‡ In RALEY'S Naval Chronology is a letter of Lord Howe's, after the 1st of June, wherein Captain Thornbrough's name is honourably mentioned, for his conduct on the 1st June.

Howe's orders, until the winter of 1794. He was successively employed under Rear-Admiral Colpoys, Sir J. B. Warren, and Lord Bridport, in the Channel, and off Brest, until October, 1798, when, having been again placed under the orders of Sir J. B. Warren, he proceeded off Ireland with the squadron, where they fell in with the enemy's ships off Lough Swilly, under the command of Commodore Bompert, consisting of La Hoche, eighty guns, and eight frigates, with troops destined to be landed in Ireland. The Robust first coming up, engaged La Hoche, and, after an action of four hours, Commodore Bompert was compelled to surrender to her. La Hoche was one of the most superb ships of her class, and is the present Donegal, in our service. She lost, killed and wounded, two hundred and seventy men. The Robust had ten killed and four wounded.

At the flag promotion which took place in February, 1799, Captain Thornbrough was nominated colonel of Marines, and appointed afterwards to the Formidable, ninety-eight, in which he served on the Channel and Mediterranean stations, until January, 1801, when, on the Union promotion, he was advanced to the rank of rear-admiral of the Blue, and hoisted his flag on board the Mars, seventy-four guns, Captain R. Loyde, and was, during the remainder of the war, employed in the arduous but monotonous duty of watching Brest. On the renewal of hostilities, after having commanded in the Downs, Rear-Admiral Thornbrough was appointed to a division of the North Sea fleet, which were placed under his orders by Lord Keith, having his flag on board the Defence, seventy-four guns. He remained there eleven months.† Early in 1805 he assumed the important station of captain of the Channel fleet, under Lord Gardiner. In the same year he was raised to the rank of vice-admiral of the Blue, having hoisted his flag on board the Kent, seventy-eight guns, Captain Henry Garrett, and was nominated by Lord Nelson to command a squadron of fast sailing line-of-battle ships, destined to reinforce him, but which were rendered unnecessary by the battle of Trafalgar. In the following year, having shifted his flag on board the Prince of Wales, ninety-eight guns, he maintained the blockade of Rochefort, until relieved by Sir S. Hood. In 1806 his flag was flying on board the Ville de Paris. In 1807, having been appointed second in command of the Mediterranean fleet, he hoisted his flag in the Royal Sovereign, one hundred guns, and remained on that station, assisting to blockade the Toulon fleet, and performing many other important services until the end of 1809. In August, 1810, he was appointed commander-in-chief on the Irish station, which he held till November, 1813. He attained the rank of admiral of the Blue, in the December of that year. Lineage.

The family of Surtees, of Dinsdale, situated in Durham, on the banks of the Tees, were tenants in capite of the barony of Gosforth,* from the time of the early Norman princes, till, in the beginning of the 16th century, the heirs male of the whole blood became, in the elder branch, extinct. See the Brandling pedigree.

Of the derivation of this surname, Dugdale thus speaks:

"Rivers also have imposed names to some men, as they have to townes situated on them, as the old baron Sur Teys, that is on the river Teys."

The Surteeses of Newcastle are supposed to be cadets of this ancient family, and bear the same arms.

Lineage.

The family of De Catton or Caton, was originally seated in the county of Norfolk, where the name appears to be of great antiquity, and is presumed to have been derived from the village of Catton; near Norwich. At the time of the Survey there were two villages so designated in the county, the one situated in the hundred of Blofield, the other in the hundred of Taverham, and in Domesday book spelt Catun and Catuna. The first was granted to Eudo, sewer or steward of the Conqueror's household, as part of his fees. WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR had the capital manor of the second village, and William de Noyers was his steward. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret, and here stood the effigies of Pater Robert de Catton, prior of Norwich in 1526. § Venerabilis ac religiosus in Christo Pater, Robertus de Catton, prior

* The name of Power is to be found in Battel Abbey Roll. Sir Roger Le Poer, or Power, was one of the 200 valiant knights who accompanied Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke, to Ireland, and founder of the family in the co. Waterford, ennobled in the Earls of Tyrone. Seven years after the conquest of that country, viz. 1172, we find Hugh de Lacy and Robert Le Power, lords justices, or governors of Ireland, a fact sufficiently indicative of the high rank and influence of the family at that period.

The late Richard Power, esq. of Clashmore House, co. Waterford, Mrs. Caton's uncle (who m. Eliza, daughter of Shapland Carew, esq. of Castleborough, co. Wexford) was a representative for that county during several years, in the Irish Parliament, previously to the Union. It was afterwards represented, during many successive parliaments, by his eldest son, the late Richard Shapland Power, esq. of Clashmore (who m. his cousin Dorothy, daughter of Robert Shapland Carew, esq. of Castleborough, father of Lord Carew, and whose only surviving child, Elizabeth Anne Power, was m. in September, 1835, to Francis Theophilus, Earl of Huntingdon,) and also by his younger son, Robert Power, esq. until 1832, when he withdrew from the representation.

§ In the Index Villarum, printed 1590, we find many villages of the name in England; two in Norfolk, four in Yorkshire, one in Lancashire, as also in Derbyshire and Devonshire.

Verstigan, in his "Restitution of decayed Intelligence," printed at Antwerp in 1605, has the following remark on the ending of surnames of ancient English families in "TON:" this I take to be one of the greatest terminations we have, and therefore of this and these ensuing others, may be said

"In foord, in ham, in leg, and tun,
"The most of English surnames run."

"Though the name hedge do anciently belong to our language, yet we also used sometimes for the same thing the name of tun. In Netherlands they call it a tuyn, and in some parts of England they will say hedging and tyning. Our ancestors in time of war, to defend themselves from being spoiled, would, instead of a palisado as now used, cast a ditch and make a strong hedge about the houses, and the houses so environed about with tunes or hedges, got the name of tunes annexed to them, as Cotetun, now Cotton; Northtun, now Norton; Southtun, now Sutton." The word Caton bears nearly a similar meaning, and most probably had its origin after the above manner.

The name has been variously spelt at different periods as Catun, Caiton, Katon, Catton, Caton, according to the fancy of the bearer, or the rude orthography of the times, as may be seen in some of the older authors and historical writers of counties. The name is not frequent in Yorkshire and Lancashire.

The first recorded are REINALD and HUGH DE CATON, gent., who were witnesses to a grant of land by Anfridi de Canci, or Chauncy, A.D. 1134.

ALANUS, son of Helias de Catton, founded the Benedictine nunnery of Wilberfosse, and gave all his land in Catton to the nunnery, A.D. 1150. It is thus mentioned by Dugdale in his Monasticon Anglicanum. "Alanus de Catton, filius Helie fundator; dedit eis, totam terram quæ pertinet ad fœdum unum cum prato super Derwent Catton. Testes donat: Gulielmus filius Tofti, Robertus Beverle," &c.

WILLIAM, son of Henry de Catton, gave two parts of the mill, with two ox gangs of land in Bulford, to the monks of Rieval Abbey, A.D. 1172.

RICHARD DE CATON, of Rillington, gave land to Yeddingham Nunnery, A.D. 1200.

JOHN DE CATON, and Roger his son, were witnesses to grants of land in the neighbourhood of the town of Caton, A.D. 1216.

EUSTACHIUS FITZ-JOHN CATON gave two carucates of land in Catton, to the monks of Fountain Abbey; and Nicholas de Catton gave the right of a dam for a pool in Caton, A.D. 1237.

ROBERT DE CAITUN, or Caton, gave land to Whitby Abbey, and sold three ox gangs of land which Durand his brother and lord had given him, and who confirmed the same as lord of the see.

WILLIAM DE KATON, or Caton, gave one moiety of Rillington, confirmed by Pope Gregory 9th, to the abbey of Byland; he also gave the homage of Thomas de Crobun, for lands in Ledbriston, to the priory of Burlington, A.D. 1277.

WALTER DE CATTON, born at Catton, by Norwich, in 1304, was prior of the convent of Grey Friars, and became a man of great fame for his manifold learning and exemplary virtues; he was an excellent philosopher and divine, a great mathematician, condemned judiciary astrology. In process of time his reputation spread so far that he was called to the papal court at Avignon, where the Pope made him his penitentiary, and took him for his confessor. De eo Lelandus sic scribit: Gualterus Cattonus sectæ Chordigeræ initiatus philosophiam et sacras literas apprime coluit, quo nomen et famam non emoriturat sibi peperit, monumenta ingenii non infelicia reliquit, "Commentarios in sententiis arum libros," et libellum "De paupertate evangelicâ," "Adversus astrologos."—Resolutions Quæstionum, tandem Pape penitentiarius evasit et Avinioni fati concessit, A.D. 1343, uti habit Minoritarum registram.

RICHARD DE CATTON, or Caton, appeared as a witness (per sacramentum), at an inquisition held at Norwich in 1337.

JOHN DE CATTON, or Katon, of Catton county of Norfolk, living in 1420, was succeeded by his son, Family of Bewley.

The name of this family is said to have been originally spelt Beaulieu, and tradition derives it from the monastery of Beaulieu or Bewley, in the New Forest, founded became allied to the ancient and highly respectable family of Mott. In the church of St. Clements' Burnam Overy, is a gravestone in memory of Mary Mott, daughter of Robert Blyford of Burnam Overy, gent., by Ann his wife; she had two husbands, John Thurston, esq. by whom she lieth, and had a son John surviving. By her second husband, Edmund Mott, M.D., who lieth entombed in New Walsingham church, she had issue, Edmund, Mary, and John, who only survived. She died 24th May, 1702, aged 40.

In the church of St. Mary, Walsingham Parva, on an altar tomb is this inscription: "Sileant Galeni (si qui sint superstites) nostrates posthac artem Ratchiffii despondeant, cohors erubescat medica, en arte lassus, en vita functus simul, hic jacet noster Esculapius, Edmundus Mott, qui obiit 3 die Feb. § From William Hawkmore, esq. younger brother to Mrs. Bewley, the family of Caton became possessed of property in Yorkshire and Nottinghamshire, the latter called Little Irwell, since alienated. The Hawkmores were long seated at Treswell in Nottinghamshire, and had ample possessions in that county. By marriages with the ancient families of Eastland of Lincolnshire, and Machell of Yorkshire, they inherited estates in both counties. Eastland Hawkmore, esq. descended from the eldest branch, who d. at Gainsborough, 18th March, 1732, without issue, willed his property to two nieces, one married to Thomas Waterhouse, esq., the other to James Dealtry, esq. † The following letter relative to an old tankard, now in the possession of the Rev. R. B. Caton, is copied from the Gentleman's Magazine for November, 1790.

Mr. Urban,

Inclosed I have sent you a drawing of the lid of a very old tankard belonging to Mr. Bewley, of this town (Lincoln). The same gentleman has also a set of apostles' spoons, and of ancient pebble hafted knives. The diameter of the lid (considering the angular parts as filled up) is 6½ inches, and the depth of the tankard is 5½ inches. It holds two wine quarts. The shape of it is not cylindrical, but fluted in the sides like four pillars joined together, to correspond with the angular parts of the lid. The flower work on the lid is not chased, but rather indented, particularly the outlines, which are deeply impressed in the silver, and appear raised in the inside of the tankard; the sides are also profusely ornamented in the same manner. The crest, a religious man habited in a cowl, on a helmet, appears to have been engraved at the time the tankard was made; the other part of the arms is modern, the original coat having been erased for a quartering. Can this crest have been first adopted in allusion to the monastery of Bewley, in the New Forest, in which the famous Perkin Warbeck took refuge, where he, and several of his company, registered themselves sanctuary men? Rapin, vol. i. b. 4. fol. 90. The present possessor of this is now near 80, and his father mentioned it to him as having been long remembered in the family. The style of the workmanship appears to me to be of older date than embossing; but some of your correspondents, who are perhaps better acquainted with this matter than I am, will perhaps favour me with their opinion, through the channel of your magazine, to what time we are to refer to it, which will much oblige a constant reader.

HODGSON-HINDE, OF ELSWICK HOUSE.

HINDE-HODGSON, JOHN, esq. of Elswick House and Stelling Hall, in Northumberland, and of Norham Castle in the county of Durham, b. 30th July, 1806, m. 31st January, 1833, Isabella, eldest daughter and co-heir of the late Anthony Compton, esq. of Carham Hall, in Northumberland.

This gentleman, whose patronymic is Hodgson, assumed by sign manual in 1836, in compliance with the testamentary injunction of Miss Elizabeth Archer Hinde, the additional surname of HINDE. He succeeded his father, 12th July, 1820; is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Northumberland, and has been representative for Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in the four Parliaments of WILLIAM IV.

Lineage.

The earliest notice which we have of the family of Hodgson, is in the records of the town of Newcastle, in the reign of EDWARD I. John Hodgson was one of the bailiffs of that town in 1276, and served the office of mayor in 1278, 1280, and 1281, in the last year he was knighted. Richard Hodgson, his son, was twice bailiff, in 1281 and 1288. From this time, for nearly a century and a half, we have no trace of their descendants, but it is believed that both the line we are about to follow, and that of the Hodgsons of Hebburn, which at one period spread into so many branches, all now extinct, over the counties of Northumberland and Durham, sprung from this source.

THOMAS HODGSON, with whom a connected pedigree must commence, was born in 1424, and s. to the estates of Collierley and Biermon on the death of his mother Johanna, daughter and heiress of John de Guildford. He had a son,

HUGH HODGSON, who s. his father, in 1505, and d. 1508, leaving two sons, GEORGE (for whose descendants see Surtees' Durham, vol. ii.) and

WILLIAM HODGSON, who had two sons, William and George. He died before 1566. His second son,

GEORGE HODGSON, living in 1590, had a son,

WILLIAM HODGSON, who was one of the lessees, with Sir William Riddell and others, of the manors of Gateshead and Whickham, held under the crown in trust for the corporation of Newcastle, A. D., 1590. He was an extensive coal owner and had property at Whickham, where he also held several copyhold tenements in right of his wife, Agnes, widow of John Harrison, esq. He had four sons, Richard, George, Samuel, and Henry. The second,

GEORGE HODGSON, s. to the property of his brother Richard on the death of the latter in 1649. He d. in 1669, leaving by Jane his wife, a son,

LUKE HODGSON, esq. who d. in 1691, leaving by his wife Susan, three sons, Luke, a physician in Newcastle, Samuel, a merchant in the same place, and John. The youngest,

JOHN HODGSON, esq. was father of THOMAS HODGSON, esq. who by his wife Mary, had a son John, and two daughters, Jane, d. March 23, 1797, and Mary, d. September 5th, 1769, both unmarried. The only son

James, d. in infancy.

JOHN, heir.

Ann, m. to William Cuthbert, esq. of Newcastle.

JOHN HODGSON, esq. who m. 24th July, 1773, Alice, daughter of Thomas Wilkinson, esq. of Walbottle, and by her, who d. 27th July, 1832, left at his decease, 13th August, 1781, an only son,

JOHN HODGSON, esq. of Elswick, who m. 3rd May, 1803, Sarah, daughter of Richard Huntley, esq. of Friarside, in the county of Durham, and had issue;

JOHN, his heir.

FOX, OF GROVE HILL, OR HIGHER ARWENACK.

FOX, GEORGE-CROKER, esq. of Grove Hill, or Higher Arwenack, near Falmouth, in the county of Cornwall, present representative of the different branches of the Fox family which still continue to reside in Cornwall, m. in 1810, Lucy, daughter of the late Robert Barclay, esq. of Bury Hill, county of Surrey, and sister of Charles Barclay, esq. M.P. for the same county. Mr. G. Croker Fox succeeded his father in 1807.

Lineage.

- iii. James, † baptized there 10th June, 1653. He m. in 1673, Elizabeth Record, of Plymouth, and in 1686, removed with the whole of his family to Philadelphia, with many others, who, like himself, sought for religious liberty in the new State, then founded by William Penn. His descendants in the male line soon became extinct.

Francis Fox died in 1670, and was s. by his eldest son,

FRANCIS FOX, of St. Germans, who m. first, in 1671, Joan, daughter of Richard Smith, of Plymouth, gentleman, by whom he had three sons, who all d. young, and two daughters; the eldest, Rachael, m. George Hodge, and had issue; and the younger, Deborah, m. Samuel Croker, esq. of Plymouth, (of the family of Croker, of Lineham), and had issue. The numerous families of Fox at present residing in different parts of the West of England, sprang from one common ancestor, FRANCIS FOX, who, tradition represents, came from Wiltshire (it is said from the parish of Farley, or from that of Pitton), about the year 1645, during the commotions of the civil war, and settled in the parish of St. Germans, in Cornwall. He is stated to have been descended from the same family as the celebrated Stephen Fox,* (afterwards Sir Stephen), the ancestor of the Earls of Ilchester, the Lords Holland, &c. He m. about the year 1646, Dorothy Kekewich, a relation of the family of Kekewich, of Exeter, whose house at Catchfrench, in St. Germans Parish, being then vacant, became his residence on first settling in Cornwall. This lady, it appears, had little or no dower, and his father, who continued to reside in Wiltshire, being displeased with the alliance, is said to have cut him off with one thousand pounds. † He had issue,

* For an account of the origin of this gentleman, his loyalty, integrity, and good fortune, see Coltins' Peerage.

† Francis Fox and his family joined the Society of Friends soon after its first establishment in Cornwall. Some of them shared in the sufferings that awaited its early members, on account of the stand which they so resolutely and successfully made for liberty of conscience. It is handed down that he was the youngest of seven or eight sons, and that some others of the same family also came into Devonshire and Cornwall subsequently, and settled at Plymouth and Looe, but left no sons who survived.

George Croker Fox, esq. is, as we have stated, the present representative of the Fox family that are still residing in Cornwall: the descendants of the elder branches are settled in other counties, as will be hereafter shown, viz.—George Trevis Fox, the representative of the St. Germans branch, now resides at or near Plymouth; George Fox, of Heavitree, near Exeter, is the head of the Wadebridge and Perran branch; Henry-Hawes Fox, M.D. of Brislington House, near Bristol, is the chief of that part of the family; and Thomas Fox, of Tonedale, near Wellington, is the representative of the Somersetshire branch.

‡ James Fox was a prisoner in the Bridewell at Exeter, in 1683, on account of his religious principles.

§ Tabitha Fox, a widow, was committed to the Sheriff's Ward, at Bodmin, in 1708, on the same account, and detained there from the month of April, 1708, to that of June, 1709. Philip Debell, of East Looe, the father of Anna Debell, the second wife of George Fox, was imprisoned in Bodmin gaol, and ultimately committed to the Fleet prison, in 1710, where he was confined a prisoner nearly three years, on a prosecution for tithes, at the suit of the Rev. * The antiquity of the family of Croker, of Lineham, in the county of Devon, has been for ages recorded, as we have shewn, in vol. i. p. 340, by the old proverbial distich:

“CROKER, CREWYS, and COPPLESTONE,
When the Conqueror came, were at home.”

They became possessed of Lineham by marriage with the heiress of Churchill (the elder branch of the family of the Duke of Marlborough) in the reign of HENRY IV.

The descent of the Fox family from that of Croker is as follows:

* In some circumstances which occurred during the American war, the disinterested conduct of Mr. Joseph Fox, of Falmouth, son of George and Anna Fox, deserves to be recorded here, as exhibiting a striking instance of attachment to the principles of peace, and of a resolution not to participate in profits derived through war.

Joseph had a small share in two cutters, with other owners, who, at the commencement of hostilities with France, in 1778, armed these vessels as letters of marque, in order to capture French merchantmen. He remonstrated against this proceeding, and offered to sell his share, but in vain; the majority was against him. The enterprise was successful, and some valuable ships were captured. His co-partners then endeavoured to prevent him from receiving his proportion of the proceeds, but he insisted upon it, and lodged the amount in the British funds, not disclosing the circumstance to any of his family, but resolving at the first opportunity to make full restitution to the French proprietors.

On peace being restored, in 1783, he took measures for that purpose, and in the following year commissioned his son, Dr. Edward Long Fox, to proceed to Paris, where he first communicated the circumstances to him by letter. Much delay and difficulty obstructed the settlement of the business, and early in 1785, while it was yet in progress, Mr. Joseph Fox died.

A notice was inserted in the Gazette de France, of the 25th February, in that year, and applications in consequence being speedily made by most of the sufferers, the sum of £22,000 was restored to the principal claimants, who made a spontaneous acknowledgment in the same Gazette, as follows:

“9 Août, 1785.

Fox, a satisfait à leur égard à ce qu'il avoit fait annoncer. C'est conformément à leur vœu, que l'on donne ici la publicité qu'il mérite, à ce trait de générosité et d'équité, qui honore la société des Quakers, et prouve leur attachement aux principes de paix et d'union, qui les caractérisent.”

A small sum still remained in the hands of Dr. Fox, the equitable proprietors of which could not be discovered, and the breaking out of the revolutionary war and other circumstances, prevented the disposal of it for many years. At length, in 1818, this sum having increased to about 15,000 francs, he again proceeded to Paris, and after instituting various enquiries as to the best means of its appropriation, he placed this amount in “the treasury of the invalid seamen of France,” for the relief of “non-combatants” of the merchant service, the family of Lefebvre, at Rouen, being invested with a limited power to recommend suitable objects. Thus, as far as circumstances would permit, was the original design of the principal agent completely fulfilled.

Connected with these transactions, two or three particulars deserve a moment's attention. To the honour of the French character it must be stated, that no claim was made by any individual, which was not subsequently proved, by the documents, to be correct.

An example of the evils of war is afforded by the fact, that one of the sufferers by these comparatively trifling captures, was so overwrought by the calamity, that he died of a broken heart. The public advertisement issued by Dr. Fox, drew forth an address to him from a body of Protestants in the South of France, viz. at Nismes, Congenies, &c., whose religious principles closely resemble those of the Society of Friends, in England, and a frequent correspondence and intercourse between the two has since been maintained.

The circumstances here detailed having been matter of notoriety and frequent allusion, both in Great Britain and France, a short notice of them seemed due in this place to the memory of Mr. Joseph Fox.

The addition of the fleurs-de-lis was one of those attentions on the part of the French monarch LOUIS XI. by which he sought to flatter the vanity, and gain the good will of the English gentry. On ministers, says Hume, he lavished pensions and pecuniary bribes. To less influential persons such lighter but more honorable favors as this to Sir John Croker. The

Lineage.

A branch of the great house of DE VISME, eminent for ages in France, and descended originally from a scion of the sovereign Counts de Ponthieu of the first class,* formed

* The family of De Vismes, de Visme, derive their descent from a branch of the House of the Sovereign Counts de Ponthieu of the first race, from which proceeded the ancient Sires or Counts de Vismes, and are presumed to be of the blood royal. M. de Fournay, author of "A History of the Counts de Ponthieu," proves Angilbert, Comte de Paris, descended from Pharamond, founder of the French monarchy, from Alcaireus, son of Ragnacaireus, King of Cambray, Amiens, Mons, etc. and brother of King Clovis, to have been the ancestor of this house. The above-mentioned Angilbert, Comte de Paris, was one of the great lords of the court of King Pepin, who made him chief counsellor of his palace, and merited it is stated to become son-in-law to the Emperor Charlemagne, who made him governor of Ponthieu, which comprised then the Boulonnois, Vimeir, Tunois, Montreuil, Guines, Ardres, and other maritime counties, which he possessed as a duchy, and which from that period became hereditary.

a settlement in Normandy, (as is attested by Ramond de Monfarny in his research made of the nobles in 1463, and by the Rolls of the town and banlieu of Bayeux).

He afterwards, with the consent of his wife, became a religieuse of the monastery of Centulle, afterwards called St. Riquier, and died the 18th Feb., 814. His wife Bertha, of France, daughter of the Emperor Charlemagne and of Hildegunde his second wife, after having had two sons, became a religieuse, and it is stated abbess of Blangy.

The line of the Counts de Ponthieu continued through various successions, to Agnes, Countess of Ponthieu, only daughter and heiress of Count Guy II., who carried this Comté into the house of Alençon, of the race of Montgomery, whence came the second race of the Counts of Ponthieu. The Comté of Ponthieu afterwards passed by marriage into the house of Aumale, and formed the third race of the Counts de Ponthieu, of whom Elinor, of Castille, Countess of Ponthieu, in the year of our Lord, 1254, married EDW. I. King of England; she succeeded her mother to the exclusion of Jean de Ponthieu, Count d'As-and adopted the opinions of the Protestants, probably from political reasons. This branch enjoyed its possessions until ruined by the wars of religion, and afterward the edict of Nantes in 1685, retired from France, when

PHILLIPPE DE VISME, a Hugonot nobleman, settled in England. He m. 26th July, 1716, old style, Marianne de la Majanes, last descendant of a Protestant branch of the ancient and noble family of Picquet, Marquis de Majanes, originally of Picardy, and had issue, male, her nephew. The Comté of Ponthieu was confiscated under her grandson, King EDWARD III. of England, and united to the crown of France 14th May, 1580.

The Sires or Counts de Visme (Comites Vimacensis, Counts of the Vimeau territory) spoken of as being amongst the most illustrious and powerful of the princes of their day, derived from Guilelmus or Guatterus, fourth son of William, first of the name, eighth Count de Ponthieu, assumed their surname and title from a place of the same name within the Duchy of Ponthieu, situated in the Vimeau and near the river Breste, which takes its source above the town of Aumale, and throws itself into the Manche near Treport, after having separated Southern Picardy from Normandy, it is separated into two villages, under the names of Visme au Mont and Visme au Val, forming together a population of six hundred inhabitants. The registers of the Abbey of St. Vallery attest that Visme was a Comté extending from the Somme to the sea, and was one of the most considerable seigneuries of the ancient Counts de Ponthieu of the first race, and gave its name to that part of Lower Picardy called Vimeux, of which St. Vallery became the capital, after the ruin of the castle of Visme, which was one of the most strongly fortified of ancient Neustrie. The Comté de Visme was then so considerable that its seigneurs had established a prévôté, of which the prévôt was noble d'épée, but the judgment rested in the high bailli of Amiens, as bailli royal. The prévôté was afterwards confiscated under the Duke of Burgundy.—Histoire de France, vol. xvii. p. 414.

In the archives of the Abbey of St. Requier Fanum Sancti Ricardi, situated in the Comté of Ponthieu, at twelve leagues from Abbeville, mention is made of the Sires, Barons, and Counts de Visme, who amongst other seigneurs had made gifts to this celebrated abbey.

The elder branch of the Sires or Counts de Visme continued through a long line to Jeanne de Visme, Dame de Visme, and finally merged into the House of Orange. She became, in the 13th century, sole heiress of the patrimonial seigneuries of her house, and marrying Mathieu de Coyeu, sire de Senarpont, (descended from the ancient Counts of Guines and Ardres), carried into her husband's family all the seigneuries of this illustrious house. The last male descendant of the above-named Mathieu de Coyeu dying about the year 1407, without male issue, the seigneurie of Visme passed into the House of Monchy, by the marriage of Jeanne de Coyeu, Dame de Visme and Senarpont, with John, second seigneur de Monchy, descendant of Henry Seigneur de Monchy and of Catherine de Montmorency. The last of the elder branch of this family who took the title of Baron de Visme and Marquis of Senarpont, was Marie Madeline Amicie. She married, 1st December, 1743, Maxmillian William Adolphus, Prince of Orange, (born at Paris 1st October, 1722, and died the 17th January, 1748), legitimate son of the Prince Emanuel of Nassau and of Charlotte de Maily Neale. The Princess of Nassau died the 12th April, 1752, leaving Charles Henry Nicolas Otho, Prince of Orange and of Nassau, born the 7th April, 1745, and Charlotte Amicie, Princess of Orange and of Nassau, born posthumous the 6th April, 1748.

The seigneurs de Visme were not contented with being illustrious in their own country, but carried afar the glory of their name, for in the list of the nobles who accompanied William, Duke of Normandy, to the conquest of England in the year of our Lord, 1066, we find Theobald Sire de Visme (called Vimers in the Chronicles of W. Taylor) described as the near relation of Roger, Seigneur de Montgomery, and Vicomte de Hiesmes, who commanded the advanced guard of his army. The Sire de Visme, it is presumed, ranked in England amongst the great barons of the realm. His name is to be found recorded in Domesday Book. Again, some years later, in 1089, two other Sires or Counts de Visme are found amongst the French seigneurs who followed the Duke Henry of Burgundy, grandson of Hughes Capet, in his expedition to Portugal, when he carried succours to King Alphonse VI., who was attacked by the Moors. The Sires de Visme, in recompense for their services, received a certain extent of territory to which they gave their name, and are recorded as the Seigneurs de Vimioso or Vimeiro. After their extinction their territory became the appanage of the princes of the House of Braganza, which is attested by an ancient manuscript in parchment, which contains the genealogy of the royal houses of France and Portugal. (P. 98.)

The Seigneurs de Visme were also of the different expeditions made to the Holy Land. In 1215 Raval, Baron de Visme, made a crusade to the Holy Land, and was one of the most valiant heroes of that day. About this period the arms of the family, which had been borne in chief argent, were a chevron gules, accompanied with a crescent, on a field argent. In the course of time the family divided into several younger branches. One branch formed an establishment in Normandy, and from that line the present English family of De Visme.

FRANCIS I.) received the golden ring, the sword and golden spurs, and was honoured, the first on whom it had been conferred, with the office of Grand Référendaire in the Chancellerie of Toulouse. FRANCIS I. was, it is well known, fond of the belles lettres, and d'Auriol's reputation for learning had widely extended. On a visit his Majesty paid to Toulouse, he enquired if he wished for greater riches, and for a higher title. "I thank your Majesty," replied d'Auriol, "for your goodness, but I am sufficiently rich, and as to more exalted honours, I am of the truest and highest nobility, being descended from a long line of illustrious ancestors: but lest your Majesty will not think me ungrateful I will ask a favour, which is, that your Majesty will do me the honour, for me and my descendants, to hold my stirrup when I mount on horseback." FRANCIS acceded to the request, a grant he had never previously made to any other subject in the kingdom.

He succeeded to his father's estates in 1791.

Lineage.

The family of Goddard, of Wilts, or Godard, as it was anciently spelt, is of very great antiquity. It derives its origin from Saxon source, possessed property in England previous to the Conquest, and is recorded in Domesday. Subsequently to this, some of the family resided in Hants, and some Godards are recorded in the Winton Domesday as residing and possessing land there, temp. HENRY I. After this period becoming more numerous, the family appears to have separated, one branch having settled in the counties of Leicester and Norfolk, time of King JOHN (recorded in Chancellor's Rolls, 3rd year King JOHN, 1202).

In 1233 Thomas Godard, son of Godard, held lands in Middleton, in the county of Norfolk. In 31 of EDWARD III. a fine was levied on the lands of Nicholas Godard, of the same place. Lands were conveyed to Nicholas and Walter Godard 3rd of RICHARD II. About this time Walter Godard was lord of Denvers, having married the heiress of that family; his heir, Robert Godard, held a lordship in Walpole, and was buried in Terrington church 1448. Of this family was Sir John Godard, governor of Louviers in Normandy, 6 HENRY V. (See Bloomfield's Norf.)

In the reign of King JOHN we gain the first authentic information of the settlement of the Godard family in Wilts.

WALTER GODARD-VILLE, or GODARD-VIL, who for some purpose appears to have added to his originally Saxon name the Norman termination of ville, (which his descendants as readily discarded), held tenements and lands in Chippenham and Albourn, in the county of Wilts. We also find grants of lands to him in the reign of HENRY III. at Bourton, in the county of Northampton, at Pedrisham, in the county of Dorset, and at Liskered. In 1234 an injunction was issued to the said Walter Godard-ville from HENRY III. to send horses and arms in assistance to the Earl of Brittany. He died at a late period of the 13th century,* and from him lineally descended

JOHN GODARD de Poulton, living from the reign of RICHARD II. to that of HENRY VI. He possessed property in Wilts, near Marlborough, and also in Berks. His name is among the landed gentry of the latter county returned by commissioners 12 HENRY VI. and by his will soon afterwards he left some property to his daughter, and all his lands to his son and heir,

JOHN GODARD, de Poulton, near Marlborough, who left, inter alios, a son,

WALTER GODARD, de Cherhill, in the county of Wilts, living in 1460. The name of his wife is not recorded, but in the county visitations and old family papers he is said to have left a son,

JOHN GODARD, de Upham, in Albourn, (in which his ancestor, Walter Godard-ville, had possessed lands several centuries before), and de Cliffe Pypard, where the Rev. Edward Goddard, the representative of his family, still resides, in whose possession there is, on parchment with the seal of King EDWARD I. quite perfect, the original charter of the manor and free warren of Cliffe Pypard to Roger de Cobham, from whose family it came to the Goddards; it is dated Aug. 1. 32 EDWARD I. A. D. 1304. He has also the original grant of the impropriate rectory and the advowson of the vicarage of Cliffe, dated 30th September, 1531, from King HENRY VIII. to the above J. Godard, de Upham, which had belonged to the monastery of Lacock, in the county of Wilts. HENRY VIII. granted also to John Godard "tenements and lands in Wigglestote, in the parish of Wroughton, tenements and lands in Wanborough and Upham, tenements and lands in North Tidworth, in the county of Hants, lately belonging to the abbey of Bradenstock," for many of which the original grants still remain. WERDEN, OF LEYLAND.

BAYNTUN, ADMIRAL SIR HENRY-WILLIAM, of Rettenden-Hall, in Essex, commander of the most honourable order of the Bath, sole representative of the ancient family of Werden. At the early age of eight years, this gentleman joined his majesty's ship the Levant, of 28 guns, Hon. George Murray captain. In 1793 he was in the Boyne, of 98 guns, as lieutenant, during the expedition for the conquest of Martinique and other French islands in the West Indies, under Vice-Admiral Sir John Jarvis and General Sir Charles Grey; he was then promoted to the Avenger sloop of war as commander; and having been honourably mentioned in the admiral's dispatches on the capture of Martinique, he was soon after promoted to the rank of post-captain. In 1800, while commanding the Nereide of 36 guns, he surprised the Spanish port of Alguada, in the island of Porto Rico, and cut out all the vessels that were lying there, and sent them to Jamaica. During the short peace of 1802, while captain of the Cumberland on the Jamaica station, he was authorized to hoist the broad pendant as commodore, and in 1783, when the war was again declared, while cruising off St. Domingo with a squadron, he captured one frigate, two sloops of war, and several armed vessels. Having been five years in the West Indies, he returned to England in the Leviathan of 74 guns, with the care of a convoy consisting of more than one hundred sail, and happily brought them home without the loss of a single vessel, though the passage was long and difficult, for which he received the thanks of the masters from the ports of London, Bristol, and Liverpool, accompanied from the first with the present of an elegant sword. As soon as the Leviathan was repaired, in 1804, he joined Vice-admiral Lord Nelson off Toulon; and in the memorable battle of Trafalgar, his ship went into action the third from the Victory; and after the enemies' line was here broken, was more particularly distinguished, by seeking an opponent in the van, and by the capture of the Spanish ship St. Augustin, of 74 guns, (commanded by Don Cagugal), a vessel which had not yet been engaged. Some time after this his majesty, George III., was pleased to present him, together with the other captains, with a gold medal, suspended by a blue and white ribbon, with this inscription: "The combined fleets of France and Spain defeated 21st October, 1805," which will be left as an heirloom in his family. On the same occasion he received from the "Patriotic Fund" at Lloyds' a handsome sword, value one hundred guineas. In the promotion that took place, 12th August, 1812, Captain Bayntun was included as rear-admiral of the Blue. In 1815 he was knighted and presented with the star and cross as a knight commander of the most honourable military order of the Bath. From this time he went through the several grades till the 7th of January, 1837, when he was promoted to be admiral of the Blue. He m. 12th August, 1809, Sophia Mayhew, of Bath, niece of William Lutwyche, esq. of the county of Salop, by whom, who d. 16th September, 1830, he had issue one son and one daughter, viz.

son of John-Alexander Boode, esq. of Lucknam House, Wilts, and has issue at present two daughters,

1. Christina-Ellen-Lydia.
2. Clementina-Mary-Emma.

Lineage.

By a tradition which had always been kept up in this family, they claimed descent from a general called Werdan, who, under the Eastern Emperor Heraclius, (Gib. Rom. Emp.) A.D. 633, advanced with the command of a body of forces of 70,000 men to the relief of Damascus, at that time besieged by the Saracens. This General Werdan (the tradition proceeds) acquired a name and riches and honour in the court of Heraclius, and subsequently some of his family settled in Germany, where under the successors of Charlemagne their domain became a county, and was thence called Werdan, (it is now attached to Prussia), and themselves, Counts of the German empire; at some subsequent period a branch of the family emigrating to England became settled in Cheshire, with a considerable property in that and the adjoining county of Lancaster, of which they remained in quiet possession till the wars of CHARLES I. and his Parliament, when John Werdan, at that time the representative of the family, joined the royal forces together with his son; and in the destruction of the family papers of the Werdens at that period, we have lost the earliest authentic records of their ancestors.

The first to whom we now trace this ancient family, is

ROGER WERDEN, of Leyland, in the county of Lancaster, who m. a daughter of Farringdon, of Farringdon, in the same county, and by her had issue,

RICHARD WERDEN, of Leyland and Chester, who m. Lettice, daughter of — Blacklake, gent. of Leyland, and had by her a son,

THOMAS WERDEN, who m. Jennett, daughter of John Clayton, of Farringdon, and was father of

RICHARD WERDEN, esq. of Chester. He m. Alice, daughter and co-heir of John Banistre, esq. of Cheshire, (of the ancient family of Banistre, who came from Normandy with WILLIAM the Conqueror, and possessed the manor of Preston, in the county of Lancaster, of which Robert Banistre was lord temp. King RICHARD I.) Richard Werdan had issue by her,

- i. EDWARD, who m. Elizabeth, daughter of Justice Peter Palmer, of Ireland, and died without issue.

JOHN WERDEN, succeeded to the estates, and m. Katherine, daughter of Edward Dutton, since governor of Barbadoes, living in 1690, who died in Dover Street 22nd September, 1703, leaving two daughters. John Werdan d. 7th June, 1646; by Katherine his wife he had issue,

- i. KATHERINE, m. Cary Dillon, afterwards Earl of Roscommon, in Ireland, who died at Chester in 1689, and left issue,

Robert, Earl of Roscommon.

Anne, relict of Sir Thomas Nugent, in Ireland.

The only son,

ROBERT WERDEN, in the old papers it is stated, "did eminently distinguish himself in behalf of King CHARLES I. and the royal family, both with life and fortune, the latter of which he very much impaired thereby. He sometime served as a member of Parliament, and was colonel of a troop or regiment of horse. He was declared a traitor to the usurper and the realm of England, and a proclamation was issued out for apprehending him." In consequence of this proclamation, "and a price being set upon his head, together with those of Crew and Cotton, &c. &c. being all staunch royalists," he emigrated with his family and joined CHARLES II. and his brother James on the continent, with whom he continued till the Restoration, "having left," (as a descendant of his writes), "his estates and property to all the violence of the Parliamentary forces. I have myself seen the marks where the soldiers of Cromwell played 'nine pins' in the drawing of his mansion-house at Chester." On his return with the royal family at the Restoration, he obtained again possession of his estates. After which at different times "he held several posts of high honour and trust;" amongst others, he was major-general of the land forces to King JAMES II. in 1688, and treasurer to Her Majesty Queen MARY. (De Roy. Hist. Old and N. Test.) He m. first, Jane Backham; and, secondly, Margaret Towse, granddaughter to Sergeant Towse, of Essex, who died s. p. By his first wife he had three sons and one daughter,

He was sometime M.P. for Ryegate, in Surrey. In the year 1672 he was created a baronet by KING CHARLES. In "1684 he was made a commissioner of the customs, and upon the abdication of KING JAMES II., he managed alone that important post in the customs for some time to the general satisfaction, in which he continued most of KING WILLIAM'S reign. Upon QUEEN ANNE'S accession to the throne he was put into commission again, and she was pleased as a further mark of her esteem and favour for him, through a grateful sense of his own and his family's past services, to declare that he should continue in that commission, if he pleased, as long as she reigned, which he did." ARMSTRONG, OF GALLEN.

ARMSTRONG, ANDREW, esq. of Gallen, in the King's County, b. 19th October, 1786, m. 1st January, 1835, at South Stoneham, Frances-Fullerton, daughter of G. A. Fullerton, esq. of Westwood, in Hampshire, and of Ballintoy Castle, in the county of Antrim, (see page 298), and has a son, EDMUND-FREDERICK, b. 27th May, 1836.

This gentleman, who succeeded his father 12th December, 1827, was for some time a captain in the King's county regiment of militia, and has twice served the office of high sheriff, viz. in 1811 and 1836. He is a deputy lieutenant for the county, and was for upwards of ten years receiver-general of his Majesty's stamp duties in Ireland until the union of the English and Irish offices, when a large reduction was made in the latter department.

Lineage.

The family of Armstrong was in ancient times settled on the Scottish border, and springing from this parent stock several branches, at a very early era became located in the northern counties of England. One, established at Corby in Lincolnshire, had continued there for seven descents; and another, at Tynedale in Northumberland, for nine generations, at the period of the Visitation in 1623. A third scion, Thoroton, in his History of Nottinghamshire, mentions as fixed at Thorpe, in that county, so early as the eleventh year of RICHARD II. and gives the pedigree, in an interrupted succession, to the year 1672; and Leland, in the first volume of his Itinerary, speaks of a family of Armstrong settled in Yorkshire, whose representative he calls "a gentleman of many lands." Tradition affirms that the original surname was Fairbairn, and that it was changed to Armstrong on the following occasion: An ancient king of Scotland, having his horse killed under him in battle, was immediately remounted by Fairbairn, his armour bearer, on his own horse. For this timely assistance, the king amply rewarded him with lands on the borders, and to perpetuate the memory of so important a service, as well as the manner in which it was performed (for Fairbairn took the king by the thigh, and set him on the saddle), his royal master gave him the appellation of Armstrong, and assigned him for crest "an armed hand and arm, in the hand a leg and foot in armour, coupéd at the thigh, all ppr."

The Armstrongs of the border were at the head of a numerous and warlike clan, who, upon all differences that arose between the two crowns, made frequent inroads into the northern counties of England, encountering the enemy wherever they met with them, and were occasionally assisted by the other neighbouring clans of their alliance. The most famed leader of these bold and adventurous men was

JOHN ARMSTRONG, the laird of Giltknock

Hall, a strong castle situated on the west side of the river Eske, in the parish of Canaby, and county of Eskedale. This mansion is still known as the residence of this distinguished chieftain, and the spacious ruins that remain, even to the present day, evince how strong a position it must have been in former times. In this fortress, John Armstrong maintained for many years sumptuous state, and considerable forces, harassing, by continued incursions, the neighbouring counties of England, until, at length, delivered by treachery into the power of JAMES IV. he was executed, together with many of his retainers, by the king's orders, at Carlingrig, about the year 1530. He left a son Christopher, who succeeded as laird of Giltknock, and was living in 1530, and a younger brother,

CHRISTOPHER ARMSTRONG, laird of Mangerton (a castle standing on the south-west bank of the river Liddle, twenty miles north-east of Carlisle), who had the good fortune to escape the execution of Carlingrig. He married and had two sons, the younger of whom, William, left Scotland some years after the death of Queen ELIZABETH, and seated himself in the county of Fermanagh, where he became the founder of a numerous family, whose branches flourished in those parts. The elder son of the laird of Mangerton was father of

ANDREW ARMSTRONG, born in the castle of Mangerton in 1576, who, having disposed of his patrimony in Scotland to one of his kinsmen, migrated, in the commencement of the seventeenth century to the north of Ireland, and established himself near his uncle in the county of Fermanagh. At the breaking out of the rebellion in 1641, he embraced a military life, and served as an officer of horse in the army of CHARLES I. for several years with great reputation. JOHN, b. at Ballyard 31st March, 1674, a very distinguished military officer and engineer, who served with the highest reputation under the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, but especially at the siege of Bouchain, where his services were deemed so important by the duke, that in some years after, his grace caused a picture to be painted by Sir Godfrey Kneller, wherein Colonel Armstrong is represented with a plan of Bouchain in his hand. This painting is now at Marlborough House, St. James's, and several copies of it are preserved by different members of the family. In 1712, Colonel Armstrong replaced General Cadogan as Quarter Master General, and on the conclusion of the peace of Utrecht, in 1713, he was joined with Colonel Lascelles in commission for the demolition of the fortifications and harbour of Dunkirk. In 1717, he was made Colonel of the regiment of Foot previously commanded by Brigadier Thomas Staruvix; in 1719, he proceeded as Quarter Master General with the expedition sent against Vigo under the command of Lord Cobham, and in 1739 he obtained the commission of major general of his majesty's forces. At length, after having served the crown for more than half a century, this gallant and distinguished officer died at his house in the Tower, 15th April, 1742, and was buried with military honours in the chapel there. At the period of his decease, he was surveyor general and master general of his majesty's ordnance, chief engineer of England, lieutenant governor of the tower of London, colonel of the 18th regiment, quarter master general, and major general of his majesty's forces. When the death of General Armstrong was announced to GEORGE II., his majesty exclaimed, "England has indeed had a loss," and ordered a monument to be erected to his memory in the Tower. Mr. Armstrong, who succeeded his father in 1780, is a magistrate for the King's County, and was a deputy governor until the extinction of that establishment.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the family of Armstrong, deriving from a common progenitor with the Armstrongs of Gallen.

THOMAS ARMSTRONG, esq. (second son of Andrew Armstrong, esq., by Elizabeth, his second wife, daughter of M. Johnston, esq., and younger brother of Edmund Armstrong, ancestor of the Armstrongs of Gallen) was born in the county of Fermanagh, in 1639, and accompanying his brother Edmund, was with him and many other Royalists taken prisoner at the battle of Worcester, 3rd September, 1651, and conveyed to London. He subsequently returned to Ireland and settled at Banagher in the King's county, of which he was one of the Burgesses, and several times sovereign of the corporation. In his time a new stone bridge over the Shannon at Banagher was commenced and Mr. Armstrong had the principal share not only in obtaining the presentment for raising the money in the county, but also in conducting the progress of the work. It was finished at the reign of JAMES II., and Margaret, Mr. Armstrong's eldest daughter was the first female that passed over it.

During the troubles which ensued after JAMES's abdication of the throne, Mr. Armstrong, suffering much from the attacks of the native Irish, deemed it prudent to retire to some place of security. Accordingly with only seven followers, chiefly his own servants, all well armed, he set out with the intention of throwing himself into Mullingar, then strongly garrisoned for King WILLIAM, but was attacked near New Town, castle belonging to the family of Low, by a portion of Geoghegan's regiment, whereupon he retired with his little party into the court-yard of the castle, and there resolutely defended himself until he was relieved by a troop of horse from Mullingar. In the action, however, he received a ball in his thigh, and the wound, being unskillfully dressed, brought on a fever, of which he died at Kinnegad a few days after.

He m. Grissel, sister of Captain Charles Beatty, of the county of Longford, and had, by her, who d. in 1680, three sons and four daughters, viz.

- i. JOHN, who engaged early in a military life, and was a lieutenant in Lord Barrymore's regiment of foot in garrison at Gibraltar, then closely besieged by the Spaniards. It happened that, while walking with the Prince of Hesse (the governor) and several other officers that were off duty, a party that had been ordered to burn the enemy's fascines, appeared, but the officer, under whose command they were to act, not being ready, Mr. Armstrong volunteered to perform the arduous duty. His offer was readily accepted and marching directly to the ground set the fascines on fire. He received however a wound from a cannon ball in the head, of which he died in 1704, in the 37th year of his age.
- ii. ANDREW, heir to his father.
- iii. James, died at Ghent, in the 23rd year of his age.

Lineage.

The family of Bingham, of Saxon origin, was originally seated at Sutton Bingham, in the county of Somerset, and thence removed to Melcombe, in Dorsetshire.

SIR JOHN DE BINGHAM, knt. living in the reign of HENRY I. was direct ancestor of RALPH DE BINGHAM, who had two sons, RALPH, his heir, and Robert, a man of eminent piety and learning, consecrated in 1229. Bishop of Salisbury, the building of which cathedral, commenced by his predecessor, he carried on. He died at a very advanced age, 3rd November, 1246, and was buried in a to the Netherland, and as lieutenant to Colonel Henry Cavendish, behaved with great valour in the action of Rijmemam, near Mechlin, against John of Austria. In 1585, having already achieved by his good sword, a high martial reputation, Sir Richard was made governor of Connaught, and prominently distinguished himself, in conjunction with the Earl of Clanrickarde, in subduing Thomas O'Rourke and the Irish rebels. He continued for some years in the government of Connaught, but the Province having complained of his severity he was recalled to England, and committed to custody: but in 1598, he was sent back into Ireland, with the authority of Marshal of that kingdom, and General of Leinster, to reduce Tyrone, who had rebelled, but he died soon after his arrival, leaving an only daughter. His remains were brought over and interred in Westminster Abbey, where a tablet was placed, inscribed with these lines:

WALKER-HENEAGE, OF COMPTON BASSET.

HENEAGE-WALKER, GEORGE-HENEAGE, esq. of Compton Basset, in the county of Wilts, M.A. of Christchurch college, Oxford, b. 17th July, 1799; m. 7th August, 1824, Harriet-Sarah, eldest daughter of William Webber, esq. of Binfield Lodge, in the county of Berks, and has had issue,

i. Matilda-Harriet.

ii. Alice.

This gentleman, the eldest son and heir of the late Rev. George Wyld, of Speen, in the county of Berks, M.A., vicar of Cheveley, in the same county, (who d. 1st January, 1837), inherited, under the will of Mrs. Arabella Walker-

Heneage, late of Compton Bassett, widow of his maternal great-uncle, John Walker-Heneage, esq. dated 25th May, 1813, all her manors, capital and other messuages, lands and hereditaments, in the several counties of Wilts, Berks, Somerset, Middlesex, and Surrey; and, in compliance with a proviso annexed to such possession, was authorized, by a royal license dated 20th August, 1818, to take the surname and arms of the family of Walker-Heneage only. He is hereditary chief usher of the court of Exchequer, and chief proclinator of the court of Common Pleas, &c. &c. a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Wilts, and served the office of high-sheriff in the year 1829.

Lineage.

The genealogy of the ancient family of Heneage is deduced by authentic evidences from Sir Robert Heneage, who held considerable possessions in the county of Lincoln in the reign of HENRY III.

JOHN HENEAGE, of Hainton, in that county, the seventh in lineal descent from Sir Robert, d. 4th April, 1530; having had issue, by Katherine his wife, the daughter of Thomas Wimbush, esq. of Nocton, in the same county, four sons, viz.

- I. THOMAS (Sir), who succeeded to Hainton, and, by Katherine his wife, dau. of Sir John Skipwith, left an only daughter, his heir, Elizabeth, who m. William Lord Willoughby, of Parham.
- II. JOHN, whose descendants are in possession of Hainton. (See p. 103.)
- III. GEORGE, archdeacon of Lincoln, who d. 9th September, 1549.
- IV. ROBERT.

The youngest son,

ROBERT HENEAGE, esq. of Lincoln, one of the king's auditors, who d. 27th July, 1566, married, first, Lucy, daughter and co-heir of Ralph Buckton, esq. of Elmswell, in the county of York; and, secondly, Margaret, daughter of George Manners, Lord Roos, sister of Thomas, Earl of Rutland. By the former he had several sons, two of whom only left issue. Sir Thomas Heneage, the elder, of Copt Hall, in the county of Essex, one of the privy council and chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to Queen ELIZABETH, left an only daughter and heir, Elizabeth, created Viscountess Maidstone and Countess of Winchilsea. She married Sir Moyle Finch, bart., and is now represented by her descendant and heir male, George-William Finch-Hatton, Earl of Winchilsea and Nottingham.

MICHAEL HENEAGE, esq. the younger son of the above Robert Heneage, was keeper of the records in the Tower of London. He was born 27th September, 1540, and died 30th December, 1600, leaving issue by Grace his wife, daughter of Robert Honeywood, esq. of Charing, in Kent, four sons and three daughters. The eldest son,

THOMAS HENEAGE, esq. was of Battersea, in the county of Surrey, where he died 9th August, 1641, leaving issue by Bridget his wife, daughter of George Woodward, esq. of Upton, in the county of Bucks, and relict of Sir Thomas Liddell, knt. of Ravensworth Castle, in the county of Durham, a son, Sir Michael Heneage, knt. of Gray's Inn, who died in December, 1711, leaving by Phebe, daughter of Samuel Foote, esq. four daughters and one son,

CHARLES HENEAGE, esq. of London, who d. in 1738, leaving two daughters, Elizabeth and Cecil, his co-heirs; both dying unmarried, the latter in 1765, and the former in 1779, the inheritance of this branch of the Heneage family devolved to the issue of their aunt, Cecil, eldest daughter of Sir Michael Heneage, and wife of John Walker, esq. of the Inner Temple, and of Hadley, in the county of Middlesex.

The family of Walker is of great respectability, being derived from Anthony Walker, of St. Andrew's Wardrobe, in London, who died 11th May, 1590, possessed of lands held in capite, as appears by his will, as well as by the inquisitio post mortem taken 27th January following. He m. Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Dawbency, of Sharrington, in Norfolk; by whom he had several children, and, amongst others, Thomas Walker, esq. of Westminster, hereditary chief usher of the court of Exchequer, and marshal proclinator and barrier of the court of Common Pleas and to the justices in Eyre. He d. 12th October, 1613, leaving by Joan his wife, daughter of John Moore, of Ipswich, his son and successor to his offices,

CLEMENT WALKER, esq. of the Middle Temple, and of the Charterhouse, Hydon, in the county of Somerset, who had special livery of his father's lands on the 24th November, 1614. He married, first, Mary, eldest daughter of Sir William Button,* knt. and bart. of Alton and Tockenham, in

* The ancient and knightly family of Button is derived from Sir Walter de Button or Bitton, who flourished in the reign of HENRY III., and whose descendants gradually augmented their estates by the parish of Lyneham, in the county of Wilts, and sister of Sir William, Sir Robert, and Sir John Button, successively baronets, who all died without issue. By this lady he had a son,

JOHN WALKER, esq. who, as aforesaid, married CECIL HENEAGE, and d. 1st March, 1703, leaving, by that lady, two sons, the elder of whom,

HENEAGE WALKER, esq. of Hadley, chief usher of the Exchequer, dying without issue 15th May, 1731, was succeeded in his estates and offices by his only brother,

JOHN WALKER, esq. of Lyneham, who d. 27th April, 1758, leaving by Dyonisia his wife, eldest daughter of James Colebrooke, esq. and sister of Sir James and Sir George Colebrooke, baronets, successively of Gatton, in the county of Surrey, three sons and three daughters,

- i. JOHN, his heir.
- ii. James-Button, ensign 1st Regt. of Foot, slain at St. Cas, on the coast of France, in 1754.

He served with the 67th Regiment in the Peninsular, and with the 68th in North America.

Lineage.

This family is of very ancient descent, and has been clearly ascertained by documents from the Heralds' College to be derived from the lords of Insbruck, in Germany. "SIR HARLOVEN SAUNDERS," says the old family pedigree, "came into England in or about the year 1370, deriving his origin from Robert, Lord of Insbruck, who was the second brother of Rodolph, Count of Flanders, and subsequently EMPEROR." For a series of many generations, the descendants of Sir Harloven maintained a high rank in the land of their adoption, and during the reign of CHARLES II. (about which time the family first settled in Ireland) have held a distinguished position in that country. One of the early members of this ancient line, after its establishment in Ireland, attained great distinction in the profession of the law, viz.

MORLEY SAUNDERS, who was doctor of laws and prime serjeant to QUEEN ANNE. was his grandson, MORLEY-PENDRED SAUNDERS, esq. of Saunders' Grove, in the county of Wicklow, married Lady Martha Stratford, daughter of John Stratford, esq. M.P. for Baltinglass, who was created Earl of Aldborough in 1777, (see BURKE'S PEERAGE), and had, with several daughters, two sons, MORLEY, his heir, and John-Stratford, a lieutenant-general in the army. Lineage.

This family, a branch of the ancient and ennobled line of the same name in Scotland, is stated to have gone from Berwickshire to Ireland during the period of the civil wars in North Britain. From the imperfect state of the Scotch records, and the destruction of family papers, the particulars of the descent cannot be traced with accuracy, but we find a friendly intercourse and acknowledgment of consanguinity subsisting between the Irish branch and the parent stock. Many years after the period of the settlement of the former in the sister island, Lord Adam Gordon, a general in the army, fourth son of Alexander, second Duke of Gordon, during a visit to that country, resided with his cousin, John Gordon, of Florida, and at a subsequent epoch, in the year 1783, the intercourse was renewed upon the occasion of some members of the Gordon family visiting Scotland, when they were received with much kindness by Alexander, fourth Duke of Gordon, who fully recognized the relationship. The representative of the Irish branch, at the close of the 17th century,

ROBERT GORDON, esq. of Ballinteggart, in the county of Down, m. in 1689, a sister of Robert Ross, esq. of Rosstrevor, in the same county, ancestor of the late General Ross, who fell at the battle of Bladenburg, and had issue,

OWEN, OF GLANSEVERN.

OWEN, WILLIAM, esq. of Glansevern, in the county of Montgomery, m. in 1823, at Hampton, Middlesex, Anne-Warburton, only child of the late Thomas Sloughter, captain in General Burgoyne's regiment, the 16th or Queen's Light Dragoons, and relict of the Rev. Thomas Coupland, of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, and of the Priory, Chester.*

Mr. Owen, in the year 1816, succeeded to the family estates, on the demise of his elder brother, Sir Arthur Davies Owen, knt. ; since that time he has resided at Glansevern, an elegant mansion, built in the Ionic style by his predecessor.†

Lineage.

We shall not dive into the depths of antiquity, by tracing the descent of the family under discussion to any of those brave Britons who lined the coasts of Kent to oppose the landing of Julius Cæsar, but shall be content with going only a few centuries beyond the Norman conquest, and begin with RHODRI MOLWYNOG. This prince acquired his cognomen, Molwynog, from his "Welsh blood being up," or that he foamed with rage in the bloody field. He at length retreated from Cambrian Wessex to the north of the Severn. As many of the Britons as preferred liberty to the enduring of the yoke of foreigners, followed their chief, leaving most of the less spirited peasantry to be hewers of wood and drawers of water to the new lords of Gwlad yr hav (Summer country), where their posterity still continue, whizzing the Saxon Z instead of the British S. Ethelbald the Mercian came again in contact with the retreating Britons on the "Mountains of Carn," to the south of the river Usk, at Crug-Howel. Here was fought one of the severest battles recorded in the Cambrian annals, and both

* This lady is granddaughter of Thomas Sloughter, esq. high sheriff for the county of Chester in 1755, and Anne Warburton his wife, and great-granddaughter of Thomas Warburton, son of Peter, the second baronet. This Thomas Warburton predeceased his father; and his elder brother, George, third baronet, dying without leaving male issue, the baronetcy devolved to his son Peter, who became fourth baronet, and was great-uncle to Mrs. Owen.

Of this Sir George Warburton, the third bart. and his daughter there are two large portraits in the hall at Glansevern, by Herman Vander Myn (a), originals. Sir George of Arley, represented the county of Chester in several parliaments, temp. Q. ANNE and K. GEORGE I. He m. first, the Hon. Diana Allington, daughter of Lord Allington, granddaughter maternally of William Russell, first Duke of Bedford, and sister and co-heir of Giles, third Lord Allington (refer to BURKE'S Extinct Peerage). The other portrait represents Diana, daughter of Sir George Warburton, and wife of Sir Richard Grosvenor, of Eaton, bart. This Sir Richard acted as grand cup-bearer at the coronation of King GEORGE II. by presenting to his Majesty the first cup of wine after he had been crowned, and received the cup as his fee. Sir Richard d. in 1732. He was great-uncle to Robert, Earl Grosvenor, created Marquess of Westminster.

† Mr. Owen was educated at the free grammar school at Warrington, under his uncle, the Rev. Edward Owen, A.M. In the year 1782 he took the degree of A.B. at Trinity College, Cambridge, and was fifth wrangler. Amongst the members of his own college, who graduated at the same time, were Professor Porson, Professor Hailstone, Dr. Raine (afterwards head master of the Charter House), and Dr. Wingfield (afterwards head master of Westminster School), besides several other distinguished persons. Mr. Owen and the four gentlemen above-named, were afterwards chosen fellows of Trinity College. Mr. Owen then became a member of Lincoln's Inn, and was called to the sides laid claim to victory. The field of carnage is studded with cairns, under which the fallen warriors, Britons and Saxons huddled together, repose in peaceful silence. Rhodri had two royal palaces in North Wales, one at Caer Seiont (the ancient Segontium) on the straits of the Menai, the other at Castell y Penrhyn, near Bangor, now the residence of G. D. Pennant, esq. In the great hall at this castle, in the 15th century, according to the metrical evidence of a bard of that period, were suspended "the ponderous arms of Mervyn Vrych," the royal consort of Essyllt, granddaughter of this Rhodri. The curious antiquary of the nineteenth century "will perhaps seriously deplore that they are not now to be found there."

(a) Myn, Herman Vander, was b. at Amsterdam, 1684. The most capital performance of Vander Myn is said to be the Denial of St. Peter. For the portraits of the Duke and Duchess of Chandos he was paid five hundred guineas. (See PILKINGTON'S Dictionary of Painters, vol. ii. p. 91).

Rhodri, notwithstanding the innumerable darts and daggers that assailed him during a turbulent reign of thirty-five years, was blessed with a natural death, in the year 755, and consigned to his ultima domus at Carleion on the Usk. The third descending link in this chain from Rhodri Molwynog, was his great-grandson and name-sake, RHODRI MAWR, or the Great, in allusion, probably, to his being an Anakim in size, more than to the soundness of his policy; for he removed his seat of government from Segontium, a place of Snowdonian strength, to the more assailable shore of Anglesey, at Aberffraw; and adhering to the national curse of gavel-kind distribution, he partitioned Wales into three distinct royalities, or his three elder sons, Cadell, Anarawd, and Mervyn.

The Mercians invading Anglesey in the year 877, were opposed by Rhodri, and both himself and his brother Gwryad fell in the conflict. In the Welsh Chronicle, this battle is called "Gwaith Dyw Sul Môn," i. e. Mona Sunday battle, it having been fought, like that of Waterloo (magna componere parvis) upon that day. The next link descends from royalty to the fourth son of Rhodri, named TUDWAL GLOFF, or the lame, so called from the effect of a severe wound in the knee, which he received at the battle of Cymryd, a place within two miles of the town of Conway. In the third year after the death of Rhodri, the Mercians, encouraged by their former success, again invaded North Wales, but being met at the place last mentioned by Anarawd, the young reigning prince, his brother Tudwal, and their forces, the Angles suffered a signal defeat. Prince Anarawd ordered this decisive victory to be chronicled under the appellation of "Gwaith dial Rhodri," i. e. Revenge for the death of Rhodri. Tudwal, for his general good conduct and bravery in this battle, was rewarded by the diademed princes, his brothers, with an additional grant of lands in Uchelgoed Gwynedd, and the lordship of Ceredigion, or that western tract lying between the rivers Dovey and Teivy.

Tudwal espoused Helen, daughter of Aleth, who in genealogies is styled "brenin Dyved" (Demetia). The seventh in descent from Tudwal and Helen was egree of barrister at law by that society, and is now a bencher. After attending the Oxford and Chester circuits for several years, he confined his practice chiefly to the courts of Chancery and the Exchequer. He was a commissioner of bankrupts, until he was advanced to the rank of king's counsel. About the year 1821, he quitted the profession of the law, and retired into the country; and since that period he has acted as magistrate and deputy lieutenant, takes an active part in all public business, generally presiding as chairman of the quarter sessions of the county.

In the abolition of the Welsh judicature, Mr. Owen was instrumental (see his evidence before the committees of the House of Commons in the years 1817 and 1820. See also the debates in the House of Commons on this subject, in the year 1820, upon the motion of Mr. Campbell (now Earl of Arundel) for the second committee. Also Mr. Owen's testimony before the law commissioners in 1829, and the report of the same commissioners, who seem to have entirely adopted Mr. Owen's opinion. The prejudices of the county of Montgomery in favour of the Welsh Judicature were such, that the sheriff and grand jury, assembled at the great sessions, petitioned for its continuance. To counteract this, Mr. Owen caused a county meeting to be convened for the purpose of considering the subject: he there, in an able speech, developed and exposed the constitutional defects of the old system. He was heard with great attention, so that all present became persuaded of the propriety of abolition. The consequence was a petition from the County to both houses of parliament;—that to the Lords was ordered to be presented by Earl Powis, that to the Commons by the Right Hon. C. W. Wynne.

When the great question of parliamentary reform arose, the county of Montgomery was the first to petition in support of it. Mr. Owen proposed and headed the requisition for a county meeting, convened and carried the resolutions on which the petition was founded, and on that occasion he exposed the injustice of that decision of the House of Commons of 1727-8, by which the right of returning a member to parliament was given to the borough of Montgomery only, depriving the contributory parishes of Llanvyllin, Llanidloes, and Welshpool of their elective franchise, until the same was restored and extended by the late Reform Act.

Mr. Owen favoured the claims of the Catholics, when the same were under consideration, and has ever distinguished himself, on all occasions, as a liberal and temperate reformer.

diganshire. This chieftain's name seems to be a Demetianism of the Dyrnwal of North Wales, the latinized Dunwallo, and the modernized Devonald. His successor at Castle-Howel, was his son,

CADIVOR AB DYNIAWAL, one of the heroes of the age, in which every man capable of bearing arms was bound to be a soldier. The Norman barons, encouraged and aided by the most powerful of the Plantagenet kings of England, had possession of most of the castles in South Wales; and, among others, Roger, earl of Clare, held the castle of Cardigan by a strong garrison, to the great annoyance of the "lord Rees" of South Wales. This puissant prince, unable any longer to bear the incessant ravages of the invaders of his country, collected his forces in the year 1164, and captured and demolished as many of the Norman castles as lay in his route. Cadivor, the prince's relative, and commander-in-chief of his forces, took the castle of Cardigan by escalade, which so pleased the valorous son of Gruffydd, that he ordered the captor to use a new shield of arms as a memorial of such a notable exploit—viz. "Sable three scaling ladders, and between the two uppermost, a spear's head argent, its point imbrued: on a chief gules, a tower triple-turretted of the second. One of the chief heraldic antiquaries of the present age objects to the blazonry of Cadivor's coat, because it appears too complex for the period, when armorial bearings had scarcely a beginning. We own its complexity, and at the same time we cannot avoid seeing its appropriateness to the occasion: first, the field sable denoted the darkness of night when the escalade took place—the ladders and spear's head imbrued, exhibited the articles and weapons used—the castle in chief, the trophy won—and its field gules shewed the retaliating treatment the garrison met with, excepting the governor, Robert Fitz-Stephen, cousin-german, on his mother's side, to the prince Rees, but his father was a Norman, and Robert himself a Norman in heart towards the prince and the Welsh nation: therefore his cousin Rees kept him in "durance vile" for four years. About this time, Dermott, king of Leinster in Ireland, being expelled his throne by his neighbours the kings of Connaught and Meath, applied to Henry II., then in Normandy, for aid, who referred him to the Norman barons in South Wales. The prince Rees having intelligence of an intended expedition to Ireland, thought it a fair opportunity of getting rid of his prisoner and cousin, released him, to enter into alliance with the ejected Milesian, who was in contract at the same time with Richard Strongbow, earl of Stirgyl. Robert Fitz-Stephen being first ready, set sail with Dermott, taking with him 400 Normans and disloyal Welshmen, landed at Loch Garmon, took the city of Wexford, and so planted himself and his followers in Irish soil, that their posterity continue there to this day. Strongbow soon followed with 1200 in his train, and the Irish making but faint resistance, the whole of the island was soon reduced. So easy was this conquest achieved, that when Henry II. went there himself in 1171, he had nothing to do save to receive homage and appoint governors. To return—

Cadivor, by his wife Katharine, daughter of his prince and kinsman, the "lord Rees," had, among others, RHYDDERCH AB CADIVOR, lord of Castle-Howel, who espoused Janett, daughter of Sir Aron ab Rhys ab Bledri, lord of Kil Saint, and knight of the Sepulchre, who went with Richard Cœur de Lion to Palestine against the infidels. Sir Aron bore on his shield argent a cheveron between three bulls' heads caboshed sable, armed or. During the crusades, and after, Wales seems to have supplied its quota of knights to the order of the Grand Cross. Their names occur occasionally in MS. pedigrees, such as Sir Gruffydd ab Elidyr Goch (Rufus), Sir Harry Ddu (Niger), Sir Matthew Cerdog of Swansea, knight of Rhodes: Sir John Rudd, of the family of Rudds of Aberglanney, in the vale of Towy, who had been governor of Ystrad Meyrig castle; and in his return from the Holy Land with Richard I, was mortally wounded in Austria, when his king was taken prisoner by the Archduke Leopold in 1192.

One of the sons of Rhydderch ab Cadivor, was

RHYS AB RHYDDERCH, who wedded a daughter of Sir Elidyr Ddu (Niger), another knight of the order of St. John of Jerusalem; and was by her father to

RHYS VOEL, lord of Gilvach Wen, Cardiganshire. Gruffydd ab Rhys, his brother, had only daughters, coheirresses, of whom, Lucy, heiress of Castle-Howel, espoused Meurig Goch, lord of Cil-y-Cwm, and a descendant, maternally, from Tudwal Glouf. Rhys Voel, about 1290, by his wife . . . had a son,

HOWEL AB RHYS VOEL, and his son, in this line, was

HOWEL VYCHAN (Junior) who took to wife Gweryyl, daughter of Rhydderch ab Ieuan Llwyd, of Glyn Aeron. Two of their sons were Thomas ab Howel Vychan, of Pant Strimon, and DAVYDD AB HOWEL VYCHAN, of Corna. The custom of gavelkind, adopted in Wales had the baneful effect, in many instances, of reducing, one generation after another, extensive patrimonies into petty freeholds.

REES AB DAVYDD, son of Davydd ab Howel Vychan, married a daughter of Lewelyn ab Howel ab Gwion, and had a son, HOWEL AB REES, who had for wife Jane, daughter and co-heiress of Davydd Vwya ab Ieuan Vychan ab Ieuan ab Rees ab

 Llawdden, from Aleth, and was s. by his son,

LLEWELYN AB HOWEL, who, about 1470, espoused Angharad, heiress of Cevn Havod, in Montgomeryshire, daughter of Llewelyn ab Phylip of that place, and seventh in descent from Madog Danwr (Madocus Ignifer), so surnamed probably from his impetuous martial spirit:

"Madog bold, and Madog strong, Rushed through the hostile throng."

The Prince of Powis knew his value in that age of perpetual warfare, and accordingly stationed him as a guardian of his frontier on the border of South Wales, by granting him the parish of Llangurig, on the skirts of Plimlunon. Here he settled, and became the progenitor of many families in the hundred of Arwystli and its vicinity—at Cevn
 Havod, Dol Bachau, Clochvaen, Creignant, Aberhaves, Glan Dulas, Dol Vachwen, &c.
 The same prince, as an honorary reward for his faithful services, gave Madog the privilege of bearing a new shield of arms, instead of his paternal coat from Tudor Trevor, earl of Hereford, and the adopted founder of the tribe of the Marches of England and Wales, from whom he was descended in the eighth degree. These new arms are described in the sequel. Llewelyn ab Howel's son by the heiress of Cevn Havod, was in the year 1110.

 Iwryn, esq. of Llanidloes.

Henceforward, the descendants of this Owen assumed his christian name as their permanent patronymic, a practice then adopted in general throughout Wales, instead of the former custom of using ab— as ab B, ab C, ab D. Ab is a contraction of Wab, mac—son—filius, fitz, &c.: ab therefore is a legitimate term, derived from its root, but ap (too commonly used) is non-ruse. Owen ab Davydd above, by his wife, Margaret Gwynn, had

- ii. DAVID OWEN, A.M. in holy orders, fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, senior wrangler in that university in 1777. He d. unmarried in 1829, at Campobello, New Brunswick, North America. According to his own request, his remains were conveyed over the Atlantic, to be deposited in the family vault at Berriew.
- iii. WILLIAM OWEN, esq. K.C. the present proprietor.
 1. Mary, m. Thomas Jones, esq. of Garthmyl-isav.

Evans, of Rhyd y Carw (Stag-ford).

This family derived their descent from LLEWELYN AURDORCHOG (Leolinus Torquatus), Lord of Yale in the eleventh century, who married Eva, daughter of Bleddyn ab Cynvyn, Prince of Powis. (See Display of Heraldry, by Davies, 1716, p. 64.) Blome, in his Britannia, published in 1673, includes "Edward Evans, of Rhyd y Carw," among the resident gentry of Montgomeryshire. This Edward Evans, by a deed dated 5th April, 1652, settled an annuity upon Dorothy, his wife, in case she survived him. Providence ordered it otherwise; for on the 28th February, 1660, he took for his second wife, Frances, daughter of John Pryce, esq. of Park, in Llanwynnog, by whom he had issue,

- i. Jane, b. in 1664.
 - ii. Catherine, b. in 1663.
 - iii. Francis, b. in 1665; his mother surviving his birth only one week.
- The said Edward Evans, by Dorothy, his first wife, had

- i. EDWARD EVANS (the second), his heir, m. Martha —, and had issue,
 1. EDWARD EVANS (the third).
 2. Ursula Evans.
- Edward Evans (the second) d. in the lifetime of his father, and was buried in Treveglwys Church, 30th November, 1687.

- ii. Morgan Evans, settled upon an estate in Llangurig; and he and Judith, his wife, are parties to deeds bearing date 23rd February, 26 CHARLES II. (1675).
- iii. Richard Evans.

iv. Ursula Evans, devised certain lands to Ursula Evans, her niece, in 1670. Edward Evans (the first) survived his son ten years; for in the year 1697, he settled Rhyd y Carw estate on his grandson, EDWARD EVANS (the third), father of Sarah Evans, his heir, who married, in 1725, as already noticed, Charles Davies, esq. of Llivior, and surviving him, who d. in 1729, she m. secondly, John Pryce Clauze, esq.

Dabies, of Llivior.

THE DAVIESES OF LLIVIOR traced their pedigree from BROCHWEL YSGITHROG, Prince of Powis, the opponent of Ethelred, King of Northumberland, at the battles of Chester and Bangor, about the commencement of the seventh century. About the nineteenth in descent from Brochwel was MEILIR GRYG, of Tregynon, ancestor of all the Blayneys in Britain and Ireland. Llewelyn, son of Meilir Gryg, gavelled the main portions of his estates upon his two sons, Einion and Howel. To Einion, the youngest, he gave, according to custom, the paternal seat of Neuadd Gregynog and its appurtenances; and Howel he stationed at "the Vainor in Berriew." Howel was succeeded at "the Vainor" by his son, Phylip Goch (Rufus), about the year 1320; another son, Madog Llwyd, was settled at Bryn-Cae-Meisir.

PHYLIP GOCH OF VAINOR's son was Madog, father of Gwilym ab Madog, who espoused Marred, daughter of Gruffydd ab Meredydd ab Einion, of the line of Cadwgan of Nannau, and had, among other sons,

IEUAN AB GWILYM, who had for wife, Eva, daughter to Howel ab Adda, one of the penathiaid, or chiefs of Kerry: their son,

DAVYDD AB IEUAN, wedded Gweryll, daughter of Ieuan ab Madog ab Owen. Omitting the two following descents and their respective matches, we come to the great-grandson of Davydd ab Ieuan, who, on account of his stature, was called

DAVYDD HIR (ab Gwilym ab Ieuan ab Davydd), who espoused Gwenllian, daughter of John ab Ieuan ab Howel, of Kerry, and was s. by his son,

JOHN AB DAVYDD HIR, of Llivior, who m. Catherine, daughter of Rees Gwynn ab Gruffydd ab Howel ab Ieuan Blayney. This Ieuan was the first who assumed the surname. Blaenau is a pure Welsh word for points, extremities; and is applied to uplands; as Blaenau Gwent, the uplands of Woottonshire, &c. It is probable that Ieuan ab Gruffydd ab Llewelyn Vychan, of Tregynon, was put out to nurse at a house called Blaenau, wherever it lies, and thence named Ieuan of Blaenau, and since, corruptly, Blayney. The issue of John ab Davydd hir, by Catherine, his wife, above-mentioned, were

- i. EDWARD AB JOHN, his heir.
- ii. Morus ab John, m. Catherine, co-heir to Richard ab Owen ab Gutyn Penwyn.
- iii. Richard.
- iv. Thomas.
- v. Rees.
- i. Gwen, m. to David ab Gruffydd, of Manavon.

EDWARD AB JOHN, of Llivior, eldest son of John ab Davydd hir, led to the altar Elizabeth, daughter of Davyd ab Morus ab Owen Blayney, esq. of Aber Bechan. Owen was the eldest son of Ieuan Blayney, of Tregynon, having, according to custom, left his younger brother, Gruffydd, in possession of the paternal mansion. Edward ab John, by deed bearing date 20th January, 1598, settled part of his landed estate upon his son.

DAVID AB EDWARD, upon his marriage to Joyce vch David, sister to Ieuan ab David ab Howel, gent. of Trev-esgob, in Montgomeryshire.

JOHN AB DAVID, of Llivior, son and heir of David ab Edward, joined with his mother, he said Joyce vch David, in a deed of family settlement dated 15th December, 1637, and was alive in 1657.

DAVID, son of John ab David, of Llivior, assumed the modern surname of Davies, and in 1649 married Bridget, sole daughter and heir of Richard Edwards, of Llivior. He d. in 1707, having survived her husband seven years, and leaving issue by him three daughters, Anne, Joan, and Bridget, and three sons, viz.

- i. John Davies, d. unm. in 1729.
- ii. Charles Davies, of Llivior, b. in 1665, d. in 1729, having m. (as before related) Sarah Evans, and had issue, ANNE DAVIES, his heir, b. in 1728, and wedded, in 1745, OWEN OWEN, esq.
- iii. Arthur Davies, of Ty 'n y Coed, d. without issue in 1758.

Arms (recorded in the Heralds' College)—Quarterly; first, the paternal coat for OWEN, from CADIVOR AB DYNIAWAL, sa. three scaling-ladders, &c. already described. Second, for the heiress of Cevn Havod, from MADOG DANWR, erm. a lion rampant sa. in a bordure gu. a semée of mullets arg. Third, for the heiress Evans of Rhyd y Carw, from LLEWELYN AURDORCHOG, az. a lion rampant guardant or. Fourth, for the heiress Davies of Llivior, from BROCHWEL, sa. three nags' heads erased arg.

Crests—First, ppr. the wolf saliant langued of Tudwal Gloff, for OWEN. Second, a stag trippant ppr. horned and hoofed or, for EVANS OF RHYD Y CARW.

Mottoes—Torav cyn plygav;

Estates—The Glyngynwyd estate, in Cevn Havod, Llangurig, came into possession of the family by the marriage of Llywelyn ab Howel with ANGHARAD, the heiress thereof, about the year 1470. Rhyd y Carw was obtained with Sarah, the heiress of Edward Evans.

Rhyd y Carw and the Tyncoed estates have been in the possession of the present proprietor's maternal ancestors for several centuries, and became attached to the paternal estate of Glyngynwyd by the marriage of Owen Owen with Anne Davies.

The above estates are in the county of Montgomery.

Seat—Glan Severn, on the banks of the Severn, Montgomeryshire.

Col. Blair was formerly commanding officer of the Ayrshire regiment of fencible cavalry.

Lineage.

The Blairs of Blair, connected by inter-marriages with the first families in the West of Scotland, have maintained for upwards of six centuries a high position in the county of Ayr. They are chief of all the Blairs in the South and West of Scotland, but the Blairs of Balthyock, settled in the counties of Fife, Perth, and Angus, dispute the honour with them. JAMES VI. to whom the point was referred, determined, that "the oldest man, for the time being, of either family, should have the precedence." Both families appear to be equally ancient, but the belief that they spring from the same ancestry is extremely doubtful: their arms bearing no affinity.

WILLIAM DE BLAIR, mentioned in a contract between Ralph de Eglinton, and the town of Irvine, in 1205, is stated to have died temp. ALEXANDER II. leaving a son,

WILLIAM BLAIR, stiled "Willielmus de Blair, Dominus de eodem," in a charter of ALEXANDER III. dated about the year 1260, to the abbey, of Dunfermline. He had two sons, by the elder of whom,

SIR BRYCE BLAIR, of Blair, he was succeeded. This gallant knight, one of the heroic patriots associated with Wallace, who so long and gallantly defended the liberties of Scotland, was at length taken prisoner and executed at Ayr, in 1296: leaving no issue, he was s. by his brother,

DAVID BLAIR, of that Ilk, who was compelled to submit to EDWARD I. in 1296. In the critical remarks in the Ragman Roll, he is particularly mentioned as progenitor of the family. His son,

ROGER DE BLAIR, of that Ilk, adhered with fidelity to Robert Bruce, from whom he obtained a charter "Rogero de Blair, dilecto et fideli nostro" of four Chalders of victual yearly out of the lands of Bourtrees, in Ayrshire. He d. in the reign of DAVID II. and was s. by

HUGH DE BLAIR, of that Ilk, probably his son, to whom followed the next proprietor in succession,

JAMES BLAIR, of that Ilk, who got a grant of several tenements of land in the vicinity of Ayr, which had fallen into the king's hands by forfeiture, confirmed by charter, 3rd February, 1368. He had two sons,

JAMES, his heir.

John (Sir), kn't. ancestor of the Blairs, of Adamton, in Ayrshire, who flourished there for a long series of years, until CATHERINE, only daughter and heir of David Blair, of Adamton, m. in 1776, Sir William Maxwell, bart. of Moureith, and had issue. She sold Adanton to Robert Reid, esq. and d. in 1798.

The elder son,

JAMES BLAIR, of that Ilk, obtained a charter from ROBERT II. dated 8th May, 1375, confirming a charter granted to his father by DAVID II. of the lands of Corshogyll, in Dumfriesshire, and another, of the same year, of the lands of Hartwood. He died in the reign of JAMES I. leaving a son, called David, by Douglas, but his name was more probably, Hugh, as

SIR HUGH BLAIR, of that Ilk, appears as witness to several charters of the period in which he lived, the commencement of the 15th century. His son, or possibly his grandson,*

JOHN BLAIR, of that Ilk, was served heir to his grandfather, and obtained from JAMES III. a charter, "Johanni Blair, de eodem, nepoti et hæredi Jacobi, &c. terrarum baroniæ de Blair," 19th January, 1477. He left, with two daughters, Egedia, m. to James Kennedy, of the family of Cassilis, and Elizabeth, m. to Ninian Stewart, of Butc, a son and successor,

JOHN BLAIR, of that Ilk, who had a charter 12th August, 1540, of the five Merkland, of Dalquhone, in Ayrshire, and another, 12th March, 1544, of the nine Merkland, of Bogton, Holmhead, and two third parts of the Mill of Cathcart, in the shire of Renfrew, which lands continued with his descendants until 1679, when a portion was sold to Hamilton, of Aikenhead. John Blair, m. Lady Elizabeth, Montgomery, daughter of Hugh, first Earl of Eglinton, by Lady Helen Campbell, daughter of Colin, first Earl of Argyll, and had issue,

JOHN, his heir.

Margaret, m. to John Crawford, of Craufurdland, and hence derive the Craufurds of Craufurdland. (See vol. ii. p. 230.)

The Laird of Blair died towards the close of the reign of QUEEN MARY, deposed in 1567, and was s. by his son,

JOHN BLAIR, of that Ilk, who obtained, on the resignation of his father, a charter from him of the lands of Tunnybankhead and Blair Ardoch, in 1546. This seems to have been in consequence of his marriage, about that time, with a lady of the name of Cunninghame, by whom he had a son, JOHN, and it would appear, two daughters, as about this period Uchtrede Knox, of Ranfurly, m. a daughter of the Laird of Blair, and another

* If John Blair were grandson to Sir Hugh Blair, then Sir Hugh must have been succeeded by son James, and he, by his nephew, John Blair, who had the charter from King JAMES III. in which the expression, "Nepoti," must be intended for "nephew."

named Jean, became the wife of Alexander Cunninghame, commendator of Kilwinning, who together had a charter of the lands of Mountgreenan in 1582. He died in the early part of the reign of JAMES VI. and was succeeded by his son,

JOHN BLAIR, of that Ilk, who had four charters of lands, dated in 1573, 1575, 1580, and 1597. He espoused Grizel, daughter of Robert, third Lord Sempill, and had issue,

JOHN, who predeceased his father, leaving, by Isabel, his wife, daughter of Thomas, fifth Lord Boyd, three daughters, viz.

GRIZEL, m. to Sir John Maxwell, of Pollock.

ANNA, m. to the young Laird of Porterfield.

MARGARET, m. to John Crawford, of Kilbirny.

BRYCE, of whom presently.

ALEXANDER, who married Elizabeth, only daughter and heir of William Cochrane of that Ilk. Crawford, under the title "Dundonald," thus speaks of the marriage. "Her father wisely considering the proper way of supporting his family, and declining to marry her into a richer family than his own, was to settle his daughter in his own time, he made a prudent and discreet match for her with Alexander Blair, a younger son of an ancient and genteel family, in Ayrshire, whose ancestors had been seated in the county foresaid for many ages before; so that beside a noble alliance and a competent patrimony, he yielded to change his name to Cochrane, which was almost the only condition the old gentleman required. This Alexander, so taking upon him the surname of Cochrane, was a virtuous and a frugal man, and studied as much the good of the family as if he had been born the heir thereof." His grandson,

SIR WILLIAM COCHRANE, knt. of Cowdon, was created EARL of DUNDONALD in 1669. His lordship m. Eupheme, daughter of Sir William Scott, of Ardross, in Fifeshire, and had with a daughter, Grizel, m. to George, tenth Lord Ross, two sons, WILLIAM, ancestor of the first seven Earls of Dundonald.

JOHN, of Ochiltree, ancestor of the present EARL of DUNDONALD, (see BURKE'S Peerage.)

James, who had a charter in June, 1615, "Jacobo Blair, de Malsmuir fratri germano de Bricii Blair de eodem, et Annabellæ Stewart, ejus Sponsæ, terrarum de Nether-Newark, Kirk-buddo, &c. in Ayrshire.

Jean, living in 1591, unm.

Margaret, m. to Ker, of Kersland.

John Blair died in 1609, and was s. by his son,

BRYCE BLAIR, of that Ilk, who was returned, 10th April, 1610, heir on the whole lands and barony of Blair. He had long previously married, Annabell Wallace, and had two sons and five daughters, viz.

Janet, m. in 1636, to Ninian Stewart, of Ascog.

The laird died 4th February, 1639, and was s. by his son,

SIR BRYCE BLAIR, of that Ilk, who was knighted by CHARLES I. He married in 1618, Marian, daughter of Sir Walter Dundas of Dundas, by Anne, his second wife, daughter of Monteith, of Carse, and dying a few months after his father, was succeeded by his son,

JOHN BLAIR, of that Ilk, returned heir to his father and grandfather in 1645. He died soon after, without issue, and was s. by his uncle,

JOHN BLAIR, of that Ilk, who m. Lady Jean Cunninghame, daughter of William, eighth Earl of Glencairn, and dying in 1662, was s. by his son,

WILLIAM BLAIR, of Blair, who acted a prominent part in the troubled times in which he lived. Though so much esteemed by the court party as to be put in the commission in Ayrshire, for holding courts on the covenanters, he soon embraced the party which effected the Revolution, was a member of the convention of estates, 16th March, 1689, and one of the committee for settling the government. In that year he raised a troop of horse in support of King WILLIAM, and marched with it into Perthshire, but was surprised by Dundee, and carried prisoner to the Highlands, where he died very soon after. He m. Lady Margaret Hamilton, daughter of William, second Duke of Hamilton, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM, her heir.

The heiress of Blair died probably before the year 1715, and Mr. Scott, her widower, who had assumed the surname of BLAIR, wedded, secondly, Catherine, only daughter of Alexander Tait, of Edinburgh, merchant, and had by her five sons and six daughters, viz.

Lineage.

This family was anciently seated on an estate called Ryland's Hill, at Bearley, in the parish of Snitterfield,* in the county of Warwick. Of this estate the Rylands held possession for many centuries, and it finally passed into other hands in the year 1779, being then sold by Richard Ryland, esq. of London. The patrimony of the family appears to have been materially impaired by the active part which they took in the civil wars between CHARLES I. and his parliament.

The irretrievable loss of a pedigree which gave a genealogical detail during a period of nearly three hundred years, as well as of the registers of Bearley,† in which the name of the family was traced as far back as the year 1500, renders it difficult, with that precision and accuracy which are desirable, to notice the early descents in their proper connection. From documents, however, still extant, the long continued and uninterrupted possession of the property at Bearley is sufficiently evident. From these documents too, we become acquainted with several interesting facts, as, for example, that one of the Rylands married Susanna Perkes, of Bearley, who is known to have been of the Perkes, to one of whom, "Clement Perkes of the Hill," Shakspeare alludes in the "Second part of King Henry the Fourth," act v. scene 1.

The following inscription was placed on the tomb of one of the Bearley family, in

WILLIAM GROSVENOR. He m. first, Mary Catherock, by whom he had issue, Harriet.

Mr. Huyshe succeeded his father, 17th May, 1802.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the ancient family of Huyshe, of Doniford, in Somersetshire, whose name, originally spelt Hywis, was taken from their residence, Lod Hywis, in the same county.

RICHARD DE HYWIS, of Lod Hywis, living temp. King JOHN, had two sons, Richard de Hywis, and

JOHN DE HYWIS, of Lynch, in the parish of Laxborough, father of JOHN DE HYWISH, who had a grant of a house and a carucate of land, in Doniford, from John Fitzurse, 38 HENRY III. Contemporaneous with this John lived Bartholomew, of Lod Hewish, and an Andrew, of the same name, whose daughter m. Andrew de Cottele.

GEFFRY DE HYWIS, son of John de Hywish, was on the jury 2 EDWARD I. for the hundred of Willerton, in Somersetshire. He had a son.

JOHN DE HYWISH, of Lynch and Doniford, 19 EDWARD II. who had two sons and a dau. namely, GILBERT, his heir; William, living 3 and 5 EDWARD III. as appears by fines in the Chapter House, Westminster; and Joan, m. to Walter Perceval, second son of Sir Richard Perceval, knt. of Corneville. This lady was a widow in 1387. She conveyed her lands, in East Quantock, to her brother, GILBERT DE HYWISH, of Doniford and Lynch, 4 EDWARD III. by fine, dated 5 EDWARD III. Together with John Durborough and others, Gilbert was a witness to a grant made by John Mohun, Lord of Dunster, to that priory, 15 EDWARD III. He m. Alice, daughter of Sir John Durborough, knt. and had issue,

i. OLIVER, his heir.

ii. Alexander.

iii. John.

i. Agnes, m. to John de Tetton.

The eldest son,

OLIVER HYWISH, of Doniford and Lynch, 42 and 49 EDWARD III. m. the daughter and heir of Simon de la Roche, and in consequence, the arms of Roche. "Arg. on a bend sa. three roaches, of the first," was assumed by Oliver and his posterity, instead of the ancient bearing of the Hywis's, which had been "A chev. between three roundlets and a chev. on a chief three leaves." Contemporary with them was a William de Hywish, 3 and 5 EDWARD III. Oliver had two sons,

JOHN, his heir.

Richard, to whom his father gave Lynch. He was living 10 HENRY V. and had a son, Oliver, of Holnicault, in the parish of Selworthy, whose daughter and heir m. John Woode, of North Tawton, and had a daughter, (represented in some pedigrees as an heiress) who m. William Steynings. Other pedigrees, those of Woode, give her a brother, John, ancestor of the Woodes, of North Tawton.

The elder son,

JOHN HUYISH, of Doniford, 10 HENRY VI. left, by Catherine, his wife, a son,

OLIVER HEWISH,* of Doniford, 30 HENRY VI. who m. Johanna, daughter and co-heir of John Avenell, of Blackpoole, in the parish of South Moulton, Devon, and had, with two daughters, Elizabeth, wife of John Doddington, of Doddington; and Anne, m. to Alexander Vernie, son by the third wife of John Vernie, of Fairfield, in Somersetshire, a son and successor, OLIVER HEWISH, of Doniford, 10 HENRY VII. who m. a Cavendish, and had, with a daughter, m. to Chichester, of Hawle, in Devonshire, three sons, viz.

1. JOHN, his heir.

2. Humphrey, who m. Jacquet, daughter and co-heir of John Hawle, of High Bray, in the parish of South Molton, Devonshire, and had four sons,

1. HENRY.

2. John, of Okeford, Devon, whose will, dated 12th March, 31 ELIZABETH, 1588, was proved at Barnstaple in the May of the following year. He m. Wilmot, daughter of Roger Prescott, and relict of Gregory Radford, esq. of Okeford, but d. s. p.

3. Bartholomew, of Studley, Devon, whose will was dated 4th May, 1578, and proved at Barnstaple 9th June in the same year. He had no issue by Mary his wife, who was relict of Veysie.

4. John, d. unm.

The eldest son of Humphrey,

HENRY HEWISH, or HUYSH, purchased the estate and dwelling of Sand, in the parish of Sidbury, Devon, in 1560 and 1561. By inquisition taken at Tiverton, it appears that he died 21st January, 1566. He was buried at Sidbury. He m. Ellen, daughter of John Stavely, esq. of East Buckland, in Devon, by Joan, his wife, daughter and co-heir of John Lappfode, and had by her, who was buried at Sidbury, 27th May, 1592, three sons and five daughters,

1. THOMAS, of Axminster, living 9th August, 1593. Together with his brother Anthony, he sold, 26 ELIZABETH, the estates of Higher and Lower Sand to his cousin, James Huyshe, of London. Thomas d. s. p.

2. ANTHONY, also of Axminster, will dated 17th June, 1598, and proved Prerog. Court of Cant. 5th December. He m. Alice, daughter of Turner, and relict of Alexander Osborne. Administration of the effects of Alice Hewish, of Axminster, was granted

* The pedigree of Huysh, in the visitation of Somerset, and that in Mr. Palmer's MSS. in the Dowager Lady Ackland's possession, at Bath, state that Oliver Huysh married Johanna, daughter and heir of Richards. This appears to be an error, arising from a family of Richards, of Somersetshire and Devon, having borne the same arms as those of Avenell. It is probable that they adopted them in consequence of the marriage of their ancestor, Edward Richards, with Eleanora, one of the daughters and co-heirs of John Avenell, of Loxbeare, in Devon. Edward Richards died, as appears by inquisition, 10th October, 5 HENRY VIII.

The statement in the text is in accordance with the old family pedigree, found at Sand, which calls her co-heir of Avenell, with her sisters, wives of Weekes and Holcombe; and this is corroborated by the pedigrees of Weekes, or Wykes, and those of Holcombe; and by the following inquisitions, post mortem: Richard Wykes, of North Wykes, Devon, m. Elizabeth, daughter and co-heir of John Avenell, of Blackpoole. By inquisition taken after the death of his son, William Wykes, who died last day of March, 14 HENRY VIII. it appears that he held a third part of Blackpoole, under the manor of Warkley. Roger Holcombe, m. Margaret, another co-heir. By inquisition, taken after the death of Margaret Holcombe, who d. 7th April, 15 HENRY VII. it appears that she held a third of Blackpoole, of the Bouchiers, lords of the manor of Warkley. Her son Charles Holcombe, d. 2nd January, 19 HENRY VIII. and also among other lands held a third of Blackpoole. No positive proof has been found that Johanna, wife of Oliver Huysh, inherited a third of Blackpoole, as one of three co-heiresses; but Risdon, on South Moulton. (p. 307. ed. 1811.) says, "Blackpoole . . . is a tything of Moulton, where Pollard, Gambon, and Huish held lands; some are of opinion that a manor divided between co-heirs, each of them hath a manor." This shows that the manor of Blackpoole was divided into three shares, by the marriage of co-heiresses, and that one share continued in the name of Huish, after those of Wykes and Holcombe were lost.

in September, 1612, by the Archdeacon of Exeter's Court, but owing to the careless manner in which these records have been kept, the document is not to be found. The son and heir of Alice and Anthony,

HENRY, m. Marcella, eldest daughter and co-heir of William Symonds, of Exeter, and by her, who m. secondly, Richard Herbert, of Exeter; and thirdly, Thomas Duke, of Exeter, had an only son, Southcott, of Exeter, who d. unm. Administration to his effects was granted by the Prerog. Court of Cant. to his mother, Marcella Duke, 18th June, 1642.

3. William, Rector of Kilkhampton, in Cornwall, will dated 5th Jan. 1610, proved in Bishop of Exeter's Court, 4th May, 1611. He m. Joan, daughter of William Perrie, and relict of — Osborne, by whom he had two daughters, Elizabeth, m. to William Weston; and Hazar, m. to George Lippincott, of Wibbery, in Devon.

1. Ellen, m. to Richard Cooke, esq. and had Mary and Helen.

2. Joan, m. to William Stoford, of St. Mary Ottery, and had issue.

3. Elizabeth, m. first, to Peter Drayton, of Exeter; and secondly, to John Doughty, Incumbent of Alphington.

4. Grace, m. to Richard Norreys, of Lyme, and had issue.

5. Jane, m. to Richard Bevys, of Exeter, and from her descend the Bevys, of Clift House, Dartmouth, Barnstaple. Mr. Westcote, in his pedigrees of Devon families, (Harl. MSS. 2297), states, that she m. secondly, William Martin, Recorder of Exeter.

III. Thomas, who was, according to the family pedigree, found at Sand, the ancestor of the Huyshe, of Tetton, in the parish of Kingston, and of "thos other Huyshe about Taunton; and so of RICHARD HUYSHÉ, who lyeth buried in Taunton." There seems no reason for doubting the truth of this statement. Richard Huyshe's will proves his affinity to the Huyshe, of Doniford and Sand, and the rest of his pedigree is fully confirmed by substantial evidence. The above named

RICHARD HUYSHÉ was of New Inn in 1589. He died without issue, and bequeathed his property in the Blackfriars, London, and in Taunton, to trustees, for the maintenance of an Alms House in Taunton, for aged men, with preference to any poor among his kindred, and for exhibitions at the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, to young men of his name and kindred, or of his kindred only, and in default of these, to young men born in the counties of Somerset and Devon.

The full particulars of this charity are to be found in the fifth volume of the Charity Commissioners' Reports. The privileges thus attached to his kindred, make it an act of justice to record all that can be gathered respecting his connections. But no detailed pedigree of this branch of the family appears ever to have been formed, and those interested in the enquiry must be referred to the collections that are to be deposited in the Alms House, Taunton, by the Rev. Francis Huyshe, and to some MSS. recently added to the library of the College of Arms, where the result of an examination of wills and parish registers will be found. Richard Huyshe married Ebbot, daughter of William Lovel, esq. of Bishops Lydiard, in Somersetshire, and heir to her brother, John Lovel. She was relict of James Clarke, esq. of Norton Fitzwarren. Her will, in which she is described as of Norton Fitzwarren, was proved in the Archdeacon's Court, Taunton, in 1628, but is lost. Richard Huyshe, d. 23rd February, 1615, and was buried in St. Mary Magdalen, Taunton, on the 21st March following. A tablet to his memory, with the arms of Huyshe and Avenell quarterly, is fixed on the wall of the south aisle of the church. By inquiry, taken 14th July, 18 JAMES I. it appears that his next heirs were Johanna, wife of John Mountstevan.

Margaret, wife of Henry Webber.

Thomazine, wife of John Cox, being the daughters and co-heirs of John Huish, son and heir of Richard Huish, son and heir of Robert Huish, brother of his father, Thomas Huish.

This Thomas Huish, and Robert Huish, must have been sons of Thomas Huish, third son of Oliver Huish; and Thomas is probably the Thomas Huish buried in St. Mary Magdalen, Taunton, 12th March, 1556; and Robert is probably the Robert Huish, whose will, dated 28th November, 1558, was proved in the Archdeacon's Court, by his son, Richard Huish.

Oliver Hewish's eldest son,

JOHN HEWYSHE, gent. of Doniford, whose will, dated 24th July, 1551, was proved in the Prerog. Court of Cant. 8th February, 1552, m. Grace, daughter of Richard Walrond, esq. and had issue.

1. WILLIAM, of Doniford, who m. first, Ellen, daughter and co-heir of John Gaunt, esq. of Dorsetshire; and secondly, Johanna, daughter of John Sydenham, esq. By the former he had two sons and two daughters, namely, SILVESTER, John, Honora, and Dorothy: by the latter, one son, John, ancestor of HUYSH, OF WELLS.*

* According to Mr. Palmer's MSS. John Huyshe, son of William Huyshe, of Doniford, by his second wife, was father of the eminent divine, ALEXANDER HUYSH, born in the parish of St. Cuthbert's, at Wells, about the year 1594, for according to his own testimony (vide Greek Hymn in the Polyglott) he had attained his sixty-third year in 1658. He was a commoner of Magdalen Hall, Oxford, in 1609; B. A. 10th February, 1613; original scholar of Wadham College, 20th April, 1613; M. A. 17th December, 1616; B. D. 2nd December, 1627; presented to the rectory of Beckington, in Somersetshire, in 1627; and to that of Hornbloton, in the same county, by Thomas Milbourne, esq. in February, 1638. Of this living he was dispossessed in 1650, but restored in 1660, in which year (12th September) he was collated to the prebend of White Lackington, in Wells, of which he had had the gift before the rebellion. He died 15th April, 1668, and was buried in the chancel of Beckington, where a brief inscription was placed to his memory, recorded by Collinson in his History of Somersetshire. His will was proved 6th June, 1668, in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, by his relict, Deborah, who was his second wife: in the preface he shortly but earnestly expresses his thankfulness to God for his restoration to his living. He was a man distinguished for theological learning, accurate criticism, knowledge of languages, especially the oriental tongues, sound divinity, and excellence in preaching, and he was well known among the learned throughout Europe. The prominent part he took in the preparation and revision of Walton's Polyglott Bible, is gratefully acknowledged by Walton himself; and subsequent critics have mentioned with praise the accuracy and fidelity with which he executed the part of that great work committed to his care and superintendance, particularly his celebrated collation of the Alexandrian MS. of the Bible.

His sufferings during the rebellion are evidence of more than common attachment to the king, and of his exertions in his cause. He was driven from one place to another; imprisoned for a few days at Chadfield, in Wiltshire, where he narrowly escaped starvation, through the pious but accidental care of some charitable persons; and finally, in 1650, he was dispossessed of his living. By the Royalist Composition Papers (State Paper Office) it appears, that the value of his estate was £40, on which a fine of £13. 6s. 8d. was imposed. His writings are, "Musæ Rurales in adventu Car. 2^{di} 4to. Lond. 1660." "Lectures on the Lord's Prayer, in 3 Parts, Lond. 1626." The notes of John Flavel having come into his possession, he published them under the title of "Tractatus de Demonstratione methodicus et Polemicus. Oxon. 1619." He was twice married: by Margaret, his first wife, buried at Beckington, 4th October, 1647, he had two sons and a daughter, viz.

1. ALEXANDER, who by Dorothy, his wife, buried at Beckington, 8th August, 1666, had issue,
 1. Alexander, bapt. 21st August, 1673.
 2. Anthony, baptized 16th June, 1676.
 3. James, bapt. 31st August, and buried 15th March, 1681.
1. Sarah, bapt. 6th October, 1669, living in 1670.

11. James, bapt. 29th October, 1637, living 1667.

1. Margaret, wife of Thomas Milbourne, of London, printer.

By Deborah, his second wife, who was relict of — Bryant, and whose will was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 3rd June, 1671, he had issue three daughters,

1. Anne, baptized 29th February, 1643, living 1671.
11. Deborah, baptized 2nd May, 1645, died an infant.
111. Dorothy, co-executrix with Anne of her mother's will.

The occurrence of a daughter, Petronell, and of a son, Alexander, at the same time, in two distinct families of Huyshe, settled in the parish of St. Cuthbert's, seems so highly improbable, that little or no doubt can be entertained that the learned assistant of Walton was the Alexander mentioned in the following descent, as brother of James; and that Petronella Rouse, widow in Alexander's will, was the Petronell stated below to have married Thomas Lowe, in November, 1625.

WILLIAM HUYSH, esq. of Doniford, whose nuncupative will, dated 11th October, 1599, was proved in six days after. By inquisition taken at Bridgewater, 16th January, 2 JAMES I. it appears that he died 16th November, 42 ELIZABETH. He m. Elizabeth Morgan: and Thomas Morgan of St. George's, in Somersetshire, is the guardian of their son, a minor, viz.

JOHN HUYSHE, or HUISH, of Doniford, aged seven years at his father's decease. By inquisition, post mortem, taken at Sowton, 2nd April, 3 CHARLES I. it appears that he died 2nd Novem-

JOHN, aged more than six years at his father's death, baptized at St. Decuman's, May, 1621. His will is dated 27th November, 1648, and proved 4th May, 1649, but in it he makes no mention of either wife or issue: though from a monument in St. Decuman's church, which is much defaced, it appears probable that he had a wife, Dorothy, who was buried 27th April, 164-.

Edward, of Doniford, baptized at St. Decuman's, December, 1622, was buried at St. Cuthbert's Wells, where his monument, a flat stone in the south aisle, yet remains. He d. 16th August, and was interred 19th August, 1639. The arms on the stone are Huysh, impa-

There is now, 1837, at Wells, a poor family of Huish, which has resided in St. Cuthbert's parish, and descended from a Henry Huish, of Warminster and Hillhouse, who died in 1726. A widow Huish, of Hillhouse, was buried 26th September, 1610.

† This lady had licence to re-marry from the court of wards and liveries, 30th November, 5 CHARLES I. a liberty she does not appear to have availed herself of, for the administration of the effects of Joan Huish, was granted 15th April 1649, by the Prerog. Court, to her son, Edward Huish.

ere is certainly, prima facie, a strong objection the hypothesis of this James being brother of stander, Walton's assistant, from the proof that word was the father of James; whereas John, of William Huyshe, of Doniford, is stated to e been father of Alexander; on the authority Mr. Palmer's MSS. which probably were not ded on any trustworthy document. Mr. Pal- may have mistaken John for Edward; or he r have omitted a generation in his pedigree; so, if there were this John, the son of William, Doniford, he may have been the grandfather of nes, and of Walton's assistant.

EDWARD HUISH, of Wells, notary public, whose l. dated 4th March, 1623, was proved 14th e. 1624, appears, from that document, to have e twice married. The marriage ring of his first e leaves to his son James. His second wife, o survived him, was named Christian. He was ed at St. Cuthbert's, 25th March, 1624. He issue,

His will, dated 7th July, 1590, was proved in the Prerog. Court of Canterbury, 27th October, 1590. His monumental inscription is preserved in Stowe's London. By his first wife he had eleven children, and by the second eighteen. Of these, Rowland, William, James, and Thomas, are the only sons named in his will; and the others here recorded, are taken from the parish register of St. Pancras, Soper Lane. His first wife was Margaret, daughter and heir of Robert Bowser, or Bouchier, of London, and by her, who was buried in St. Pancras church, 12th May, 1568, he had issue,

By the royalist composition papers, it appears, that he took up arms against the parliament; laid them down in 1643, and compounded in 1646. In Thurlow's State Papers is an account of his being arrested at his father-in-law's house, Sand, on suspicion of plotting against the government, as Deborah, baptized 5th September, 1628; buried 21st August, 1661. In the British Museum there is a curious book written by her brother-in-law, General Allen, in which he gives an account of her most melancholy state of religious despondency for several years; and of her recovery to a true view of the Christian faith, according to his own tenets. The title of the book is, "The Captive taken from the Strong. Lond. Chapman, 12mo. 1668."

Lineage.

In this family there is a tradition that its ancestor, having joined in Monmouth's rebellion, fled after the battle of Sedgemoor, and to escape the persecution of Judge Jefferys, quitted altogether his native place, Taunton, and settled at Leicester. The arms of Huish and Avenell have been borne alternately by this family, and they possess a Bible of the date 1676, with the name of Elizabeth Huish, Taunton, Somersetshire, on the binding. These traditions, coupled with the coincidence of the rather uncommon Norman name of Mark recurring with that of Robert at that precise period, afford the strongest grounds for believing them to be of the same race.

MARK HUISH, of St. James's, Taunton, whose will was proved in 1651, had issue, Robert and Mark, the latter baptized 14th November, 1630. Robert was father of Mark, baptized 18th June, 1654, and Robert, baptized in 1659.

Future enquiries may decide whether either of these was the Robert Huish, of Leicester, who follows.

He appears from family records to have been, upon his intermarriage with the Carew family, a person of large possessions, but like many others at that memorable period, experienced the vicissitudes of fortune by embarking in the South Sea and other wild schemes, promoted by the government of the day. He was buried in the south cloisters of Westminster Abbey, in March, 1753, and his wife Dorothy in the same place some years previously. Of this marriage there was issue, a daughter, Ann, Frances.

General Robertson, who has been in active service for 32 years, is a companion of the Bath, and wears the cross of the Imperial Austrian order of Leopold. He s. his father in 1830.

Lineage.

The Robertsons of Strowan are unquestionably one of the oldest families in Scotland, being the sole remaining branch of that royal house which occupied the throne of that kingdom, during the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and from which they can distinctly trace their descent in the male line.* It has in general been held, that the Robertsons are a branch of the great house of the Macdonalds; but although there may be a remote connection between the two houses, it is now undoubted that the Robertsons are descended from the ancient Earls of Atholl, which house sprung from Duncan, first Earl of Scotland, eldest son of Malcolm the third surnamed Kenmore. The immediate ancestor of the Robertsons was,

CONAN, second son of Henry, last Earl of Atholl of this family. He received from his father, temp. Alexander II. the lands of Glenerochy, now Strowan, and was succeeded by his son,

EWEN FIZ CONAN, of Glenerochy. He m. Maria, one of the daughters and co-heiresses of Convald, lord of Tullibardyne in Strathern, by whom he obtained a large accession of territory. He had several sons, from whom are descended the families of Skene, of Skene, and others; and was succeeded by his eldest son,

ANGUS, who obtained from ROBERT I. a charter of several lands in Perthshire. He was succeeded by his son,

ANDREW, designed "De Atholia." His son,

DUNCAN de Atholia, obtained various charters to his different possessions, in all of which he is styled "Duncanus filius Andreoe de Atholia, and from him the clan takes its name of Clandonnochie," or children of Duncan. He was succeeded by his son,

ROBERT de ATHOLIA, who had by his first wife, one of the daughters and co-heiresses of Sir John Stirling, of Glenesk, a daughter Jean married to Alexander Menzies, of Fothergill. By his second wife he had four sons,

Patrick, ancestor of the Robertsons of Lude.

Gibbone.

The eldest son.

THOMAS had an only daughter Matilda. He obtained two charters from the Crown settling part of his property on his daughter, and entailing the rest, including Strowan, upon his heirs male. He was consequently succeeded by his brother,

DUNCAN, mentioned in the rotuli scotiae, under the name of Duncanus de Atholia, dominus de Ranagh. He was succeeded by his son,

ROBERT, one of the most noted chiefs of his day. He arrested the murderers of JAMES I. and for this good service received a crown charter, erecting his whole lands into a free barony, dated in 1451, and also an honourable augmentation to his arms. The circumstances are thus related by Skene in his "Highlanders of Scotland:" "Upon the murder of JAMES I., by the Earl of Atholl and his accomplice Graham, Robert was fortunate enough to arrest Graham, together with the Master of Atholl, after the commission of the bloody deed; but any advantage which might have been gained by this act was thrown away by the reckless chief, who desired nothing more than to have lands which remained to his family erected into a barony, which was granted to him along with the empty honour of being entitled to carry a man in chains upon his escutcheon, together with the motto of 'Virtutis gloria merces.' The historian of the abbots of Dunkeld, relates a curious anecdote connected with the death of this chief of the clan Donnachie. It seems that Robert had some dispute with Robert Forrester of Torwood, regarding the lands of Little Dunkeld, which the Laird of Strowan claimed, but which had been feued by the Bishop of Dunkeld to Torwood. Robert Reoch had consequently ravaged their lands, but, upon one occasion, on his way to Perth, he was met near Auchtergaven by Torwood, and a conflict immediately took place between the parties, in which Robert was mortally wounded in the head. But the hardy chief, heedless of the consequences, and having bound up his head with a white cloth, is said to have ridden in that state to Perth, and there obtained from the king the new grant of his lands of Strowan, as a reward for the capture of the Master of Atholl; and on his return to have expired in consequence of the wound he had received." He m. the Lady Margaret Stewart, by whom he had three sons,

ALEXANDER, his heir.

Robert of Dalcahon, ancestor of Sir ALEXANDER ROBERTSON, who assumed the surname of COLYEAR, and was created a BARONET, in 1677. Mr. De la Cherois-Crommelin is a deputy-lieutenant and magistrate for the counties of Down and Antrim, for the former he served as high sheriff in the year 1821, when he presented a congratulatory address from that county to GEORGE IV. on the occasion of his majesty's visit to Ireland, and for the latter in the year 1830.

Lineage.

The family of De la Cherois descends from the younger branch of an ancient and noble house in France, formerly resident at Cheroz or Cherois, a small town near Sens, in the province of Champagne, whence the name is derived. It had there, in the beginning of the seventeenth century, large possessions, and was allied to some of the first families in that country, among others, to the great one of Montmorency, in consequence of the marriage of Catherine de la Cherois with Jean Seigneur de Beaurnez, whose daughter, Marguerite, married Antoine de Montmorency.

The revocation of the Edict of Nantes, in the year 1685, compelled the De la Cherois', being protestants, to abandon country, kindred, and fortune, to preserve their freedom of conscience, and in the hurry and distress, unavoidably attendant upon so disastrous a flight, and consequent dispersion that ensued, many particulars relating to their family and history, together with other interesting documents, were inevitably destroyed.

In the year 1641,

CAPTAIN SAMUEL DE LA CHEROIS (ancestor of the branch of the family settled in Ireland) served in the war, undertaken by the Cardinal de Richelieu, against the House of Austria. He left three sons: NICHOLAS, appointed a lieutenant of Fusileers by LOUIS XIV. in 1675 and promoted to the rank of captain in 1677. DANIEL and Bourjonval, both appointed lieutenants in their brother's company in 1677. In the year 1685, these three brothers fled to Holland, where they were received with great kindness by the Statholder, into whose service they entered, obtaining commissions in the Dutch army of the same rank as those they had held in that of France. In 1689, WILLIAM, Prince of Orange, being called to the throne of Great Britain, formed two regiments of the French Hugonots, of which Nicholas de la Cherois was appointed major, Daniel captain,* and Bourjonval lieutenant, in the

* Daniel, the second brother, was appointed governor of Pondicherry, in the East Indies, by King WILLIAM, in 1693, and m. Mademoiselle Crommelin, by whom he had issue one daughter, Mary Angelica, who m. first, — Gmebar, esq. of Feversham; and secondly, the Hon. Thomas Montgomery, afterwards last Earl of Mount Alexander, who dying without issue, left his wife sole heiress of all his estates in the county of Down, which are now in the possession of Daniel de la Cherois, esq. of Donaghadee, and Nicholas de la Cherois-Crommelin, esq. to whom they have descended.

Bourjonval de la Cherois was killed at Donaghannon in an engagement with the rebels, 1703.

Two ladies, Judith and Louise de la Cherois, daughters of the family, afterwards joined them, having succeeded in making their escape from France in an almost miraculous manner, having been obliged to travel on horseback during the night, and conceal themselves in the woods during the day; their only remaining possessions being their jewels, which they had sewn in their clothes. Judith lived to the great age of 113 years; both died unmarried.

first, commanded by the Comte de Marton. (All these commissions, French, Dutch, and English, are still extant, and in the possession of the family.) They accompanied King WILLIAM into Ireland in 1690, and finally settled there.

The eldest, MAJOR DE LA CHEROIS, distinguished himself at the Battle of the Boyne, and afterwards performed a very gallant action, making fifteen hundred men lay down their arms with only a subaltern's guard, for which he was presented by the government with fifteen hundred crowns, and a lieutenant-colonelcy; his commission was made out, but not gazetted, when he was unfortunately carried off, by being sent poison, in mistake, instead of medicine. He m. Mary, daughter of Samuel Crommelin, by whom he left two children, SAMUEL and Madeline, m. to Daniel Crommelin, esq. of Lisburn.

Family of Crommelin.

The CROMMELINS, of French origin, and were possessed of considerable property at Armanecour, a village near St. Quentins, in Picardy, when the revocation of the Edict of Nantes compelled them also, being Protestants, to leave their native country.

SAMUEL CROMMELIN, from whom the Irish branch is descended, took refuge in Holland, where he died, leaving issue six children, LOUIS, Samuel, Alexander, William, Magdalene, and Mary. In the year 1698, the family was induced, by King WILLIAM III. of England; to come over to Ireland, where they finally settled at Lisburn, in the county of Antrim, bringing with them a number of tradesmen, and a capital of £20,000, with which they established the linen manufacture, which was adopted by the natives, and has flourished ever since. In consideration of Louis Crommelin having spent £10,000 on its establishment, King WILLIAM, who was much interested in its success, and during his life granted £5 for every loom, conferred on him a pension of £200 a year for the life of his son, who, however, died only three months after, when it was discontinued. Samuel's children were,

FOWELL, OF DEVONSHIRE.

FOWELL, JOHN-DIGBY, esq. b. at Black Hall, 29th January, 1796, s. his father 17th May, 1828, m. 12th August, 1819, Frances, only daughter of Samuel Cumming, esq. of Totnes, in Devon, and since his marriage has been resident on the continent.

Lineage.

The family of Fowell is of very great antiquity in the co. of Devon, and claims a Saxon origin. The name, originally De Voghill, has been at different eras written Foghill, Fowghull, Fowhul, Fowhil, Fouhel, Fowle, Ffowell, Vowell, and Fowell; and the arms, registered in the College of Arms, with the date 1306, are statcd, in the Devonshire roll, to have been visible in the windows of Totnes, Brixton, and other churches in that shire. Numerous pedigrees of the ancient line of Fowell appear in the Heraldic Visitations, from the earliest to the last; and on those documents, in addition to family records, the following details shewing an uninterrupted male descent for upwards of six centuries, are founded.

JOHN DE VOGHILL, son and heir of De Voghill, of Voghill, in the parish of Ugborough, in the south of Devon, m. the dau. and heir of — Coome, and is presumed to have thus acquired the adjoining estates of the two Wichcoomes. Their son and heir.

ROGER DE FOGHILL, of Foghill, was father of

JOHN (or according to some accounts WILLIAM) DE FOGHILL, of Foghill, who m. the daughter and heir of Trevaze, of Trevaze, in Cornwall, by whom he acquired the manor and estate of Trevaze, and had, with a son and heir, a daughter,

Mabella, m. to William Fortescue, of Winston or Wymestone, in the ad joining parish of Modbury; from which marriage descended Sir John Fortescue, lord chief justice of England in 1442, and lord chancellor in 1461, author of the celebrated treatise, "De Laudibus Legum Angliæ." His son and heir,

Martin Fortescue, of Filleigh, had two sons,

JOHN, ancestor of Earl Fortescue.

WILLIAM, progenitor of the Irish Viscounts Clermont.

RICHARD FOWHILL, of Fowhill-Coombe, the son and heir, m. Maria, daughter of William Vallronde, of Bradfield, in Devon, and was succeeded by his son,

WILLIAM FOWHILL, of Fowhill-Coombe, the m. the daughter and heir of — Halwell, & Halvell, of Devon, and had issue,

JOHN, his heir.

Sybilla, m. to William Le Rouse, of Edmerstone, in the parish of Modbury, son and heir, by Isabel, dau. of Henry Drew, of Modbury, of John Le Rouse, of Edmerstone, and had issue,

Roger Rouse, of Edmerstone, continuator of the family, whose grandson was Sir Anthony Rouse, knt. of Edmerstone, and of Halton, in Cornwall, "a man of great parts and virtues, who was twice high sheriff of Cornwall, in the 19th and 42nd of Queen Elizabeth, M.P. for East Looe, in the 27th of that reign, and for the shire of Cornwall in 1 King James I." By his first wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Southcote, esq. co-heir of her mother, Grace Barnhouse, this Sir Anthony Rouse had issue five sons and one dau. of whom were,

- i. Ambrose Rouse, esq. M.P. for Launceston in the first parliament of King James I. who d. v. p. leaving by his wife, Magdalen, dau. of John Osborne, esq. of Chick-sands, in the county of Bedford, a son and heir,

William Rouse, esq. of Halton, M.P. for Truro in the first parliament of Charles I. who by his wife, Mary, eldest dau. of Richard, Lord Robartes, of Truro, and sister to John, Earl of Radnor, had four sons and two daughters, of whom, second son, succeeded him. He was M.P. for Romney 1 Charles II. but dying s. p. was succeeded by his only surviving sister,

Elizabeth Rouse, who married her cousin, Francis Rouse, esq. of Wootton Suddridge, in the co. of Gloucester, by whom she was ancestor of the present

Thomas - Bates Rouse, esq. of Courtyrall, in the county of Glamorgan, representative of this ancient line. (See vol. i. p. 118.)

- ii. Robert Rouse, who, by Jane, daughter of Alexander Pym, esq. and niece of the patriot, had a son and heir, Anthony Rouse, esq. M.P. for Cornwall in 1653 and 1656, who m. Mary, daughter of William Bradshaw, esq. of the county of Lancaster, by whom he had a son and heir, the before named Francis Rouse, esq. of Wootton - Underidge, who m. his cousin, Elizabeth, heiress of the elder branch.

Francis, Lord Rouse, so created by the Protector Cromwell, provost of Eton College, M.P. for Truro 1 Charles I. for Tregony in the 3rd, again for Truro in the 15th and 16th of that reign, and after the death of the king, knight of the shire for Devon, and speaker of the short parliament. He enjoyed in an especial degree the favour of the Protector, who by letter under privy seal,* 26th October, 1657, granted to him a pension of £1000 a year, as "unto our right trusty and right well-beloved counsellor, Ffrancis Rouse, esq. for and in consideration of his continuall paines and attendance in and about our weighty affaires and counccills." At his decease, he was honoured with public obsequies. He bequeathed very largely to Eton College, and in this and other respects his will does not bear out the unfavourable account given of him by Clarendon, Wood, and other royalist historians.

The son and successor,

JOHN FOWHILL, of Fowhill-Cooome, m. Joane, daughter and co-heir of —, of Harburtonford and Ashpreignton, near Totness, and is supposed to have thus acquired the manor of Harburtonford, with the mansion and estate of Higher Washbourne, in that parish. By her he had,

THOMAS FOWELL, esq. of Coleman-street, London, who, as the first successful Russia merchant, acquired a large fortune, and enjoyed the friendship of the then Czar of Russia, by whom he was presented with plate which has descended to his heir Mr. Fowell Buxton. SIR EDMUND FOWELL, of Fowhelscombe, M.P. for Ashburton in the Long Parliament, and for Devonshire in 1556, created a BARONET in 1661. He m. Margaret, eldest daughter of Sir Anthony Paulett, knight, of Hinton St. George, in Somersetshire, captain of the guard to Queen ELIZABETH, sister of John, first Lord Paulett, of Hinton, ancestor of the present Earl Paulett: and dying in October 1674, was s. by his eldest son. (For other issue, see BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage.)

SIR JOHN FOWELL, second baronet, of Fowhelscombe, b. there in 1643, who, after the surrender of Dartmouth, gave in his adherence to the Parliament, as then did most of the leading gentry of Devon, and was made by General Fairfax, colonel of a regiment of foot, and governor of Totness. He died in November, 1692, aged twenty-seven, unmarried, and with him the Baronetcy expired. By his will, dated 4th November 1691, he bequeathed, in conformity with the dying injunction of his grandfather Sir Edmond, and the will of his father Sir John, Fowhelscombe Park, and the estates thereto annexed, to the heir male of the family, his kinsman, WILLIAM FOWELL, esq. of Black Hall: but owing to an informality in the instrument, the omission of one of the attesting signatures, occasioned, according to family tradition, by the person who drew up the will, and superintended its execution, the testator's intentions were defeated, and the will set aside in favour of the last baronet's sisters, Elizabeth, m. to GEORGE PARKER, esq. of Boringdon, and Margaret, m. to ARTHUR CHAMPERNOWNE, esq. of Dartington. See BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage, for account of Fowellscombe House and estates to the present day.

1. Edmond, of Plymouth, b. in 1596, member of the House of Commons, through the period of the civil war and commonwealth, and at the Restoration, viz. for Tavistock, in 1640, and 1658—9, and for Plymouth, in 1660. He was a frequent speaker as will be seen on reference to the journals, and to Burton's diary of the debates in the Protector's parliaments. He m. twice, first, Alice eldest daughter and co-heir (by Elizabeth, daughter of William Crymes, esq. of Buckland Monachore) of Sir Francis Glanville, knight, of Killworthy, in Devon, eldest son and heir, by his wife Alice, relict of Sir Francis Godolphin, knight, of Cornwall, of Sir John Glanville, knight, of Killworthy, justice of the Common Pleas, temp. Queen ELIZABETH: and secondly, Jane, daughter of Sir Anthony Barker, knight, of Sunning, in Berkshire, M.P. for that shire. By the latter, who d. 23d of May, 1640, and was buried in Plymouth Church, he had issue, Henry,* William, Edmond,† John, Anne, and Grace. The descendant, and heir of one of the sons, if not the fourth son himself, was

Edmond Fowell, esq. of Letchley, in, or near, the parish of Calstock: living there in the beginning of the reign of GEORGE I., the last male of this branch recorded in the Fowellscombe, and Blackhall pedigrees;

1. Sir Edward Harris, knight, of Cornworthy Priory, chief justice of Munster, of whom, and his father, PRINCE gives account in his Worthies. He was buried with his father, in Cornworthy Church, where is a handsome monument to their memories, and had issue,

† This Edmond Fowell was M.P. for Plymouth in 1672.

‡ There is every reason to believe, that male descendants of this branch have continued to the present day: John Fowell, of Stoke Damarell, near Plymouth, d. in 1763, Samuel Fowell, of that place, d. in 1766, another Samuel, d. there in 1799, and a Francis Fowell, in 1811. Early in the present year, 1837, died William Fowell, esq. of Stonehouse, near Plymouth, a retired commander in the Royal Navy, who though not of the Blackhall branch, understood himself to be distantly related to it. He left issue, of whom, a son Samuel Fowell, with a nephew of the same name, were at that time mid-shipsmen in the navy.

§ It is not certain that this Thomas Fowell ever not have settled in London, and been the ancestor of Thomas Fowell, the Russia merchant, whose daughter and heiress, Sarah, was mother of Mr. Fowell Buxton.

Owing, however, to ill-wording of the instrument, the share of the youngest, Sarah-Knowling Fowell, was successfully claimed at her death in minority, 4th October, 1828, contrary to the testator's intentions, by the heir at law, her brother, John Digby.

The Rev. John-Digby Fowell, or his children, was expected to inherit, as heirs at law, the bulk of the large property of his uncle, James Digby, esq. of Red-Hall, and therefore, with his brothers, received the additional name of Digby. This natural expectation the family was permitted to entertain up to the death of Mr. Digby, who had often expressed a disinclination to make a will, and the intention that his property should devolve to the right heirs. At his decease, however, it was found that by a will made in his last illness, he bequeathed the whole of his greatly accumulated property, land and money, away from his nephews and great-nephews, the Digby Fowells, to his younger sister, Henrietta, who had then visited him, widow of George Pouncefort, esq. of Wiltam-on-the-Hill, in the county of Lincoln, whose only surviving child, Philip-Duncombe-Pouncefort Duncombe, esq. of Brick Hill manor, in the county of Bucks, (see BURKE'S Commoners, vol. ii. p. 74.) succeeded to it on her death intestate, 19th November, 1822. This, the third disastrous loss of a large property, bequeathed to the family by will, or to which they were heirs at law, united to a style of life anticipating succession to, at least, half of the Digby property, to a falling off of income from estates after the war, and to heavy incumbrances, compelled the sale of Black-Hall, and Diptford Downe, in 1818. Out of the purchase-money, beside lesser provisions for the younger sons, ten thousand pounds was set aside for the eldest son, on whom had been settled, by her marriage settlement, his mother's half of the estates of her family. He d. in London in 1829, aged † Captain Sprye has devoted considerable time, through many years past, to making collections of genealogies and histories of the parliamentary families of his native county, Devon, during the period of the civil war and commonwealth. These collections are very extensive and complete, and including with local and parliamentary history of a period, hitherto unpublished, of a most interesting nature to the county. To them, this work is indebted for valuable information relative to several western families; and we sincerely hope that eventually his labours will be added in print to those of Pole, Prince, and Risdon.

Family of Reynell.*

Of this powerful Western family, once so renowned, several branches still exist,

* For an account of this family, see Prince's Worthies of Devon, Polwhele's, Pole's, and Lyson's Histories of Devonshire; also Risdon's Survey of Devon, &c. &c.

"It is manifest," we quote from Prince, "the Reynells were ever men of great credit, fidelity, and service to their kings, country, and state, as well in peace matters as wars. Some of them in times of peace were knights of the shire in parliament, and in times of war were retained to serve their kings with a band of their own men at arms; also they were employed as justiciaries, sitting with the judges of the kingdom in taking assizes and determining grievous enormities. It is most evident that the Reynells were men of great livelyhood, worth, and anciently descended, and chiefly were gentlemen in whom their kings did ever from time to time repose justly great fidelity and trust."

By the marriages of female members of this family, their descendants are to be found among many of the nobles of the present day. To instance no others, the following may be mentioned; the Earl of Devon, the Earl of Cavau, the Earl of Lisburne, the Earl of Mountmorris, &c. &c. besides Sir John Wrottesley, bart. Sir William Molesworth, bart. Sir John Honeywood, bart. and very many others of principal western families.

though their numerous and vast possessions in the counties of Cambridge, York, Warwick, Somerset, Devon, and Cornwall, have passed with heiresses into other families, or been otherwise alienated. The present representative of "this right ancient and eminent family," as it is called by Prince, in the male line, is Major-General Sir Thomas Reynell, K. C. B. sixth Irish baronet, of the creation of 1678. (See BURKE'S Petree and Baronetage.)

The first of the family on record is

SIR RICHARD REYNELL, of Pyttney, or Peteneya, county of Somerset, who flourished in the reigns of HENRY II. and RICHARD I. and who during the absence of King RICHARD in the Holy Land, had the custody of the castles of Exeter and Launceston delivered into his hands, 1191. These castles he stoutly defended against John, Earl of Moreton, the king's brother, who in the monarch's absence endeavoured to usurp the sovereign power. On the death of Richard, and the accession of John, the latter remembering the part which this Richard Reynell had taken against him, deprived him of his estates at Pyttney. This Sir Richard Reynell was sheriff of Devonshire from 1191 to 1194. He was succeeded by his son,

SIR RICHARD REYNELL, knt. of Pyttney, to whom King John restored the lands of which his father had been deprived, on condition that he should serve him with horse and armour for one year, as appears by his deed dated at Bined, 27th July, 1214, a copy of which is in the Harleian MSS. No. 1196. He left a son and successor,

WALTER REYNELL, of Pyttney, who lived in the reign of HENRY III. 1216 to 1272. He was seized of his father's estates, and was succeeded by his son,

WALTER REYNELL, esq. of Pyttney, who in addition to the lands of his inheritance, possessed large estates in Cambridgeshire, acquired by his marriage with Maud, dau. and heiress of Everard de Trumpington, of that county. By her he left two sons,

- i. JOHN, his successor.
- ii. Hugh (Sir), knt. master and governor of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, 1275. There is a small harbour in Malta still called by his name, (Renelle).

The son and heir,

JOHN REYNELL, esq. of Trumpington, Cambridgeshire, m. Maud, daughter of Giles de Fulbourne, of that county. He was possessed of estates in Warwickshire, and represented Cambridgeshire in parliament, 25 EDWARD III. He left issue,

WALTER REYNELL, of Trumpington and Badlingham, both in the county of Cambridge, 4 RICHARD II. 1381. He w. 1382, Joan, eldest daughter and eventually sole heir of John Bassingbourne, of Badlingham and Fencottes, in the county of Cambridge, by his wife, Joan, eldest daughter and co-heir of Alan le Fraunceis, to whom and his heirs for ever King HENRY III. had granted the right of free warren in his lordships and lands at Badlingham, (where this Walter Reynell sometimes dwelt,) and in all his lands in Yorkshire. A seal of this Walter, affixed to a deed in the reign of RICHARD II. anno 1381, is now in possession of the present Sir Thomas Reynell, bart. It bears the family arms, and the legend Sigillum Walteri Reynell. He died, leaving issue,

- i. WALTER, his successor.
- ii. Joan, m. — Sackville.
- iii. Maud, m. — Pyne, of Upton Pynes, in Devon, 4 King RICHARD II.

The son and successor,

SIR WALTER REYNELL, knt. of Trumplington and of Badlingham, in Cambridgeshire, and of East Ogwell, in Devonshire, married Margaret, eldest daughter and eventually sole heir of William Stighull, alias Style, by his first wife, Constance, or Elizabeth, eldest of the three daughters and co-heirs of Robert de Malston, in the county of Devon, by his wife, Mariell, daughter and heir of Thomas Thorber. Upon this marriage the Reynells removed altogether out of Cambridgeshire, and settled permanently in Devon, and first at East Ogwell, where the ruins of their old mansion house are to be seen near the church. Sir Walter Reynell died issue, three sons and two daughters.

- i. John, who died before his father. He represented the county of Devon in parliament, 6 HENRY IV. and was secretary of state to King HENRY VI. In the 17th year of that sovereign's reign, he was sent into France with the Archbishop of York, the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Buckingham, and others, to conclude a treaty of peace. He served with distinction at the memorable battle of Agincourt, and at the siege of Harfleur. He m. Agnes, daughter of — Chichester, esq. and d. s. p.
- ii. WALTER, succeeded his father.
- iii. Robert, d. unm.
- iv. Alicia, m. in 1396. — Trevillian.
- v. Eleanor, m. William Fouhel, esq. of Fouhels-Cooome, in the parish of Ugborough, in the county of Devon, M.P. for Totness, 33rd of King HENRY VI. 1455, great grandson and heir of JOHN DE FOGHILL thereof, and his wife, the daughter and heiress of TREVAZE, of TREVAZE, in the county of Cornwall, (see FOWHELL, of Black Hall and Diptford). He d. 23rd March, and she, 9th April, 1507, and were both buried in the Fowell aisle of Ugborough Church, as appears by inscription on brass in the Fowell vaults.

The second but eldest surviving son,

WALTER REYNELL, of East Ogwell, accompanied King HENRY V. in all his French wars, and served at Agincourt and Harfleur with his own men at arms, not hesitating to sacrifice his own possessions,* in order to sustain the honour of his country. For his valour and fidelity he was made governor of Calais and the Marches. He also represented the county of Devon in parliament, 33 HENRY VI. He married Joanna, daughter of William Walrond, esq. of Bradfield, in Devon, and by her had issue,

- i. ROBERT, m. Thomasine, daughter of — Hatch. He was Lord of Malston, and captain of the hundred of Colebridge, in Devonshire. He died before his father, leaving issue, JOHN, who succeeded his grandfather.
- ii. WALTER, who succeeded his nephew, John.
- iii. Jane, m. John Stretchley, esq. of Stretchley, in Devon.
- iv. Margaret, or Elizabeth, m. Richard Champernowne, esq. of Hunslaw, in Church-Horwood, in Devon.

He was succeeded at his death in 1475, by his grandson,

JOHN REYNELL, esq. of Malston and East Ogwell, who m. Jane, daughter, (by his wife, Blanch, daughter and co-heir of Hayes, of Devon,) of Sir Richard Fowell, of Fowellscombe, † and dying in 1478, s. p. m. was succeeded by his uncle,

WALTER REYNELL, esq. of Malston, and East Ogwell, m. first, Jane, daughter of Robert Whiting, esq. and secondly, Radigunda, daughter (by his wife Anne, daughter and heir of John Bonvile, esq. only brother of the Lord Bonvile, of Shute, in Devon,) of Philip Coplestone, esq. of Coplestone in that county. By his second marriage he had issue,

- i. JOHN, his successor.
- ii. THOMAS, to whom his father left Malston. For his posterity see REYNELL OF MALSTON.
- iii. Nicholas.
- iv. Edmond.
- v. Margaret, m. Richard Lake, esq. of of Brixton, in the county of Devon, yeoman of the guard.

- VI. Joan, m. first, to William Huckmore, esq. of Devon; and secondly, to — Pryce, esq. of Horwell, in Colbrook, in Devon.

The eldest son,

JOHN REYNELL, esq. of East Ogwel, born 1486, married Margaret, daughter of William Fortescue, esq. of Wood, in the county of Devon, by whom he had issue,

- I. Walter, who d. s. p.
- II. RICHARD, his successor.
- III. Roger.
- IV. John, of Newton Abbot. For him and his posterity, see REYNELL OF NEWTON ABBOT.
- V. Alice, m. William Soper, esq. of Woodland, in Devon.
- VI. Elizabeth, m. William Wyvill, esq. of Crediton, in Devon.

The eldest surviving son,

RICHARD REYNELL, esq. of East Ogwel, was a distinguished man, of whom, and his eminent sons, a pretty full account is given by Prince, in his "Worthies of Devon." He was b. in 1519. "To divers of his kings and queens," we quote from Prince, "he did special duties and services, being in commission of the peace near forty years, and high sheriff of the county of Devon in the late noble Queen Elizabeth's reign, An. 28. He was ever most virtuously affected, sound in religion, faithful and serviceable to his Princes, upright and zealous in justice, beating down vice, preferring the virtuous, and a keeper of great hospitality. His youth, in King Henry 8th's days, he spent at court, and in travel beyond the seas with honourable knights and gentlemen, first into France, Flanders, and Italy, thence they crossed the Adratic sea, and so into Hungary and Greece, where they served against the Turk at the siege of Buda. Also he served at Bulloin, when his King, Henry 8 was present. Also at Lauderdale, and was at the siege and burning of Treport, in France, &c. Also in the Western rebellion 6 Edward VI. he having charge of a troop of horsemen, did special good services, when in suppressing and confounding those traitors, he being sorely wounded and hurt, it pleased the king's majesty of his princely bounty to grant his warrant to the Earl of Bedford, then general of those wars, for the rewarding the said Richard Reynell with the demesnes of Weston Peverill, and house called Pennicross, in Devon, near Plymouth. This Richard left behind him 5 sons, whereof 4 are knights, all which sons even from their infancy he ever with godly care and great charge maintain'd in the schools of virtue and learning, viz. at the universities, inns of court, their prince's court, travels into Germany, France, and Italy, &c. All which sons being virtuously disposed, religious and well qualified, are at this day serviceable in some good degree or other to their king's majesty, and their country. Lastly it is generally noted and known, that the aforesaid 5 sons are a knot of as worthy and serviceable gentlemen as any in the Western parts of this kingdom of England." This Richard Reynell also represented the borough of Ashburton, in parliament. He added to his large possessions, by purchase from the Courtenays, the manor and parish of West Ogwel, which, like East Ogwel to which it is contiguous, was, in the reign of HENRY II. held by Hugh Pictavenensis, to whom succeeded Robert Peytevin. From his family it came to the Courtenays, Earls of Devon, who sold it as before stated. This Richard married Agnes, daughter of John Southcote, esq. of Indiho, in the parish of Bovey Tracey, in Devon, and dying when in the office of high sheriff, 29th July, 1585, was buried among his ancestors in East Ogwel Church.* He left issue,

- I. THOMAS (SIR), his successor.
- II. Josias, who inherited the lands of Pennicross, and Weston Peverill, and d. s. p.
- III. Richard† (SIR), of Ford House, near Newton-Abbot, in the parish of Woolborough. This gentleman was bred to the bar in the Middle Temple, and was autumn reader of that society, an. 12 JAMES I., 1614. He had an office in the Exchequer, and amassing great wealth, purchased the manor of Ford, and built thereon a mansion. "Unto this house," says Prince, "King CHARLES I., of gracious memory, came, attended on by the Duke of Buckingham, and other great lords, September, 15th 1625, and was pleased to take up his lodging there. The next day, his majesty conferred the honour of knighthood in the dining room of that house, on Richard Reynell, of West Ogwel, and on Thomas Reynell, his brother, who at that time, was his majesty's servant, and sewer in ordinary, to his person, in presence of their wives

* "On the south side of the church of East Ogwel, in a recess, was a seat of the Reynells," says Polwhele in his History of Devonshire, "where is erected a monument to their memory. There too is the dormitory of the Reynell family: in which there are upwards of thirty leaden coffins, containing the ashes of members of that family. "Close adjoining to the church are the ivy-grown ruins of the mansion house of the Reynells, inhabited by large flocks of pigeons." This house was abandoned after the building of West Ogwel House.

After that he went to Plymouth, and returned to Ford the 24th of that same month; and the Sunday following, his majesty went to Woolborough Church. Lineage.

This family springs originally from the hamlet of Chadwick, in the parish of Rochdale, situated at the southern extremity of Spotland, bounded eastward by the Spodden, and southward by the Roche. William de Chadwyke, the first of the name on record, was born about the year 1355, as he was living in 1413, being then styled senior, and having a son, William, of age. William de Chadwyke, son of William de Chadwyke, senior, had a grant from Adam de Bamford in 1413, of certain lands from Adam de Bamford. His descendant,

JOHN DE CHADWYK, son of Nicholas de Chadwyk, by Maud, his wife, daughter and heir of Thomas de Paris, died in the lifetime of his elder brother Robert, in, or about the year 1445, leaving three sons, namely,

HOPE, OF DEEPDENE.

HOPE, HENRY-THOMAS, esq. of Deepdene, in the county of Surrey, and of Penant Park, Cornwall, succeeded his father in 1831.

Mr. Hope is in the commission of the peace for Gloucestershire and Surrey, and C. P. for the city of Gloucester.

Lineage.

The surname of Hope is of great antiquity in North Britain, and so early as 1296, John de Hope swore fealty to EDWARD I. of England. The immediate ancestor of the existing families of Hope,

JOHN DE HOPE, is stated to have come from France in the retinue of Magdalene, queen of JAMES V. in 1537, and to have settled in Scotland. He m. Elizabeth Cumming, and had a son,

EDWARD HOPE, one of the most considerable inhabitants of Edinburgh, temp. Queen MARY, and a great promoter of the reformation. In 1560, he was chosen one of the commissioners for that metropolis to the parliament then convened. His son,

HENRY HOPE, a very eminent merchant, married a French lady, Jacqueline de Tott, and was father of THOMAS HOPE, who, being bred to the Scottish bar, first attained eminence in 1606, by his defence of the six ministers, (clergymen) tried for high treason, for denying that the king possessed authority in matters ecclesiastical; and acquired eventually the largest fortune ever accumulated by a member of the legal profession in Scotland. He was appointed king's advocate, and created a BARONET of Nova Scotia, 11th February, 1628. This eminent person married Elizabeth, daughter of John Bennet, by whom he had fourteen children; three of whom were upon the bench, when he pleaded, as lord advocate, before them; and to this circumstance, tradition assigns the privilege which that officer of the crown enjoys of pleading covered in the supreme court of judicature, it being deemed indecorous that a father should stand uncovered before his sons. Of his children, the four eldest sons were,

- i. JOHN (Sir), of Craighall, appointed a lord of session 27th July, 1632, and assumed the title of Lord Craighall. He d. in 1655, and left, with daughters, two sons,

THOMAS (Sir), bart. of Craighall, whose male line ceased with his grandson, Lieut.-general Sir JOHN-BRUCE HOPE, seventh Baronet of Craighall, in 1769.

ARCHIBALD (Sir), of Rankellor, appointed a lord of session in 1689. His son, THOMAS, i. as eighth Baronet of Craighall, upon the demise of his cousin in 1769, and from him descends the present BARONET of Craighall, undoubted chief of the name.

- ii. THOMAS (Sir), of whom presently.
- iii. ALEXANDER (Sir), of Granton, cupbearer to CHARLES I. d. s. p. 1681.
- iv. JAMES (Sir), of Hopetoun, appointed a lord of session in 1649, ancestor of the EARLS of HOPETOUN. (See BURKE'S Peerage.)

The second son,

SIR THOMAS HOPE, of Kerse, b. August, 1606, was constituted in 1640, colonel of the troop of horse raised by the College of Justice to attend General Leslie, as his life guard, when he marched into England at the head of the Scottish army. He was appointed a lord of session and lord justice-general 13th November, 1641; and was nominated one of the commissioners to treat with the parliament of England about the most effectual method of suppressing the Irish rebellion. He had two sons, namely,

- i. ALEXANDER (Sir), of Kerse, created a BARONET 30th May, 1672. His great-grandson, SIR ALEXANDER HOPE, fourth Baronet of Kerse, sold that noble inheritance to SIR LAWRENCE DUNDAS, bart.
- ii. HENRY.

The second son of Sir Thomas,*

HENRY HOPE, esq. founded the great and opulent branch of the Hopes, long settled as merchants at Amsterdam. He m. Anna Hope, and was father of ARCHIBALD HOPE, esq. who m. Anne Claus, and had nine sons and two daughters viz.

- i. Lewis, died young.
- ii. ADRIAN, of Amsterdam, died unm. in 1780.
- iii. THOMAS, of whom presently.
- iv. John, d. s. p.
- v. Isaac, who m. Maria Van Vliedend. and had a son, Oliver, who d. unm.
- vi. Henry, who died unmarried.

* Sir Robert Douglas deduces the Hopes of Amsterdam differently, and calls Henry Hope, their immediate ancestor, not son of Sir Thomas Hope, of Kerse, but younger brother of Sir Thomas Hope, the eminent lawyer, the first Baronet of Craighall.

vii. Zachary, who married Maria Van Vlierden, and had a son and daughter, Archibald and Lucy.

viii. Archibald, d. s. p.

ix. James, died unmarried.

ii. Elizabeth.

The third son,

THOMAS HOPE, esq. of Amsterdam, m. Margaret Marselis, and had four children, who all died young, excepting

JOHN HOPE, esq. of Amsterdam, who m. P. B. Van Der Hoeven, and had three sons,

THOMAS, his heir.

Adrian, died unm.

Henry-Philip.

The eldest son,

THOMAS HOPE, esq. of Deepdene, in Surrey, and of Duchess Street, London, the celebrated author of "Anastasius," acquired high reputation as a literary man himself, and as an encourager of literature and the fine arts. Early in life, Mr. Hope travelled over various parts of Europe, Asia, and Africa; and having, with a refined taste, acquired a facility of drawing, brought home a large collection of sketches, principally of architecture and sculpture. On his return, founding his judgment on what he had seen during his travels, he devoted much time and study in fitting up the interior of his mansion in Duchess Street, partly from the designs he had collected, and partly in imitation of the best specimens, both ancient and modern, in Italy. In 1805, he published the drawings he had made for his furniture in a folio volume, entitled, "Household Furniture and Decorations;" and that work led the way to a complete revolution in the upholstery and decoration of houses. "Mr. Hope," says a recent writer, "was, in all respects, a munificent patron of arts and of artists, and even of the humbler mechanic; or he has been known to traverse obscure alleys, lanes, and courts, to find out and employ men of skill and talent in their respective pursuits. Thorwaldsen, the Danish sculptor, was chiefly indebted to him for the early support and patronage he experienced. The genius of young Chantry was called into action, whilst the more mature talents of Flaxman were honourably employed. There are only a few of the numerous instances in which his liberality was nobly and advantageously exhibited."

In 1809, appeared Mr. Hope's "Costume of the Ancients;" three years after, his "Designs of Modern Costumes;" and subsequently, the celebrated romance of "Anastasius; or Memoirs of a Modern Greek," which evinced the general knowledge, the fancy, and powers of the author.

He m. 16th April, 1806, the Hon. Louisa Beresford, youngest child of the Right Rev. Lord Decies, Archbishop of Tuam, and by that lady, who wedded secondly, Viscount Beresford, had issue, HENRY, his heir.

Adrian-John, late capt. 4th dragoon guards, who m. Matilda, Countess Rapp, daughter of General Rapp, one of Napoleon's commanders.

Alexander-James-Beresford Hope.

Mr. Hope died 3rd February, 1831, and was s. by his eldest son, the present HENRY HOPE, esq. of Deepdene.

* * It is remarkable that this beautiful spot is described by the old topographer Aubrey, by the name of its future owner. His words are as follows: "A long hope, i. e. according to Virgil, deductus vallis, is contrived in the most pleasant and delightful solitude for house, gardens, orchards, boscages, &c. that I have seen in England; it deserves a poem, and was a subject worthy of Mr. Cowley's muse. The true name of this Hope is Dipden, quasi Deepdene." The natural beauties of Deepdene were first moulded into cultivation by the Hon. Charles Howard, who died possessed of the estate in 1714. His grandson, Charles Howard, esq. of Deepdene, became eventually Duke of Norfolk, and was father of the late duke, who sold the Deepdene in 1791, to Sir William Burrell, bart.; Sir William's son and successor, Sir Charles-Merrick Burrell, bart. sold the Deepdene to the late THOMAS HOPE, esq. who considerably enlarged the house, and subsequently added to the grounds the estate of Chart Park, which he purchased of Sir Charles Talbot, bart. Betchworth Castle has since been added to the property.

Lineage.

Of the great house of Digby, which for centuries past has stood preeminent in the rank of British aristocracy, pedigrees are to be found in numerous county and genealogical works. Of these, the fullest, perhaps, is that given by Pennant in his tour from Chester to London, and that writer states, that he derived the information on which he founded it, "from the extensive genealogy of the family, compiled at the cost of four-teen hundred pounds, by the famous Sir Kenelm Digby, in the year 1634, with the use of which, his neighbour, Watkin Williams, had favoured him." From that valuable compilation, as well as from extensive additional collections, the following details are derived.

The first recorded ancestor,

He lies buried at Tilton, under a tomb adorned with his effigies at full length, and a shield of his arms of the fleur de lys, with the sun and moon thereon, and the inscription, "Johan de Digebie gust icy, praez pour lui." He m. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Walter de Os vile, knt. and had a son and successor,

II. Catherine.

III. Caroline-Christian.

IV. Mary-Frances.

Mr. Skene, who is a magistrate and deputy lieutenant for Aberdeenshire, succeeded his brother, 30th September, 1791.

Lineage.

The family of Skene is one of great antiquity in Aberdeenshire, where it always maintained the rank of free barons, and takes its name from the barony and castle of Skene, situate in the Earldom of Mar, and county of Aberdeen, which barony remained in the possession of the Skenes, of Skene, from the middle of the thirteenth century, to the year 1827, when, by the death of the last Skene, of Skene, the estates passed to his nephew and heir, the Earl of Fife.

Tradition asserts that the Skenes, of Skene, are descended from the Robertsons of Strowan, and Sir George Mackenzie gives, as early as the beginning of the seventeenth century, the following account of their origin: "Some also derive their names as well as their arms from some considerable action, and thus a second son of Struan Robertson, for killing of a wolf in Stocket forest by a durk, in the king's presence, got the name of Skene, which signifies a durk in Irish, and three durk points in pale for his arms."

But as the barony of Skene undoubtedly formed a portion of the extensive possessions of Allan Durward, a noble, who played a distinguished part in the reign of ALEXANDER III. and who died in the year 1275, leaving three daughters and co-heiresses, and as JOHN DE SKENE, the undoubted ancestor of this family, appears in Ragman's roll, A. D. 1296, it is most probable that he was a younger son of the chief of the Robertsons, and acquired the barony of Skene by marriage with one of the daughters of Allan Durward.

His son, ROBERT SKENE, obtained from King ROBERT I. a crown charter of the barony of Skene, dated 1st June, 1317, and in his descendants the barony remained until the end of the fifteenth century, when we find it in the possession of

ALEXANDER SKENE, of Skene, who had two sons,

ALEXANDER, from whom the Skenes, of Skene, are descended.

JAMES, the progenitor of the family before us.

JAMES SKENE, second son of Alexander Skene, of Skene, purchased the estate of Wester Corse, in Aberdeenshire, and had by Janet, daughter of Lumsden, of Cushine, seven sons, JAMES, ancestor of the Skenes of Wester-Corse and Ramore, now extinct.

Robert, married Janet Skene, only daughter of Arthur Skene, of Auchtererne, by whom he had a son, Alexander Skene, of Auchtererne, whose only daughter, Margaret, died unmarried.

William, commissary of St. Andrew's, died unmarried.

Duncan, of Balnaburries, died unmarried.

Alexander, advocate, died without issue.

John, progenitor of the family of Skene, of Curriehill.

Gilbert, progenitor of the family of Skene, of Rubieslaw.

The sixth son,

JOHN SKENE, afterwards SIR JOHN SKENE, of Curriehill, lord clerk register, was a celebrated lawyer in the reign of JAMES VI. and well known for his connection with the regiam magestatem. He married Helen, daughter of Sir John Somerville, of Canne-than, related to the royal family, by whom he had three sons, JAMES (Sir), his heir.

John, progenitor of the family of Skene, of Halyards, now extinct.

Alexander, keeper of the register of Hornings, whose only son, John, died without issue.

The eldest son,

SIR JAMES SKENE, of Curriehill, president of the College of Justice, succeeded his father in 1617, and was by CHARLES I. created a BARONET of Nova Scotia, by a patent which is not dated, but which is recorded in the register of signatures 16th January, 1630. He married Janet, daughter of Sir John Johnston, of Hilton, by whom he had two sons, John, who succeeded him.

Thomas, died unm.

The elder,

SIR JOHN SKENE, second baronet of Curriehill, succeeded his father in 1633. He sold the estate of Curriehill in 1637, and having levied a regiment of men upon his own charges, he went to Germany, and died there without issue. The representation of this family then devolved upon the descendants of Gilbert Skene, younger brother of Sir John Skene, first of Curriehill. This

GILBERT SKENE was professor of medicine in King's College, Aberdeen, and afterwards physician to his majesty. He resigned this office in 1594, and retired to the small property of Pollerton, Aberdeenshire, where he died, leaving a large family by Agnes Lawson, his wife. He was succeeded by his eldest son,

DAVID SKENE, of Pollerton, who married first, a daughter of William Leask, of Leask, by whom he had,

DAVID, who had two sons, Alexander and George, who both died unmarried.

THOMAS, who carried on the line of this family.

He married secondly, — Seton, by whom he had,

George, who having realized a large fortune, became provost of Aberdeen, was knighted, and purchased the estate of Rubieslaw, Fintray, &c. He was succeeded by his grand-nephew.

The second son,

THOMAS SKENE, of Potterton, was father of

ROBERT SKENE, whose son,

GEORGE SKENE, inherited Rubieslaw from his grand-uncle. He married Catherine, daughter of David Aedie, of Newark, by whom he had a son and successor,

GEORGE SKENE, of Rubieslaw, who married Helen, daughter of Alexander Thomson, of Partlethen, and was succeeded by his only son.

GEORGE SKENE, of Rubieslaw, who married Jean, one of the daughters and co-heiresses of James Moir, of Stoneywood, by whom he had two sons and three daughters.

GEORGE, died unmarried, 30th September, 1791, while on his way to take possession of his paternal estate.

JAMES, now of Rubieslaw.

The family of Duppa is one of considerable antiquity. Of its distinguished members were BRYAN DUPPA, Bishop of Winchester; and Sir Thomas Duppa, knt. usher of the black rod, temp. CHARLES II. JAMES II. and WILLIAM and MARY. The former was successively head of All Souls college, Oxford, dean of Christchurch, and bishop of Chichester, Salisbury, and Winchester. He acted as tutor to the princes Charles and James, and accompanied the ill-fated king, CHARLES I. to Carisbrook Castle. When the bishop was upon his death bed, CHARLES II. visited him, and, kneeling, received his dying tutor's blessing. He was a very learned man, and much commended by the contemporary writers. He built and endowed two considerable almshouses, one at Richmond, and another at Pembridge, in Herefordshire. He d. in 1662, and was buried in Westminster Abbey, where there is a tomb to his memory. Sir Thomas Duppa, the usher of the black rod, introduced at court by his kinsman the bishop, had considerable property near Whitney, in Herefordshire. Many of his letters still exist, in which he speaks of Baldwin Duppa, of Hollingbourne, as his relative.

ROBERT DUPPA, esq. son of John Duppa, m. Blanche, daughter and heir of Euston Whitney, esq. of Whitney, in the county of Hereford, the descendant of an ancient equestrian family of consideration in that shire, members of which served as sheriffs in the reigns of HENRY V. His only son and successor,

Mr. St. Leger, who succeeded his father in 1792, is a magistrate for the county, and a deputy governor of the city of Cork. He is also captain of the Glenmire cavalry.

Lineage.

The ancient family of St. Leger was founded by

SIR ROBERT SENT LEGERE, one of the companions in arms of WILLIAM the Conqueror; and, according to tradition, the person who supported that Prince with his arm, when he quitted the ship to land in Sussex. This Sir Robert, having overcome a pagan Dane, who inhabited the manor of Ulcombe, in Kent, fixed his abode there; and in that place his posterity flourished for many generations. His lineal descendant,

SIR ARTHUR ST. LEGER, knight, went first into Ireland, in 1537, being appointed by HENRY VIII, one of the commissioners for letting the crown lands there, and returning into England, was constituted Lord Deputy of Ireland, 7th July, 1540. In 1543, he was recalled to inform the King of his administration of affairs; which gave his Majesty such satisfaction, that he created him a knight companion of the Garter, and sent him back Lord Deputy, in which high office he continued until 1556, serving three sovereigns, when being recalled, by Queen MARY, he retired to his estate in Kent, and d. there, 12th March, 1559. This eminent person has been characterized, "as a wise and wary gentleman, a valiant servitor in war, and a good justice in peace, properly learned, and having gravity interlaced with pleasantness." He m. Agnes, daughter of Hugh Warham, esq. of Warham, and was s. by his second, but eldest surviving son, volved upon the son of his sister, his nephew,

ST. LEGER ALDWORTH, esq. M. P. who assumed the surname of St. Leger, and was created VISCOUNT DONERAILE, in 1785. His lordship's grandson is the present

Lineage.

The name of Morris is of great antiquity, and is known, under various orthographies, to most European nations. Among others, occur Morys, Moris, Morris, Morriss, Morres, Morice, Morrice, Maurice, &c. and several others, compounded with Fitz, Clan, Mount, De, and various other initial expressions. Of the English families of the name, there are two classes, those of native, and those of foreign extraction. The latter came over with the CONQUEROR.. Of the former the most ancient are derived from Wales. One section of the foreign class had a Moorish origin, as indeed the name expresses, and crossed over from Africa to Europe, by way of Spain, whence were introduced into England, and other European countries, the Morrice dancers, who were accustomed to perform various feats of dancing. From the same source is derived the name of Mountmorency, corrupted from Monte de Morisco,* and thence abbreviated into Moris. With respect to the second section of foreign origin, their name is stated to be a corruption from Mars or Mavors, the god of war. This, as well as the preceding derivation, may appertain to many continental families, but it is in Wales that it most indubitably applies, and to the indigenous families, who bear the name of Morris, of which the following derivation is given by a very eminent genealogist: "Mars, Mavors, Wallier, 'Mawr-rwyce,' and Anglice, 'Warlike, powerful,' is a title applied to such of the ancient chieftains as were preeminent for valour, whose numerous descendants account for the present frequency of the name in Wales. To this, one of the mottoes borne by the family of Morris seems to have reference, "Marte et Mari faventibus."

* That is, "Of, or, from the Moorish Mountains."

The family of which we are about to treat, lineally descends from ELYSTAN GLODRYDD, a powerful British chieftain, born in 933, who derived his name ELYSTAN (or Athelstan) from the Saxon king Athelstan, who was his godfather. The appellation of Glodrydd, or the Illustrious, was bestowed upon him, indicative of his personal deeds, as well as of his rank and extensive possessions, which comprised nearly all the lands between the Severn and the Wye. He died in the early part of the eleventh century, leaving by Gwladys, daughter of Rhûn ap Idrinowain, Prince of Tegeugl, a son, CADWGAN AP ELYSTAN, Lord of Builth and Radnor, who m. Margaret, daughter of Brochwel Ysaddan, of Powys, and was progenitor of numerous families, still extant in the counties of Brecon, Radnor, and Montgomery, also of many others scattered throughout the principality. Eleventh in descent from Cadwgan was (for intervening descent see l. iii. p. 233)

CADWGAN AP PHILIP DORDDU, who m. Eva, daughter of Llewelyn Crygyr, and had two sons, one of whom, DAVID AP CADWGAN, is ancestor of the Morrises of Werrington (see Bethanger, (see vol. iii. p. 233).

Sixth in descent from Cadwgan ap Philip is HUGH MORRIS, who m. Joyce, daughter and heir (with her sister Maudlyn, wife of the Levyns,* esq. of Shrewsbury, and afterwards of Bridlington) of Thomas Gater, esq. of Shrewsbury, a gentleman possessed of great personalty, and had, with a daughter, Margaret, a son, ROGER MORRIS, father of

One of Roger's descendants still possesses a massive silver cup bearing the inscription, "Given me by my noble friend, Henry, Earl of Pembroke, anno Domini 1734." Roger Morris m. first, Mary, daughter of Sir Peter Jackson, knt. a Turkey merchant, of London, by Mary, his wife, daughter of Sir Peter Vandeput, knt. sheriff of London in 1684, by Margaret, his wife, daughter of Sir John Buckworth, knt. of West Sheen, Surrey (see BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage), and had issue,

1. AMHERST, (named after his god-father, Lord Amherst,) born in 1763, Captain R. N. gallantly distinguished in the celebrated engagement between the English frigate, La Nymphe, of 30 guns and 255 men, and the French, La Cleopatre, of 42 guns and 336 men; Lieutenant Morris was the first officer to board the enemy's ship, and to him the French captain surrendered his sword, which is still preserved among other family relics. Captain Amherst Morris died unm. at Baildon, in Yorkshire, 29th April, 1802, and a monument is there erected to his memory.

HENRY-GAGE, of whom presently. Johanna, m. in 1787, to Thomas-Cowper Hincks, esq. captain in the dragoon guards, and had issue. (See p. 366.) Maria, of York, died unm. 25th September, 1836.

Colonel Roger Morris, who had received his company, in the 17th regiment, then stationed at Westminster, at the early age of seventeen, served with distinction in the first American war, and was wounded in the celebrated battle of the Monongohela river, in which General Braddock was killed, with most of his officers. In that engagement George Washington, Robert Orme, and Roger Morris, esqs. were aides-du-camp to General Braddock, and of the conflict an original manuscript account, a very curious document, is in the possession of the present CAPTAIN HENRY-GAGE MORRIS, R. N.

On the breaking out of the second American war, Colonel Morris, as holding the king's commission, was bound by his duty to adhere to the side of the English government, and in consequence, the estates which he held in right of his wife, Mary Philipse,* were confiscated by the Americans. Her brother Frederick, and her surviving sister, adhered to the mother country; but the other brother, Philip Philipse, acting with the Americans, secured his share of the property, and his family still reside at Philipsburgh, in America.

* It was from Mary Philipse's character, that Cooper, the American novelist, formed the heroine of "the Spy," under the name of Frances, and an interesting account is given of her interview with Washington. Vide also the preface to the "Water Witch."

Frederick Philipse, as head of the family, received "compensation money" from the English government, (curtailed by Mr. Pitt.) £60,000 as his share. Colonel Beverley Robinson received in right of his wife, (who was the other surviving sister besides Mrs. Morris,) £17,000 for his life interest in the same, from the treasury, and Colonel Morris, in right of his wife, £17,000 for his life interest. Excuse was made for the smallness of the sum, on the score that the property was secured by the treaty of peace.

In America it was not then the custom to have marriage settlements; but Colonel Morris, previously to his alliance, had settled his property on his children, which the American government were not aware of, and in consequence of a clause in the treaty of peace, that settlements should hold good, it was said that the rights of the children would be secured to them. But the family could not then afford to go to law for them after all their losses, and, moreover, to pay for all the improvements made on the estates, during their expulsion, by the American farmers of them, one hundred and fifty in number; and, accordingly, in the year 1809, Captain Henry-Gage Morris, on behalf of himself and his two sisters, sold the reversionary right to Mr. Astor,† a German speculator and capitalist, for £20,000, though only one-third of the portion of each of the three; younger children, viz. Colonel Morris in right of his wife, Colonel Beverley Robinson, in right of his wife, and Frederick Philipse. Thus the whole property, even at that time, was worth 6 or £700,000, and in the present times, its value would be incalculable, nearly the whole of New York being built on a corner of it; their grant of land being twice as large as Yorkshire.

Colonel Morris d. 13th September, 1790, aged sixty-seven; Mary, his wife, 18th July, 1825, aged ninety-six, having been born 13th July, 1730. Her family appear to have been remarkable for longevity, her sister Susannah, who was m. to Colonel Beverley Robinson, attained also the great age of ninety-four. The remains of Colonel and Mrs. Morris are deposited in a vault in St. Saviourgate Church, York, where a monument

Family of Philipse.

The ancient Dutch family of PHILIPSE is resumed to have been originally of Bohemian extraction, and to have fled thence, on the persecutions that arose in the times of John Huss, and Jerome, of Prague. Cooper, the American novelist, in his preface to The Water Witch, speaks of them as the Bohemian Felipases, and the name had originally, it is probable, some meaning.

FREDERICK PHILIPSE, the founder of the present family, emigrated from Holland to America, and arrived at New York in 1658, at that time in the possession of the Dutch, called New Netherlands. He brought with him money, plate, and jewels, having left his estate in Friesland, with the consent of the stadholder and the states' general, to take possession of a large purchase of land he had made in the province of New York, Fredericksbouurg, called the upper, and Philipsburg, called the lower, patent, with many houses he had purchased in the city of New York, and land, which he laid out in streets, and afterwards built upon. He settled in the town, and also erected the house at Philipsburg. He m. Margaret Dacres, and had a daughter, Eva, m. to Jacobus, third and youngest son of the Right Hon. MACNEILL, OF BARRA.

MACNEILL, RODERICK, esq. of Barra, in the shire of Inverness, chief of the Macneills, m. in 1818, Isabella, daughter of Charles Brownlow, esq. of Brownlow-derry, in the county of Armagh, and has an only child, CAROLINE-ELIZABETH-FLORENCE.

Colonel Macneill, who is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for Invernesshire, s. his father in 1822.

Lineage.

The Macneills are a very ancient clan in the Western Isles of Scotland, and formed one of those who in ancient times followed the banner of the Lords of the Isles. Their chiefs, the Macneills of Barra, always ranked among the "Principes Insularum" who formed the council of the island monarch, and possessed the privilege of declaring his successor. Barra, with the neighbouring islands which constituted the dominion of this chief, has been in the family for upwards of four hundred years, although tradition assigns a much older date as the period of their occupancy.

The first of the Macneills of Barra who can be traced on record is

NIGELLUS OGE, who obtained from ROBERT BRUCE a charter of some lands in Kintyre. He had a son,

MURCHARD MACNEIL, who was succeeded by his son,

RODERICK MACNEIL, who witnesses a charter by Donald, Lord of the Isles, to Hector Mac Gilleon, of Dowart, in 1409, in which he is styled "vir Nobilis." He married a daughter of Ferquhard Mac Gilleon, by whom he had several sons, the eldest of whom was GILLEOWNAN MACNEIL, who had a charter in the reign of JAMES I. from Alexander, Lord of the Isles, to Gilleownan Roderick Murchard Macneil, of the island of Barra and lands of Boisdale in the island of Uist. He was succeeded by his grandson.

GILLEOWNAN, who obtained from JAMES IV. a crown charter, confirming the grant made by the Lord of the Isles to his grandfather, dated 12th August, 1495. He was succeeded by his son, of the same name.

GILLEOWNAN MACNEIL, of Barra, who took an active part in the various rebellions made in favour of the lords of the Isles during the reign of JAMES V. and regency of Mary of Guise. He had two sons,

i. RODERICK, or RORIE OGE, his heir.

ii. Gilleownan.

The elder,

RODERICK MACNEIL, of Barra, a man of great resolution, was killed at the battle of Glenlivet, by a shot from a field piece, on 3rd October, 1594. He left three sons,

ii. John.

iii. Murdo.

The eldest,

RODERICK MACNEIL, of Barra, was twice married. By his first wife, a daughter of Maclean of Dowart, he had two sons, of whom the elder predeceased his father, and the second, Neill Og, became heir. By his second wife, a sister of the captain of Clanranald, he had a son, Neill Weyslachter.

who obtained from his brother the lands of Skhwal, &c. in Barra.

The elder surviving son,

NEIL MACNEIL, of Barra, had three sons,

iii. Neil.

The eldest,

JOHN MACNEIL, of Barra, married Catharine, daughter of the Captain of Clanranald, by whom he had two sons,

i. RODERICK, his heir.

ii. John, who settled in Kintyre.

The elder,

RODERICK MACNEIL, of Barra, obtained a crown charter of the estate of Barra 10th August, 1688, and married Isabella, eldest daughter of Sir Norman Macleod, of Bernera, by whom he had two sons,

i. RODERICK, his heir.

1837, assumed the surname and arms of Ware, as being the representative of the oldest branch of the family of Sir James Ware, the historian of Ireland.

Dr. Hibbert-Ware is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, and has held the office of Vice-president of the Antiquarian Society of Scotland; he is also the author of various works connected with physiological, antiquarian, and geological researches.

Lineage.

The family of Ware, according to Walter Harris, who had access to Sir James Ware's private records, (see Harris's Ware, vol. ii. p. 145), claims a descent from Roger de Ware, lord of Isefield, and a baron of Parliament in the reign of EDWARD I. The founder of this house was Jordan de la War, of Wick, in the county of Gloucester, whose descendants enjoyed extensive grants of land in the southern, midland, and western counties of England, for having signalised themselves in various wars, particularly in the fields of Cressy and Poitiers; while the last baron was "Magister Thomas la Warre," living in the reign of HENRY V., priest and rector of Manchester, and the munificent founder of the collegiate church of that town.

CHRISTOPHER WARE, descended from Roger de Ware, lord of Isefield, was in the beginning of the reign of Queen Elizabeth settled in Yorkshire. "He was an early convert," says Harris, "to the Protestant religion, having been brought over from Catholicism by the zeal and labours of John Fox, the martyrologist, then lately returned from Germany, whither he had fled from the persecutions and cruelties of the government of Queen Mary, as great numbers of the Protestant profession had done."

JAMES WARE, the youngest of the two sons of Christopher Ware, was very early sent to push his fortunes in the court of Queen Elizabeth. In the year 1588 he accompanied Sir William Fitz-William, lord deputy of Ireland, in the capacity of secretary, which was the first appearance of this family in the sister-kingdom. Owing to his great attention to the public affairs of Ireland, he was advanced, about six years after his arrival, to the office of clerk of the Common Pleas in the Exchequer, and shortly afterwards obtained the appointment of auditor-general, with a reversionary patent of the office in favour of his son. In the reign of JAMES I. he was knighted, and in 1613 was returned member of Parliament for the borough of Mallow, in the county of Cork. He appears to have acquired considerable property while thus employed in Ireland, as his will mentions estates in the county of Longford, at Cloughred in Tipperary, at Jamestown, Abbey of Derge, Macetown in the county Meath, &c. &c.

Sir James Ware m. Mary, daughter of Ambrose Bryden, esq. of Saint Edmundsbury, Suffolk. (Walter Harris says she was the sister of Sir Ambrose Briden, of Maidstone, in Kent.) She was interred in the church of St. Werberg. Dublin, 5th December, 1632. The issue from this marriage were

- i. JAMES, (the historian), knighted in the lifetime of his father. He was the only one of the sons who left behind him male issue, of whom more immediately.

- ii. Anne, m. to Emanuel Downing, esq. of Dublin, and d. 23rd October, 1641.
- iii. Russel, m. to Humphrey Reynolds, esq. to whose son James, the youth's uncle, the historian, left a legacy, and any one printed book in his library which his nephew might select.
- iv. Martha, m. to Sir William Piers, bart. of Tristernagh.
- v. Cecilia, m. to Sir Dudley Loftus, knt. of Killyan and Clonard, and had issue, Thomas, Elizabeth, and Eleanor. (See vol. i. p. 211.)

Sir James Ware died suddenly, 14th May, 1632, in walking from Fishamble Street to his house in Castle Street, and was succeeded by his son,

SIR JAMES WARE, knt. the historian.

* Two or three discrepancies occur which are not easy to adjust. The individuals whom Sir James Ware, the historian, mentions in his will as his cousins may possibly supply some blanks, viz. Sarah King, Russel Nevin, and Mary Reilly.

This eminent person filled in his own time so prominent a position, and his writings are so frequently referred to in ours, that details regarding him, even somewhat beyond our accustomed limits, will not, we feel convinced, be deemed either irrelevant or uninteresting. James Ware was b. at his father's house in Castle Street, Dublin, on the 26th November, 1594. At the age of sixteen he entered at the university of Dublin as fellow-commoner. Upon leaving college the secular bent of his mind, which was directed to the elucidation of Irish antiquities, recommended him to the notice and friendship of the illustrious Usher, then Bishop of Leath, who was gratified to find in the young student an active and enthusiastic mind, intent upon pursuits congenial with his own. Stimulated by so distinguished an encouragement, our young antiquary began to collect with the greatest zeal early Irish manuscripts, as well as to make historical and genealogical compilations from the registries and cartularies of cathedrals and monasteries. He also visited London, where, through the medium of his friend Dr. Usher, he was promoted to the Archbishopric of Armagh, he was introduced to Sir Robert Cotton, whose rich store of ancient manuscripts invited him to still further exertions in his patriotic attempts to rescue from oblivion the historical relics of the sister-island. The best fruits of these exertions made their appearance in the form of three consecutive memoirs, which treated of the Archbishops of Cashel and Tuam, of the Bishops of Dublin, and of the Cistercian monasteries of Ireland. After the publication of these works he revisited England, and, while he renewed his acquaintance with Sir Robert Cotton, to whose library he made some valuable archaeological presents, he had also the satisfaction of forming a useful friendship with the learned Selden. The contributions which James Ware was thus rendering to the ancient ecclesiastical history of Ireland made a forcible appeal to the gratitude of his country. In 1629 he received the honour of knighthood, even while his father, who possessed a similar title, the ward of past services, was living.

The younger Sir James Ware soon began to relax from the severity of his literary studies. The consideration of an increasing family brought him by his marriage with Miss Newman, the daughter of an influential citizen of Dublin, suggested to his attention the lucrative nature of state occupations: and when, in the year 1632, by the death of Sir James Ware the elder, he succeeded to the office of auditor-general, so arduously were its arduous duties performed by him, that upon the arrival in Ireland of the Lord Deputy Wentworth, afterwards Earl of Strafford, he was called to a seat in the Privy Council. But, besides these distinctions for services rendered to the state, Sir James Ware appeared before his countrymen as a mild, prudent and affectionate son of the reformed church; which disposition was not lost upon the hierarchy of the establishment, who were also deeply impressed with the profound knowledge exhibited in his writings of the ecclesiastical affairs of Ireland; and hence their successful recommendations to the king that he should be appointed one of the commissioners for the settlement of certain impropriations in the possession of the crown on a resident clergy. Although Sir James was thus variously occupied, his public functions did not so entirely engross his time as to leave him without any leisure for the prosecution of his beloved literary pursuits. He printed, from a manuscript which fell into his possession, Spencer's View of the State of Ireland, a most valuable work, which he followed up by editing Meredith Hanmer's Chronicle, and Campion's History of Ireland. He also published, in 1639, his important bibliographical memoir, in two parts, De scriptoribus Hiberniæ. These several labours were considered of such national importance, that the learned body most capable of appreciating it, returned him member of the House of Commons for the University of Dublin.

The great troubles of Ireland were now fast approaching. In 1640 the Earl of Strafford hurried to England to consult with his royal master, and, in the mean time, the Catholic party took advantage of his absence to impeach not only him, but likewise certain eminent individuals in the possession of the Lord Deputy's confidence. If the earnest pleadings of the friends of the unfortunate nobleman eventually proved unsuccessful, a different result awaited the powerful and eloquent appeal made by Sir James Ware against the impeachment of Sir George Radcliffe and others, which caused the charge to fall to the ground. Soon after this event, in the year 1641, the great rebellion broke out, when the cool advice of Sir James Ware is acknowledged to have greatly aided the numerous cabinet councils which were consequently held. In 1643 he took a great share in the question entered into with the Irish insurgents touching the expediency of a suspension of arms; and being appointed a member of the council of seventeen for arranging the terms of the armistice, the treaty became so disturbed with the numerous jarring prejudices and interests which it involved, that, eventually, Sir James was appointed one of the three commissioners instructed to repair to the king at Oxford, and to confer with his majesty relative to a final peace with the confederated rebels. It is to be presumed that

Sir James Ware would now have at his command far less literary leisure than formerly: it is evident, however, that his favourite pursuits did not even then cease to hold an important influence over his mind and actions. His detention at Oxford gave him full opportunity of conversing with many learned men, and he made numerous extracts connected with the early state of Ireland, from the manuscripts contained in the libraries of the university. The sense which Oxford entertained of the national benefits which Sir James had conferred upon his country, were evinced by the honorary degree with which he was complimented of doctor of laws. His return home was followed by a serious disaster. Being taken prisoner at sea by one of the ships in the service of the Parliament, he was sent a prisoner to the Tower of London, where, to beguile a tedious imprisonment, he wrote an imaginary voyage to an Utopian island, which, having never been published, is now regarded as lost. At length, after a painful detention of ten months, an exchange of prisoners was agreed upon, which obtained the release of Sir James Ware, whose return to his native country was hailed with great satisfaction. His excellent qualifications for public business were again called into requisition:—for although he lived at a period when party prejudices and feelings ran to a height unknown to Ireland even in her later times of trouble, his political conduct ever assumed a mild form, calculated, if not to completely resist, at least to soften down the asperities of the age. The first proof of the trust reposed in him was his being conjoined with two distinguished noblemen in a committee of enquiry relative to the Earl of Glamorgan, who, it was imagined, had exceeded his commission in patching up a clandestine peace with the disaffected Irish.

In 1647 the Marquis of Ormond surrendered the metropolis of Ireland, in obedience to the King's order, to the Parliament, when Sir James Ware, along with the Lord Richard Butler, afterwards Earl of Arran, the Earl of Roscommon and Colonel Arthur Chichester, became hostages for the faithful performance of the conditions of surrender. The consequent detention of Sir James in London, which did not perhaps exceed the term of one year, again allowed him literary leisure, and the society of the English savans. Upon his return to Dublin he found that the reins of power had passed into the hands of rancorous enemies, and that his long and unshaken adherence to the royal cause had rendered him obnoxious to the new governor of Dublin, Michael Jones. He was deprived of his office of auditor-general, while his well-known intimacy with the Marquis of Ormond, who had then entered into an union with the army of the supreme council, led to his banishment. He was ordered, as an object of formidable mistrust, to transport himself beyond the seas to any country, save England, which suited his pleasure. To ordinary minds as an exile in a foreign and distant land ever presents a revolting aspect. But to Sir James Ware it was an exchange of troublesome functions for the still and soothing occupations of science, which ever afforded to his enquiring mind the most delightful of solaces. Accompanied by his eldest son, he set sail in the spring of 1649 for France, where St. Maloes, Caen and Paris, became his successive places of residence. In the French cities he cultivated an acquaintance with eminent literati, but more particularly at Caen, with a savant of kindred, archaeological pursuits, the ardent and indefatigable Bochart. At the expiration of a few years' exile, when the political horizon was considered more clear, Sir James had the liberty conceded to him, upon the urgent plea of his presence being indispensable to the well-being of his estates, to revisit Ireland. He had kept a written journal of his foreign exile, under the title of Itinerarium Gallicum, which was never published. It now holds a place in the shelves of the Cottonian library. The first care of Sir James upon his return, and after arranging his private affairs, was to add to his extensive collections of national and ancient manuscripts, for which he spared no cost; and, as he did not himself understand the speaking of the Irish language, though he could make a shift to read it, he constantly kept in his house an Irish amanuensis, of the name of Dudley Firbisse, to aid him in the translation of dubious passages. At length he was enabled to prepare for the press his master-piece, which he published under the title "De Hibernia et Antiquitatibus ejus disquisitiones." Its success even advanced his reputation, high as it already was, in the republic of learning. Among other grateful effects, it recommended him to the intimacy of the English antiquary Sir William Dugdale. A second impression of this celebrated work being demanded, it appeared, at the expiration of five years, with an addition of records relative to the affairs of Ireland during the reign of HENRY VII. And, in 1656, he illustrated, with valuable notes, the ecclesiastical works usually ascribed to St. Patrick.

The restoration of CHARLES II. and the recall of the Marquis of Ormond to the viceroyalty of Ireland, under the title of Duke of Ormond, interrupted for a time these literary labours. Sir James Ware, the tried and faithful adherent of the royal cause, and the confidential friend of the restored Lord Lieutenant, was invited to resume his former office of auditor-general. To this confirmed sentiment of public approbation the university of Dublin responded, by electing Sir James, for a second time, one of their representatives in Parliament. And, lastly, when the government appointed a chosen council for the peaceful settlement of the affairs of the kingdom, and for the satisfaction of the several interests of adventurers, Sir James Ware was, by the king's special instructions, included in the quorum indispensable to the validity of every act of the royal commission. With this renovation, and even accession of political power entrusted to him, Sir James never allowed himself to be urged or betrayed to acts of harsh retaliation towards a fallen party. An anecdote to this point is preserved:—a valuable dwelling-house in Dublin, forfeited by an act of rebellion on the part of the deceased owner, had been gifted to him by the government. But he found that the acceptance of the grant would inflict upon a bereaved family a more than common degree of suffering; sending, therefore, for the widow and children under affliction, he instantly replaced them beneath the tutelar protection of their family roof. While his conduct, however, towards old and bitter opponents could be only manifested by acts of self-denial, his kindly feelings towards his old political associates less fortunate than himself, whom the crown had neglected, or had not the means to reward, was not of a contingent, but of a positive character: it was systematically displayed in acts of solid friendship, or in the hospitality of a plentiful table, to which the decayed cavalier was ever made welcome. These generous acts could not fail to command the esteem of his fellow-citizens, whose frequent testimonials in his favour, were acknowledged by the corresponding solicitude which he evinced in promoting their municipal interests. When, for instance, the chief magistrate of Dublin was dignified with the title of Lord Mayor, the influence of Sir James Ware, with the Duke of Ormond, procured from the crown a grant to the city of five hundred pounds per annum, for the support of the new dignity. Amidst these varied political duties and avocations it may easily be supposed, that Sir James would find the opportunities afforded him for indulging in his usual literary occupations much diminished. He published, however, in 1662, the annals of Ireland, during the reign of HENRY VIII.; to which, two years afterwards, he added those of the subsequent reigns of EDWARD VI. and Mary.—As a reward for these immense labours, political as well as literary, it was proposed to create Sir James a Viscount of the kingdom of Ireland; but, as he must have well known from experience, how incompatible is the formal splendour and the fatigue of rank, with the habits of the savant, it may be justly questioned, whether, under any conditions he would have been inclined to risk, from mere personal motives of ambition, the great object of all his worldly desires, which, to adopt his own expression, was “to enquire into the dark mazes of Irish antiquity, that the knowledge of them might spread, not only at home, but abroad.” Independently, however, of these considerations, there subsisted peculiar domestic circumstances affecting his posterity, (to be explained hereafter), which alone furnished an irresistible argument for the refusal of the proffered dignity. Declining, therefore, the honour intended for him, yet anxious that his royal master should not misconstrue the motives of his refusal, he requested, in lieu of a Peerage, two blank patents of Baronetage, which he filled up with the names of two friends, whose posterity, Walter Harris assures us, have continued to his day to enjoy the hereditary distinctions.

The later contributions of Sir James Ware to the early history of Ireland, were confined to ecclesiastical affairs. He edited two epistles of the venerable Bede, in illustration of the more ancient customs of the British churches, and preparatory to the last commentary published by him, when he was seventy years old, relative to the bishops of Ireland, from the dawn of the Christian faith, down to modern times. And even when he was approaching still nearer to the very advanced term beyond which human existence is rarely prolonged, he contemplated the publication of divers other researches connected with Ireland. These were frustrated by his decease, which took place on the 1st December, 1666, in the seventy-third year of his age. When CHARLES II. was informed of his death, he was heard to exclaim, with much apparent feeling, that he had lost a faithful servant. But it is less for the political, than for the literary services which he has rendered to his country, that his name will be perpetuated among the worthies of the sister kingdom.—He has been properly designated, THE CAMDEN OF IRELAND.

Sir James Ware, in his will, had directed that his body should be deposited under the tombstone in St. Werberg's church, Dublin, where his father, mother, wife, and some of his children lay buried. This was done in the most unostentatious manner; neither stone nor monumental inscription marking the place where his remains were interred. “But he had taken care,” remarked his biographer, “to erect a monument for himself by his labours, more lasting than any mouldering materials.”

His father left him in his will, for reasons to be explained hereafter, lands and tenements at Finglas and Tawlaght, in the county of Dublin, at Ballynogow in the Queen's county, and elsewhere; besides all the goods, debts, books, money and plate, of which he might die possessed. The books, including, probably the valuable collection of Irish manuscripts collected by Sir James Ware, were no doubt bequeathed to Robert Ware, in consideration of the early literary zeal which he displayed.—Robert Ware was a very voluminous author on controversial subjects, the very titles of his volumes exhibiting the spirit of the times in which they were written. It may be easily supposed that their anti-papal character would not recommend the author to JAMES II.; for, when the earl of Tyrconnel, landed in Dublin to take upon him the government of Ireland, Robert Ware, in company with other gentlemen favourable to the orange cause, fled to England, where he remained until recalled by the event of the battle of the Boyne. During these troubles the property of the family suffered. The numerous Irish manuscripts collected by Sir James Ware, at an immense expense and labour, fell into the possession of the Earl of Clarendon, lord lieutenant of Ireland, in the reign of JAMES II. by whom they were sold to the Duke of Chandos, (See HARRIS'S Ware, vol. ii. p. 157). JAMES WARE, esq. elder of the two surviving sons of the historian, was b. 9th August, 1622. He succeeded his father, as auditor-general of Ireland. This gentleman was doomed to witness the declining fortunes of the family resulting from peculiar domestic circumstances to which a slight allusion has been made in the account given of Sir James Ware. It appears that of the six sons of Sir James Ware, two only had survived, James and Robert. The latter, Robert, had been affected during his youth with epileptic fits, which led the father to entertain an unfavourable presentiment relative to his future constitutional state, both of body and mind. Acting therefore, under the impression, that his younger son afforded no hereditary hopes to the family, he entailed the bulk of his estates upon the children of his eldest son, James, by Miss Hickman. Robert Ware, however, as he grew older, exhibited a vigorous state of body and mind, which gave the parent not a small cause of regret for what he had done; while, to add to his mortification, one being male only, of a very delicate constitution, resulted from the marriage of his elder son, who afforded slender expectation that he would live to enjoy the family estates. Sir James Ware now saw that in case of a failure of male heirs from the said marriage, his precipitate measure of general entail might cause the family estates to be concentrated in a grand-daughter, and that in the event of her marriage and dying without issue, the large property thus entailed would be transferred to a heir general of some other family, though a proper lineal success nor might exist at the time: With this very possible contingency, the mind of Sir James Ware was duly impressed, when it was proposed to create him a viscount of the kingdom of Ireland. He too plainly perceived, that a proper lineal successor, if born to a peerage, or even to a baronetage, would have very precarious hopes indeed of being able to support his title with befitting dignity. This reflection therefore, must of itself, have fully justified his refusal of any hereditary distinction intended for his family. But this was not the only consequence resulting from the improvident proceeding. The creation of a general entail, upon the marriage of the elder son having been fatal to the younger son's expectations, demanded every possible reparation. All the addition of fortune therefore, which Sir James Ware, in the later years of his life could save, was conscientiously added to the provision previously reserved by him, for the support of the said younger son, so that eventually Robert Ware enjoyed a greater share of property than usually falls to the lot of a cadet. A dernier result of the unfortunate entail thus raised upon the marriage of an elder son, was only felt in its full force, when this son contracted a second marriage. The comparative situations therefore under which the children of each marriage were left, remain to be traced. James Ware m. for his first wife, on the 11th February, 1650, a niece of his mother-in-law, namely, Elizabeth, daughter of Dixie Hickman, esq. of Kew, and sister of Baron Windsor, afterwards Earl of Plymouth, upon which marriage, for reasons explained, there was raised a general entail of the bulk of Sir James Ware's estates. The issue from this marriage were,

1. James, named in Sir James Ware's will, of the date of 1665. He was the only son of his father's first marriage, and was consequently, born with considerable expectations of fortune. But he died without issue.

1. Mary, b. 5th March, 1651, the only surviving child of her father's first marriage. In succeeding to her brother, James, of whole blood, she became heir of the entire estates which had been the subject of the general entail created. When under age, she encountered a fate too common to rich heiresses, being forced away and married against her consent by a Mr. James Shirley, but by a decree of the Consistory of Dublin, the marriage was dissolved. She subsequently wedded Alexander Fraser, esq. After his death she entered a second, or, more properly speaking, a third time into the state of wedlock, with Sir John St. Leger, knt. one of the barons of the court of Exchequer in Ireland, in whom, according to the assertion of Walter Harris, "the estate of the family vested." See HARRIS'S WARE, vol. ii. p. 156.

1. JAMES, his heir, (a former son of that name, by the first marriage having died.)

1. Barbara, b. 2nd February, 1669, d. young and unmarried.

2. Jane, m. to Sir John Sandes, baronet, in 1692.

3. Elizabeth, m. to Andrew-Francis Cheney, gentleman.*

James Ware died on the 6th May, 1689, in the city of Chester, whither he had fled during the short period of civil commotion in Ireland, attending the last effort of King JAMES II. to regain his throne. Independently of a previous settlement in favour of his second family, he made a nuncupative will, declaring that all which he had in the world, he left to his son,

JAMES WARE, esq. The limited fortunes of the children resulting from the second marriage of their father, appear to have been derived from a residuum of the family estates which had escaped the alienating tendency of the entail created by Sir James Ware, conjoined probably, with the savings of the father, from his office as auditor-general of Ireland. By virtue of two deeds, the last of which was dated March 8th, 1683, James Ware, the father, after having reserved a provision for himself, and for his wife, Barbara, during their respective lives, settled most of his property upon his son, with the excep-

* It is impossible to acquit Walter Harris, in his professed genealogical history of the family of Sir James Ware, on the score of ignorance for withholding every mention of the second marriage of the historian's elder son and the issue resulting from it, as the very will of his father-in-law, Robert Ware, makes mention of his nephew, James Ware, and his nieces, the Lady Jane Sandes, and Mrs. Eliza Ware.

But such was the complex state of the property in general, owing to the causes already explained, that it gave rise to two suits in equity, the first of which was commenced in the year 1692, by Sir John Sandes, baronet, on the part of Jane his wife, against James Ware, Elizabeth Ware, and Jane Jones, sister of Mrs. Barbara Ware, his late mother-in-law. In the course of these expensive and ruinous proceedings, Mace-town Castle, in the county of Meath, (now in ruins,) came into the possession of Mr. Cheney, who had married Elizabeth Ware. James Ware, d. in 1755, being interred (December, 6th) at St. Michaels, Dublin, and was succeeded by

ROBERT WARE, esq. of Castle-street, Dublin. (See HARRIS'S Dublin, p. 485.) An excellent education was bestowed upon this gentleman, who, when he grew up, evinced, like his great-grandfather, a decided predilection for antiquarian pursuits, his favourite authors being Camden and Ware. Being unable after the death of his father, to keep up the rank conceived by him to be due to the older branch of an ancient house, his pecuniary embarrassments obliged him to dispose of his property in Dublin and Westmeath, and, as he had lost the lady whom he had recently espoused, he left his only child, a daughter, in the care of his mother at Westmeath, and quitted his country to improve his fortunes in the army. In the year 1761, when expeditions were undertaken against the coasts of France, and many young gentlemen offered their services to government, Robert Ware was present at the siege of Belleisle, where, in the endeavour to rescue an officer who was engaged in the trenches, he received a severe wound, from which he never completely recovered. His hopes from an active military career being thus early cut short, he met with employment in England in the home service of the army. Ultimately, his military experience recommended him to the notice of Lord Strange, afterwards Earl of Derby, and, in accepting a commission in the royal Lancashire militia under his lordship's command, his assistance in organizing the details of regimental duty was greatly appreciated. In this corps the remainder of his life was rendered very happy, as he possessed the society of a highly valued friend of congenial antiquarian pursuits, lieutenant-colonel Chadwick, of the ancient house of Mavesyn-Ridware,* while an ample competency was secured to him by a second marriage which he contracted. He d. 18th July, 1779: while bathing in the sea at Tynemouth, in Northumberland, where the Lancashire militia was stationed, he was seized with an apoplectic fit, and expired immediately. His remains were interred with military honours, at the church of St. Nicholas. SARAH WARE, the only surviving child of Robert Ware, esq. who left issue, was born in June, 1751. Soon after her mother's death, when, in consequence of the declining fortunes of the family, her father removed to England, she was left at Westmeath under the care of her grandmother, who educated her in the Roman Catholic faith. Afterwards, in consequence of the improvement which had taken place in the circumstances of her father, she was sent for to England, when she entered into the Protestant communion. Family of Hibbert.

The name of Hibbert appears to have been a corruption of Hubert, which may again be referred to the Norman Hudebert. This is indicated by an examination of the registries of wills for Nottinghamshire, where we find about the year 1600, families of Hubbert, (no doubt the same as Hubert,) who have their names variously moulded, during succeeding generations, into Hubberd, Hibberd, Hibbert, and Hibbert, which last became eventually the more prevalent orthography. From Nottinghamshire branches of the families of Hibbert extended into Derbyshire, of which county several individuals of this name have been registered as benefactors, or worthies. (See GLOVER'S list of the Worthies of Derbyshire in his topographical work on that county, vol. i. p. 97, &c.)

NICHOLAS HIBBERT, esq. was settled in the middle of the sixteenth century in the narrow neck of land in Cheshire, which is hemmed in between the counties of Derby, Yorkshire, and Lancashire. He d. July, 1586, leaving issue, NATHANIEL HIBBERT, of Werneth, who was twice married, and left issue by both marriages. By his second wife, (who died in 1667,) he had a younger son,

TITUS HIBBERT, of Werneth, who was also twice married, and by his first wife had, with other children, a younger son,

TITUS HIBBERT, who afterwards settled at High Knowls in Lancashire. He had several children, of whom the third son was,

TITUS HIBBERT, of Manchester, merchant, b. in April, 1717. He was engaged in the commerce of the thriving town of Manchester, as a foreign merchant, and acquired an ample fortune. He had also pretensions to a literary character, having distinguished himself in a political controversy with the celebrated John Wesley, in the great national question relative to the expediency of the American war.* This gentleman, no less by his exemplary industry than by his scrupulous integrity, fulfilled in every respect the honorable character of the ancient English merchant. SLANEY, OF HATTON GRANGE.

SLANEY, ROBERT-AGLIONBY, esq. of Hatton Grange, in the county of Salop, b. 9th June, 1790; m. in February, 1812, Elizabeth, only child of William Hawkins Muckleston, M.D. and niece and heiress of Joseph Muckleston, esq. of Walford Manor, in the same county, and has three daughters, Mary.

Frances-Catherine.

Mr. Slaney, who succeeded his father in 1834, is a magistrate for the county of Salop, and M. P. for Shrewsbury.

Lineage.

"A family tradition," says Blakeway, "derives the Slaneys, from Slaney, a town in Bohemia, eighteen miles N. W. of Prague. Of the truth of this I have no means of judging. It appears from the Records of Shrewsbury, that in 1648, Frederick Slaney, gent. son of Vallantine Slaney, de civitate Reginuntani in Prussia infra lominium Regis Polonie, (by which is meant, I presume, Konigsberg,) was admitted a burghess of that corporation."

SIR STEPHEN SLANEY, knt. son of John Slayne, of Mytton, in Shropshire, was an eminent citizen of London, and filled the civic chair in 1595. He was seated at Norton, near Eccleshall, in Staffordshire, which he obtained by purchase from Lord Sheffield, but was obliged to sell, says Degge, "in order to pay his ransom, when taken prisoner by the Turks;" one of those ananiahs, perhaps, by which trading to the Levant was so frequently annoyed in that age. Sir Stephen died in 1608, aged eighty-four. His brother,

JOHN SLANEY, esq. was grandfather of

ROBERT SLANEY, esq. who m. Anne, daughter of Thomas Moreton,* esq. of Brocton Grange, in the county of Stafford, and had issue,

RICHARD MORETON, esq. was of Brocton Grange, in Staffordshire, by lease from his father and final conveyance from his niece, Anne and her husband. He was father of Mr. Mayne succeeded his father in 1819.

Lineage.

The family of Mayne, of Teffont, claims descent from the ancient barons of that name who inherited the province of Maine, in Normandy; and it is recorded that Ernulphus de Maine, accompanied WILLIAM the Conqueror into England, as his standard bearer, held various offices of great trust and profit, and received, in requital for his valour and prowess, considerable grants of land in Devonshire, and that Joel de Mayne, obtained from HENRY I. in 1140, property in Kings Nymet, near Chumleigh, in the same county which King JOHN, upon the separation of Normandy from England seized upon. It is certain, however, that the Maynes acquired great patronage and frequently distinguished themselves in the wars of York and Lancaster. About that period, a younger branch settled in Kent, and became possessed of large estates there, at Lamberhurst, Linton, Bretchley, Staplehurst, Frittenden, Cranbrook, Biddenden, Woodchurch, &c. &c. Yet of these fair domains, and of this once flourishing and numerous family, the monuments, the grants, the inquisitions, and the wills alone remain to attest its existence and its distinction. No descendant can now be traced, and the family, of which the present proprietor of Teffont is the chief, appears to be the only one which can shew an English descent.

† Of the very ancient family of Hele, fruitful the county of Devon is known to have been in distinguished houses, it may with truth be stated, † it was one of the most eminent, the most widely spread, and the most affluent which even a quarter of England could boast of. When Matthew Hele, esq. of Holwell, served as sheriff of Devon, at the time of the Restoration, the members of the family were so numerous, and all such good estate within the county, that he embleed a grand jury, representing the body of the county, and seldom under twenty, all of his name landed, gentlemen of estate and quality; "which do the judge observe when he heard Hele of Holwell, esq. called, a gentill seat in the parish of Dalwood, that he thought they must be all descended from Wisdom, in that they had acquired such considerable fortunes." [BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage, to which refer for ample particulars of the family of Hele, in all its branches.]

HARVEY, OF ICKWELL BURY.

HARVEY JOHN, esq. of Ickwell Bury, in the parish of Northill, in the county of Bedford, and of Finningley Park, in the county of York, born 14th November, 1815, and succeeded his father, 20th June, 1819.

Lineage.

This family is of great antiquity in England, being descended from Robert Fitz Harvey, or de Hervé) a valiant soldier who came to England with WILLIAM the Conqueror. It appears by the chronicles of Normandy and England; of the same lineage was also Hervey (or Harvey), first bishop of Ely, who founded the monastery of Thorney, in Cambridgeshire, as appears by the records thereof and Hervey, of Lyons, who in the reign of STEPHEN came into England and assisted that monarch in his wars with the Empress Maud. He held out the castle of Devizes for King STEPHEN, against the Earl of Gloucester, till he was forced to deliver it to the empress and retire beyond sea.

HARVEY DE LEON, or de Montmarsh, delivered his castles in France to HENRY II. and went over to the first conquest of Ireland, (as appears by Camden's Observations on Ireland,) HENRY his son was in the wars with RICHARD I. and held in much esteem by King JOHN, (as appears by the grant of the forestership of New Forest, and Achilles Garth, and other lands, given him by that king.) From him descended

JOHN HERVEY (or HARVEY), of Risley in Bedfordshire, who lived in the latter part of EDWARD III.'s reign, and m. Joan, daughter and heiress of John Hammond, (or Harmand,) of Thurleigh, in the said county, and became possessed of the lands of her inheritance.* From him the Harveys of Thurleigh directly descended. This John was elected knight of the shire for the county of Bedford, in 1386. In the 4th year of HENRY IV. he was enabled by a license from that king to found a collegiate church at Northill, instead of the parish one, the license (a copy of which is now in the possession of John Harvey, esq. of Ickwell Bury,) was granted to Sir Gerard Braybrooke, knt. and others, to celebrate divine service and pray for the souls of Sir John Traylly, knt. and Reginald, his son, deceased. This church is the burial place of the Harveys of Ickwell Bury, and contains several handsome monuments of that family. He had two sons, JOHN, his heir, and Peter, from whom descended the Northamptonshire Harveys, of which line was Sir Francis Harvey, judge of the Common Pleas in the reign of JAMES I. the son of whose younger brother was Martin Harvey, captain of a troop of horse in the reign of CHARLES I. and slain in his service.

From the elder son,

JOHN HARVEY, of Thurleigh, came the family of the present MARQUESS OF BRISTOL, and that of the Harveys, of Cole Park, in the county of Wilts, of which latter about the year 1637,

ROBERT HARVEY, m. Sarah, sister of Hugh Audley, esq. of the Inner Temple, and of Cole Park, in the parish of Malmsbury, in the county of Wilts. The issue of this marriage was Audley, (a cavalier in the reign of CHARLES I.) JOHN and Hugh, † (of the University of Cambridge.) The second son,

JOHN HARVEY, esq. became possessed of the estates of Ickwell Bury, in the county of Bedford and Finningley Park, in the county of York. He married Mary Vassal, widow, and had issue,

JOHN, b. 1667.

Robert.

William.

Edmond.

Samuel.

The eldest son,

JOHN HARVEY, § esq. of Ickwell Bury, born in 1667, contested the county of Bedford in 1710, against Lord Russel and Mr. Gostwick, and in 1715, was returned with Sir Pynsent Chernock, bart. He m. Sarah Gore, widow, daughter and co-heir of Sir John Robinson, bart. of Farming Woods, in the county of Northampton, and had issue, JOHN, who m. Beatrice, daughter of Cockayne, of Cockayne Hatley, but had no issue.

WILLIAM, who m. first, Judith, daughter of Samuel Ongley, esq. of Old Warden, in Bedfordshire, and secondly, Frances Anne Talman, but d. s. p.

JAMES, of whom presently.

Ann, m. to Samuel Ongley, esq. of Old Warden, in Bedfordshire.

The only son to leave issue,

* The moated scite of an ancient castle still remains at Thurleigh, which tradition assigns as the ancient residence of this John Harvey. (Vide Lyson's Britannia.)

† This Hugh inherited Cole Park, and had issue, John, buried in Malmsbury Abbey, the inscription on whose monument is as follows:

“ Sub hoc marmore reponuntur exuvia mortales Johannis Harvey de Cole Park in Paroch Malmesburiensi. Com. Wilts Armigeri. Nati Cantabrigiæ de familia ejusdem nominis in agro Bedfordiensi non minus antiqua, quam honorabili. Denati ædibus in Suis, in Magnum, et Suorum et proximorum omnium marem 27 die Februarii A. D. 1712. Ætat. 44.”

The male issue of this branch becoming extinct, Cole Park became the property of John, eldest son of the aforesaid John Harvey, of Ickwell Bury, who in 1710, contested the county against Lord Russel and Mr. Gostwick, and in 1715, was returned together with Sir Pynsent Chernock, bart.

‡ The manor of Ickwell Bury was formerly the property of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and was confiscated in the reign of HENRY VIII. as appears by the original grant now in possession of the present proprietor.

§ A very handsome silver-mounted couteau de chasse was presented to this gentleman by the Prince of Hesse Cassel, in 1701, in consequence of his having saved the prince's life when exposed to imminent danger in a bear hunt; it is still in the possession of the family.

A singular circumstance likewise occurred during his life, at Finningley Park, which is thus described in the parish register:

“ These are to certify, that I William Rowley, of Burton, county Lincoln, was parish clerk of Finningley, when the Rev. Mr. Barnardiston was rector of the same, and was an eye-witness of the following transaction, which happened (as I remember) on or about the month July, in the year of our Lord God, 1707, viz. Zechariah Bolton riding with his gun, on Mr. Barnardiston's bay horse, into Awkley Colt Field, found 5 stags herded about 200 yards west from bottom of the Long Hedge; he fired among them, and disabled one in the hinder parts, then quitting his horse, he caught the stag by the hind leg, and called to Sarah Wood and myself (who were not far off) for help; but the stag struggling and braying, the horse took him by the neck and beat him with his fore feet till he lay still, then we took him alive, laid him on the horse, and carried him to the parsonage house at Finningley, into the little court before the kitchen door, where he was killed and dressed by order of John Harvey, esq. of Ickwell Bury, who was there present, and had been given us an order to go about the said transaction. The truth of this I am ready to attest upon oath, &c. so required. Witness my hand this 25 day June, 1739.

† There is a deer park at Finningley belonging to John Harvey, esq.

JAMES HARVEY, esq. married Elizabeth Fairie, and had two sons,

Elizabeth, m. to Gervas Woodhouse, esq. of Owston House, in Lincolnshire, and had a son, the Rev. Gervas Henry Woodhouse.

The elder son,

JOHN HARVEY, esq. inherited the family estates from his uncle, became of Ickwell Bury, and served as high sheriff of Bedfordshire in 1781. He m. Sarah Silcock, and had issue,

JOHN, his heir.

Sarah, m. to William Astell, esq. of Everton House, Bedfordshire. (See vol. i. p. 540.)

The Rev. John Lynes is the incumbent of Hatton, and a magistrate for the county of Worcester.

Lineage.

Families of this name have been resident Corley and Fillingley, in the county of Warwick, from a very early period, and they are reputed to be descendants of LENOXES, who lived at Fillingley in the Conqueror's time; for according to Doomsday Book, Fillingley was at that time rated at 10 hides, and possessed by several persons. Half a hide thereof the bishop of Exeter had there, held by Leninnus, and valued at xxx^s. whereof the woods extended to two furlongs in length, and one in breadth; and there is a tradition in this family, borne out by the earliest records they possess, that Woods in Corley and Fillingley were in their possession in the time of the Saxons. The one in Corley was some time ago, by the father of the present representative of the family, the same as has been in the possession of his ancestors at the time of the Conquest, and had descended from that period handed down from father to son, until it came into the possession of the late Mr. Lynes. The one in Fillingley was in possession of John Lynes, of Fillingham, at the time of his decease in

* ANTHONY BABINGTON. This gentleman was attainted in the time of ELIZABETH for conspiring to release Mary, Queen of Scots, and is a conspicuous person at that period of our history. Sir Walter Scott describes him as "a young gentleman of good parts, large fortune, and an amiable disposition, but addicted to romantic ideas on the subject of love and friendship, and an unhesitating zealot in the cause of the Catholic religion." The plot originated with three Catholic priests, two of the name of Gifford, and the third Hodgson: and it contemplated the death of Elizabeth, with the consequent enfranchisement of Mary. It was first determined that Savage, an English Catholic, holding a commission in the Spanish service, should put Elizabeth to death with his own hand; but it being considered afterwards as rash in the extreme to entrust an object so important to a single arm, Babington undertook to carry the plot into execution with a band of ten gentlemen, with whom he was connected by the closest bonds of community in studies and amusements. The names of these persons were, Windsor, Salisbury, Tilney, Tichborne, Gage, Travers, Barnewall, Chaswick, Dunn, and Jones. The number was more than double that deemed requisite, but the rash and romantic mind of Babington totally unfitted him to lead such a band of conspirators. His imagination, excited in an extraordinary degree, displayed by one single act his utter incapacity. This was nothing less than the causing to be painted a picture, representing six of the principal associates, with his own portrait in the centre, the whole bearing a motto expressive of some hazardous purpose in which they were engaged. Babington, in the arrangement of the special part which each conspirator was to perform, as might have been expected, assumed for his own share the most romantic and least guilty portion of the enterprize, by undertaking the liberation of MARY from the place of her confinement. "What a man (says Sir Walter Scott) of such romantic character might hope from the gratitude of a queen released from prison, raised, as his extravagant plan inferred, to a crown far richer than that which she had lost, besides the great chance of recovering the government of her native kingdom, we can only guess at. Thus far is known, that Queen Mary, exhausted by imprisonment, disease, and suffering, no longer possessed those personal charms which might once have inflamed to feats of the most ardent and extravagant valour in her cause the sons of that chivalry which was not yet quite extinguished. When she was permitted to repair for the advantage of her health to the hot baths of Buxton, she is described as an elderly, lame, and bloated woman, altogether deprived, by long years of restraint and misery, mental and bodily, of those personal attractions which she once possessed in such an eminent degree. She was however sequestered from public view; and a warm imagination, like that of Babington, might figure her in his ideas as still possessed of her unrivalled charms; or perhaps, her high rank as queen might, in his opinion, compensate for advanced age and personal deficiencies. Salisbury, with others, were to assemble forces in the neighbouring counties, while Titchbourne, Savage, and four associates, undertook the assassination of Elizabeth." The plot was discovered through a person named Polly, a spy of Walsingham's, who had ingratiated himself with the conspirators: and one of the Giffords having turned informer, Babington was arrested with the whole of the band, excepting Salisbury, who effected his escape abroad, and lodged in the Tower. Being separately examined, they confessed their guilt, were tried, condemned, and executed.

† Gervaise Babington was born in Nottinghamshire, according to Fuller, but in Devonshire, according to Isacke and Prince. After having received the first rudiments of learning, he was sent to Trinity College, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. On the 15th of July, 1578, he was incorporated M.A. at Oxford, as he stood in his own university. After studying other branches of learning, he applied himself to divinity, and became a favourite preacher in Cambridge, the place of his residence. When he was D.D. he was made domestic chaplain to Henry, Earl of Pembroke, president of the council in the marches of Wales, and is supposed to have assisted Lady Mary Sidney, Countess of Pembroke, in her version of the Psalms into English metre. By his lordship's interest, however, he was constituted treasurer of the church of Llandaff, and in 1588 was installed into the prebend of Wellington, in the cathedral of Hereford. Through his patron's further interest, he was advanced to the bishopric of Llandaff, and was consecrated, August 29th, 1791. In February, 1594, he was translated to the see of Exeter, to which he did an irreparable injury by alienating from it the rich manor of Crediton, in Devonshire. In 1597 he was translated to Worcester, and was likewise made one of the queen's council for the marches of Wales. To the library of Worcester Cathedral he was a very great benefactor, for he not only fitted and repaired the edifice, but also bequeathed to it all his books. After having continued Bishop of Worcester near thirteen years, he died of the jaundice, May 17, 1610, and was buried in the Cathedral of Worcester without any monument.

As to his character, it is agreed, that in the midst of all his preferments, he was neither tainted with idleness, pride, nor covetousness; and was not only diligent in preaching, but in writing books for the understanding of the Holy Scriptures. He was an excellent and animating preacher. His works were printed, first in quarto, then with daff in 1591, and translated, first, to the see of Exeter in 1594, and afterwards to Worcester in 1597. His lordship m. Joane, daughter of Thomas Taylor, of Cardiff, and d. 17th May, 1610, having had a son, WILLINGTON, OF HURLEY.

WILLINGTON, KATHARINE, succeeded to the representation of the ancient family of Willington, upon the demise of her brother, Thomas Willington, esq. of Hurley Hall, in 1815, and will inherit the estates, should she outlive that gentleman's widow, the present possessor.

Lineage.

JOHN WILLINGTON, of Willington, in the county of Derby, lived at, or immediately after, the time of WILLIAM the Conqueror, since we find that his eldest son, NICHOLAS WILLINGTON, was contemporaneous with Robert, Abbot of Burton, in the reign of STEPHEN. This Nicholas was a liberal benefactor to the Convent of Repton of lands in Willington and elsewhere. He was succeeded by his son, NICHOLAS WILLINGTON, who appears also to have been a munificent benefactor to the same community. He was father of

HUGO WILLINGTON, living 38 HENRY III, to whom succeeded the next in the male line,

RALPH DE WILLINGTON, who settled in Gloucestershire, temp. King JOHN, and afterwards founded St. Mary's Chapel in the Abbey of St. Peter's at Gloucester, now called the Lady Chapel. He m. Olympias dau. and heir of William Franc, grandson and heir of Sir Humphrey Franc, knt. and was father of

SIR RALPH DE WILLINGTON, living 37 HENRY III, who married Joane, daughter and heir of Sir William Champenowne, Lord of Umberleigh, in Devon, and hence his descendants took for their arms those of Champenowne, omitting the billets, viz. gr. a saltire vair. Sir Ralph's son and successor,

SIR RALPH DE WILLINGTON, of Umberleigh, in Devon, styled by Risdon, "a worthy warrior," was governor of the Castle at Exeter, 38 HENRY III. and sheriff of Devonshire 42nd of the same reign. He married Juliana, supposed to have been daughter and heir of Sir Richard de Lomen, Lord of Gittisham as the lands of Lomen came to her descendants, and had issue.

JOHN, of Umberleigh, summoned to Parliament as a BARON from 3 EDWARD III. to 12th of the same reign, in which year he died, leaving by Joan, his wife, a son and successor.

RALPH, of Umberleigh, summoned to Parliament 16 EDWARD III.

This Ralph was in the wars of Scotland and France, and attained the high military rank of Banneret. He m. Eleanor, dau. of John, Lord Mohun, but died s. p. in 1349.

THOMAS, living 22 EDWARD III.

The third son,

SIR HENRY WILLINGTON, knt. of Gittisham, knight-banneret, was, with his brother John, made prisoner at Bannockburn, and subsequently taking part with the Earl of Lancaster against the Spencers, was executed at Bristol in 1322. He m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Alexander Frevill, by Joane, his wife, a co-heiress of the Marmions of Tamworth, and left a son and successor.

SIR HENRY WILLINGTON, knt. of Gittisham, 23 EDWARD III. who held large possessions in the counties of Cornwall, Dorset, Gloucester, Wilts, Devon, and Oxford. He m. Isabel, dau. of Sir John Whalesborow, and was succeeded by his son, ISABEL, co-heir, aged 25, 5 HENRY IV. m. to William Beaumont, son of Sir John Beaumont of Shirwell, Devon.

MARGARET, co-heir, m. to John Wrothe, son of Sir John Wrothe.

The continuator of the name and male line was

JOHN WILLINGTON, who, like his ancestors, held lands at Umberleigh, but did not inherit the great estates of the family, which passed to the Beaumonts and Wrothes. He sided at Todenham, Gloucestershire, and succeeded probably from a younger son of the second Sir Henry de Willington. By Margery, his wife, he left a son and successor,

WILLIAM WILLINGTON, of Todenham, whose will is dated 22 January, 1500. He is father of

JOHN WILLINGTON, of Todenham, who left two sons, by different wives, namely,

7. Anketel, who is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Monaghan, succeeded to the estates and representation of the ancient family of Anketel, upon the demise of his father, in 1828-9.

Lineage.

The family of which we are about to treat is of high station in the county of Dorset, a very remote period, (its name appearing in the Domesday Book,) and so early as the reign of EDWARD I. we find FITZAMELINE ANKETEL, representing the borough of Shaftesbury in Parliament. Leland, in his Itinerary, mentions Roger Anketel as one of the jury on an inquisition concerning the estate of Gillingham, 6 EDWARD II. and in the 20th of the following reign, William Anketel held a fourth of a fee in Redlane Street. For centuries after, the Anketels continued eminent in the South of England, marrying with the Filiols, the Penruds, the Phelips and other houses of distinction; taking a prominent part in the public transactions of their country, and acquiring considerable territorial possessions. During the civil wars, Colonel Anketel was governor of Corfe Castle, ex parte regis, and an interesting narrative of its surrender is given in Hutchin's History of Dorset. The English family has long since passed away, but the ancient stem having planted a branch in the North of Ireland, temp. CHARLES I. the Anketels maintain in the land of their adoption, as distinguished a position as did their English progenitors, in the land of their extraction. The first ancestor of this line,

MATTHEW ANKETEL, esq. acquired in 1636 a grant of land in the county of Monaghan, and emigrated to Ireland, where he married Matilda, daughter of Robert Moore, esq. of Garvy Castle, in Tyrone, and had a son,

MATTHEW ANKETEL, esq. of Anketel Grove, who lost his life during the contest, between JAMES and WILLIAM in 1689. "At that time," we quote a writer of authority, "nearly 3000 of the enemy being garrisoned in the fort of Charlemont, within five miles of Armagh, and attempting to plunder the Protestants, Henry, fifth Lord Blayney, had daily skirmishes with them in which he constantly prevailed to their considerable loss, until the 13th March, when being informed that his castle of Monaghan was taken by the Irish, and that all the forces of the country had retreated to Glaslough, where they were besieged by the enemy; that Sir Arthur Rawdon had quitted Longbrickland, and that the Irish army under General Hamilton had possessed that place, he called a council of war, wherein it was resolved to march the next day to relieve the besieged at Glasslough, which if they could effect, to proceed then through Dungannon to Antrim to join their friends there. But Lady Blayney and the besieged in Glaslough being relieved by MATTHEW ANKETEL, esq. a gentleman of undaunted courage at the expense of his life, his lordship continued at Armagh." This devoted adherent of King WILLIAM was succeeded by his son,

OLIVER ANKETEL, esq. of Anketel Grove, M. P. for the borough of Monaghan, who espoused 28th February, 1716, the Hon. Sarah Caulfeild, second daughter of William, second Viscount Charlemont, (the gallant and well known participator in the triumphs of the Earl of Peterborough in Spain,) by Anne, his wife, only daughter of James Margetson, lord archbishop of Armagh. By this lady, who died in December, 1742, Mr. Anketel left, with other issue, a son and successor,

MATTHEW ANKETEL, esq. of Anketel Grove, who m. 11th March, 1748, Anne, daughter of Charles Coote, esq. of Coote Hill, M. P. for the county of Cavan, and sister of Charles, earl of Bellamont; by this lady he had issue,

Oliver, b. in December, 1749, d. young Charles, }
Richard, } who both d. unmarried.

MATTHEW.

The youngest son and eventual heir.

MATTHEW ANKETEL, esq. of Anketel Grove, married first, in 1780, Prudentia, only daughter of Thomas Steward Cery, esq. of Rockcorry Castle, in the county of Monaghan, by whom he had a daughter, Prudentia, who died in youth. He wedded, secondly, Mary, daughter of the Rev. Richard Norris, and had with other issue, a son and heir, the present WILLIAM ANKETEL, esq. of Anketel Grove.

Lineage.

The following abridged history of the family of PRIDEAUX, is taken from the collection of family papers of the late Dr. Humphrey Prideaux, Dean of Norwich, author of "The Connection between the Old and New Testament," and other works.

The founder of this ancient house was MAGANUS DE PRIDEAUX, who, coming to England with WILLIAM the Conqueror, had a large estate in land given him in Cornwall, in which county he built Prideaux Castle, near Fowey. He left two sons, Richard, and Philip. The elder,

RICHARD PRIDEAUX, lord of Prideaux, 122. temp. HENRY I., left a son,

BALDWIN PRIDEAUX, lord of Prideaux Castle, who d. 1165, and left issue,

NICHOLAS PRIDEAUX, who d. in 1169, leaving Richard* and Hickadon.

HICKADON PRIDEAUX, the second son, m. the daughter and heiress of Ralph Orchardon, of Orchardon, in the parish of Modbury, county of Devon, and was ancestor of the PRIDEAUXES, of ORCHARTON, &c. who continued there seated for a considerable time, until one of the family was nearly ruined by having killed his neighbour, Sir William de Sigbury, in a duel on Sacas bridge, in consequence of a quarrel at hunting; the affair cost him great part of his estates to procure pardon; it is unnecessary to trace the descent of the family farther, as the representative of the branch of which we are speaking, is from the Luson house in the parish of Comington, near Orchardon, which estate it is believed was given to

THOMAS PRIDEAUX, the second son of Roger Prideaux, of Orchardon, by the daughter of Champernowne. His eldest son, JOHN PRIDEAUX, of Luson, m. Mary, the daughter of Walter Jago, of Dartmouth, merchant, and had two sons, ARTHUR, and WALTER. "The family of Speke (we quote Collinson's History of Somerset,) were very anciently possessed of the manors of Wemworthy, and Brampton, in the county of Devon, and chiefly resided in the former of those parishes, at a seat denominated Heywood. In the time of HENRY II., Richard Le Espek, (for so the name was formerly written) held three knights fees of Robert Fitzroy, lord of the manor of Okehampton. In the same reign, he held one fee of William Tracy, and two fees of Oliver Tracy. The said Richard Le Espek had issue, William, and he another, Richard, who was under age, 30 HENRY II., Richard was father of Sir William Le Espek, who married Alice, daughter and heiress of Sir Walter Gervois, of Exon, and by her had issue, William; which William, by Julian, daughter of Sir John de Valletort, of Clist St. Lawrence, was father of William, and John. This John who was of Bramford, wrote his name L'Espek, he m. Constance, the daughter of John de Esse, and had issue, John, Robert, and William; the two eldest died without issue. William Speke, (the name being by him thus first abbreviated,) was father of John Speke, who m. Joan, daughter and heiress of John Keynes, of Dowlish, in this county, and had issue by her John Speke, knight, which Sir John m. Alice, heiress of Sir Thomas Beauchamp, after whose death the family constantly resided at Whitelackington." Lysons in the "Magna Britannia," states that the Le Espeks, or Spekes, "have, for many centuries, been men of note in this county, (Somerset,) and Devon, John Speke, being a commissioner for administering the oaths, in the 12 of King HENRY VI., and George Speke, sheriff in the 34 Queen ELIZABETH.

Richard Espek, or Speke, descended from the famous WALTER LE ESPEC,* founder of three goodly abbies, Kirkham, and Rievaulx, in Yorkshire, and Warden in Bedfordshire was the first that fixed his seat at Whitelackington, and from him twenty generations had descended in Camden's time, in 1607.

* KIRKHAM, a monastery of canons regular, of St. Augustine, dedicated to the holy Trinity, was founded by Walter Espek, and Adelina, his wife, with the consent of King HENRY I. who endowed the same with divers lands, and tithes, and among other things, with the tithes of venison which he and his posterity should take, and of all fowl caught in and about his rivers, likewise the said Walter granted them the tenth penny, or title of the rents of his lands in Northumberland, Ailred, abbot of Rievaulx, gives him this character, that he was prudent in council, discreet in war, and a loyal subject. He had by Adelina, his wife, a son named Walter, who broke his neck hunting, to the great grief of his famous father, who having acquired a great estate by his several public employments, viz. General in War, &c., and being deprived of an heir, was at some loss how to dispose of it till by a consultation with his uncle, William de Espek, rector of the church at Garton, he was advised by him to make Christ his heir, at least to part of it, by building three priories, namely, this of Kirkham, where was one of his chief mansions, which he turned into this monastery, Rievaulx, in this county, and Warden, in Bedfordshire. The rest of his estates were left to his three sisters, of whom to Adeline, the youngest (married to Peter de Ros), was given the patronage of the priories of Kirkham, and Rievaulx, where he had his sepulture, as he, (Walter the Founder,) for some time before his death became a monk in this abbey of Rievaulx, died 18th Stephen 1153, Peter de Ros, of Hamlake, who had married one of his co-heirs Adeline, was also buried there. His descendant William de Ros, lord of Hamlake, in 1261, among other things, granted to the prior and convent of Kirkham, and their successors in lieu of the tithes of his hunting, three good wild beasts, as also the rent of £5, per annum, for other tithes, for which consideration the said canons did quit their claim of free chase in Hamlake. FRENCH, OF FRENCH PARK.

FRENCH, ARTHUR, esq. of French Park, in the county of Roscommon, late knight of that shire in parliament; succeeded his father in 1820.

Lineage.

The family of FRENCH, whose name was originally De Freigne, or De Fraxinis, is of great antiquity, and claims descent from Rollo, first Duke of Normandy. It was established in England by one of the companions in arms of the Conqueror, and in Ireland, by Sir Herbert, or Humphrey De Frayne, who accompanied Strongbow in his expedition against that country, and acquiring large possessions in the province of Leinster, settled at Ballymacuoge, in Wexford. He had two sons, Patrick and Nicholas, whose descendants early gained distinction and ranked amongst the most powerful of the Anglo-Norman barons. In 1332, Fulk de Fraxinis is mentioned as one of the good knights to whom the king looked for the maintenance of tranquillity in Ireland; in 1335, Fulk and Oliver De Freigne were summoned to attend EDWARD III. with arms and men in the war with Scotland; in 1342, Fulk de Freigne was rated at ten men at arms and twenty nobelars, to attend the king in the war with France; in 1344, Fulke de la Freigne was summoned to attend the Earl of Kildare, with Walter de Bermingham, Gerard de Roche, Eustace Le Poer, Edward De Burgo, Richard de Tuite, Miles De Courcy, &c.; in 1355, Sir Fulke de Freigne was security for the Earl of Desmond, and when Lionel, Duke of Clarence, came to Ireland, he knighted three of this family as among the most distinguished soldiers of that kingdom. In 1362, Patrick de la Freigne, commanded a large force under the Earl of Ormond in the war with the rebels, and in two years after, Sir John Freigne was fined £50 for refusing to attend parliament when summoned as a peer, in 1377. Stubber, then governor of the town. His son,

* A poem, entitled THE WHITE LADY, of considerable merit, written we believe by a lady of the French family, and printed for private circulation, gives the following singular tradition connected with this melancholy event: "John French, member for Roscommon, and Robert French, were drowned in the year 1775, in returning from Parkgate. Their wives were at French Park, awaiting their return. On the night of the day when they were expected, it blew a perfect hurricane, in the midst of which, the coach and six was distinctly heard to drive up to the door. As it stopped, a piercing shriek, louder than the storm, rung on the ears of the affrighted household. The wife of John French, called 'the Ban Tierna,' exclaimed, 'Tis the cry of the Banshee—my husband is drowned!' The door was opened—no carriage was seen—nor had any entered the gates. A few days after, the news arrived that the packet in which they were returning had been lost."

Family of Brydges.

It appears by ancient deeds and records belonging to the family, that in olden times, the name was spelt Brugge, Brudge, Brigge, Bridge, Bridges, and Brydges, and that, from time immemorial, it possessed lands and estates* at and near Bosbury, Brudge Solers, Staunton, Tiberton, Old Colwall, Ledbury, Priors Court, Ross, &c. Amongst the family evidences at Tiberton Court, a pedigree has been found, tracing the descent of the late Mr. Brydges through many generations and alliances of high respectability but it will suffice for our present purpose to commence with,

WILLIAM BRYDGES, esq. of Upleadon, in the parish of Bosbury, Herefordshire, who was born in 1584, died in 1627, and was buried in Bosbury Church, where a cenotaph appears to his memory, sculptured with his armorial bearings, amongst other monuments and tablets to members of his family. He m. Margaret, daughter of John Vaughan, esq. of Courtfield, in Monmouthshire, descended through the Vaughans of Tretower, Clyro, &c. from Sir Roger Vaughan, who married Gwladis, † daughter of Sir David Gam, and was slain with that distinguished warrior at Aziucourt. Margaret Brydges,

* The charitable donations of the family, charged on some of these estates, still in the family, now exist, but the mansion was burnt down nearly two centuries ago.

† Gwladis Ddu, daughter of Sir David Gam, and wife of Sir Roger Vaughan, slain at Azincourt, and mother of Sir Roger Vaughan, of Tretower, and of other sons, married secondly, Sir William Ap Thomas, father of Sir William Herbert, first Earl of Pembroke, the fast friend and adherent of EDWARD. From that time the houses of Gam, Vaughan, and Herbert became united, and called one another cousins to the ninth generation. See JONES'S Brecon.

‡ The armorial bearings of Moreidig Warwyn, after the death of her husband, removed to Larport's Court, Mordiford, Herefordshire, where she died, and in the church there is a monument, with her effigy in a kneeling posture, and the following epitaph :

Here lyeth ye body of Margaret, ye daughter of Vaughan, of Courtfield, in the county of Monmouth, gent. and the late wife and widow of William Brydges, of Upleadon, in the parish of Bosbury, in the county of Hereford, gent. who died at her prayers in the forme as you see her portrature in Larport's Court, upon ye 14 day of Apl. 1655.

Aged 80.

It is surmounted by a pediment with a shield, bearing the armorial ensigns of Brydges. "arg. a cross sa. charged with a leopard's face or, and a martlet for difference," impaling those of Vaughan, "party per pale az. and gu. three lions ramp. arg." as borne by that branch of the Vaughans for many generations. †

Edward, of Ross, gent. who m. and left two sons, viz.

Prince of South Wales, borne by all the Vaughans of Brecon, except Vaughan of Tyllyglass, a co. "Arg. three boys' heads, couped at the shoulders, with snakes entwined round their throats. pr. and for motto, they used "Innocentes Sicut pueri, sagaces sicut serpentes." Some of the Vaughans, however, and those of Courtfield, adopted for several generations the Herbert arms under the Vaughan crest ; and such appear on the monuments of Margaret Brydges.

§ The mansion was destroyed by fire about 170 years since : the estate descended to two sisters who married gentlemen of the name of Wynne, who changed their patronymic for Aubrey.

† This William rebuilt the mansion of Tiberton Court, near the scite of the ancient edifice. At the entrance gate is the chapel, which serves as a mausoleum for the family, many of whom are buried and have monuments therein, and also as a chapel of ease to Madley. It is surrounded by lofty oaks, (one of which measures twenty-four feet in circumference,) whose tops are "bald with dry antiquity." William Brydges also charged the mansion house in Widmarsh Street, Hereford, which was, for many years, appropriated to the reception of the judges, with an annual stipend to the chaplain of the county gaol, subject to which, it was, with its spacious gardens and bowling green, sold.

This bishop's widow, who was the daughter of John Broad, esq. of Devon, has another near, with armorial bearings, and an inscription detailing her sufferings during her husband's exile and the wars, which it seems she bore with great fortitude. At the College of Arms, however, is an ancient and different bearing assigned to Briggie, or Bridge, of Bosbury, viz. "Arg. a bend engr. sa. charged at the dexter point with a chaplet or," granted, probably, for some honourable exploit, but not adopted by the family generally, who preferred the more ancient ensigns.

Lineage.

JOHN JOHNSTONE, of Mylnefield, had with his ancestors the Johnstones of Newby, enjoyed the barony of Mylnefield, which he held probably from the Baron Johnstone, under whose family he served in the military expeditions to which they were frequently called out in those hostile times. KING JAMES was hardly seated on the throne of England, when the laird of Mylnefield felt the rod of oppression, which was then heavily laid upon the necks of the vassals to the Scots lords. He was called upon to produce the writings by which he held his lands: he gave the same answer which the Scots barons had formerly given to Robert Bruce, when the king for better reasons made the same demand. John of Mylnefield answered he held them by his sword, but that title having now lost its usual value and importance, he was compelled to surrender his lands to the Lord Johnstone, his chief and superior. In 1624 John Johnstone purchased of John Galloway, in Annan, the lands of Gallabank. His son and successor, GEORGE JOHNSTONE, m. Agnes Graham, of Dumfries, and had a very considerable sum of money settled upon him, which shews that John of Mylnefield was, for the times, a man of opulence. His only son,

Mr. Whitgreave, who is a magistrate and deputy lieutenant for Staffordshire, succeeded his father 19th January, 1816, and served the office of high sheriff in 1837.*

Lineage.

"It is a reverend thing," says Bacon, "to see an ancient castle or building not in decay, or to see a fair timber tree sound and perfect, how much more to behold an ancient family which hath stood against the waves and weathers of time!"

In that of Whitgreave precisely such a family as the philosopher contemplates and so beautifully describes is brought immediately before us; it has endured six hundred years at least in the uninterrupted possession of a fair estate, and the unsullied enjoyment of a fair name, full of honour as of years, and immortalized by the noble deed of preserving from his ruthless pursuers the royal refugee, after the disastrous issue of the battle of Worcester. The original abode of the Whitgreaves was at Burton, near Stafford, and they possessed in early times a village in the vicinity of their seat, from which they derived, or to which they gave, the name of Whitgreave.† The representative of the family, temp. HENRY VI. was

ROBERT WHITGREAVE, of Burton in Staffordshire, who died 27th of that reign, leaving two sons, HUMPHREY, his heir, and Thomas, of Shropshire. The elder,

HUMPHREY WHITGREAVE, esq. of Burton, living 1 HENRY VII. m. the daughter of Egerton, of Wrynhill, in the county of Chester, and was s. by his son,

He m. Joyce, daughter of Anthony Asley, esq. of Oslow, in Staffordshire, and had, with a daughter, Elizabeth, wife of Walter Colman, esq. of Canock, a son Robert, of Burton, living in 1614, who m. first, a daughter of Skrymshire, of Aqualate, and secondly, Jane, dau. of John Erdeswicke, esq. By the latter he left several children

- III. George.

- II. Margaret, d. unm.
- III. Elizabeth, m. to Ralph Bagnall, esq. of Barlaston, in Staffordshire.

* Mr. Whitgreave was the second Catholic sheriff of Staffordshire since the repeal of the penal laws. It is worthy of notice, that the clergyman who officiated as his chaplain during the shrievalty, was the Rev. Edward Huddleston, the collateral descendant of the loyal Father Huddleston, who with Mr. Whitgreave's ancestor, proved so instrumental in preserving the defeated and fugitive king (CHARLES II.) after the fatal battle of Worcester.

† In 1656 Sir Thomas Whitgreave, knt. was chosen, with Sir Charles Wolseley, bart. knight of the shire for Stafford.

iv. Alice, m. to Henry Grosvenor, esq. of Busbury, in Staffordshire.

Robert Whitgreave, of Burton, died 3rd December, 5 EDWARD VI. His second son,

By this lady, Mr. Whitgreave left, at his decease, in September, 1500, five sons, Henry, Edward, Humphrey, THOMAS, and Walter; of whom, the fourth, THOMAS WHITGREAVE, esq. was of Moseley, in the county of Stafford. He m. Alice, daughter and co-heir of Henry Pitt, esq. of Bushbury, in the same shire, and had issue, THOMAS, his heir.

Mr. Whitgreave d. in February, 1643, was buried at St. Mary's, Stafford, and s. by his only son,

THOMAS WHITGREAVE, esq. of Moseley, barrister-at-law, through whose devoted loyalty and careful contrivance, the life of King CHARLES II. was saved after the disastrous battle of Worcester: an authentic and most interesting memorial of his majesty's escape, and his concealment at Moseley, in the handwriting of the gentleman himself, is still preserved, and vividly characterizes those troubled times. The following is an exact transcript of the original manuscript: "King Charles the Second coming from Worcester fight, being Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1651, about sun-rising next morning, being Thursday, by the conduct of Mr. Charles Clifford, and his man Yates, arrived at White Ladies, where, as soon as night bee, he was vested of his apparell, his hayr cutt of, and habited like a country fellow; which being done, having taken leave of the Lords who attended him, was committed to the charge of the Pendrells. The Lords, &c. when most of them fled after the flying armye towards Newport, and so Northwards. The Lord Willmott was resolved to fly counterwards London, and by the guidance of John Pendrell gott to Mr. Huntbaches, of Winsford; from whence he sent the said Pendrell to Wolverhampton, and all his acquaintance thereabouts, to gett some Azilum for him; but not prevaying, as he was returning back, hee mett with Mr. Hudeleston (whom hee had seen formerly att White Ladies), with young Sir John Preston, to whose custody hee was committed by Mrs. Morgan, of Weston, grand mother to him, and sent to my mother's to table, for fear Pym should seize him going here, by the name of Jackson; for whose companions Mr. Huddleston was pleased to admitt Mr. Francis Reynolds and Mr. Tho. Palin, both nephews of mine, and to teach them with him, and asked him what news hee heard, who answered none but very good; which was, the King had gott the day att Worcester. But Pendrell answered, 'tis clean contrarie; and then related to him the sad news of his Majesties defeat att Worcester the day before: and how, that morning earlie, the King came to White Ladies, and was with some of his brothers in disguise, and that my Lord of Cleveland; but indeed Willmott hee left att the said Huntbaches, and was by him sent to Hampton, and to all his acquaintance thereabout, to gett some secrett place to secure him: which not being able to do, he asked Mr. Huddleston whether his landlord, being myself, would do him the favour to secure him; who replied, I will take you to him, and you shall see. Upon their arrivall, Mr. Huddleston told me all the sad news, and his busines with me; whereupon I said I would with speed wait on his Lordship; which I did accordingly: and when there, Mr. Huntbach brought mee to his chamber, whom, after I had condedo his Majesties and all his friends sad misfortunes, I told him I feared not to secure his Lordship if I could gett him privately to my house, which I thought the best way was for mee to wish Mr. Huntbach to bring him a by way to a close of mine, called The Moore, about midnight, where att that tyme I would wait for him, and take him to a friend's house not far of, wheare I feared not his securitie (to conceal from Mr. Huntbach my taking him home), where accordingly I wayted for their coming 2 or 3 howers; and then, supposing they had steared some other course, I returned home, where I found my Lord Willmott arrived, being conducted by the said Huntbach an other way along the publick ways and lanes, which when my Lord understood, he was much troubled. The next morning I sent a messenger well known to Col. Lane, to acquaint him that my Lord was with mee, but I had no conveniency for his horses, my howse lying to the open roade, and an howse over against itt, and therefore I desired him to entertain them (they being that night att one Evans house, a poor man nigh Mr. Huntbach), myself being better able to secure my Lord then them, who seemed very willing, and bidd the messenger bring them, and that att night he would himself wait on his Lordship, and that I should, about midnight expect his coming into a close called Allport's Leasow, wherein was a great drie pitt, covered with many trees, where the Colonel accordingly came; and having tied his horse in the said pitt, I brought him through my back side to my Lord's chamber, who, when they saw each other, they renewed their former acquaintance, the Colonel formerly having served in my Lord's brigade. The Colonel then invited my Lord to his house, as far more safe, my self, as hee stiled mee, a Papist, and more liable to searches; besides, his sister, the Lady Jane, had newlie gott a pass from Capt. Stone, governor of Stafford, for her self and man to go into the West, which might bee a convenient opportunity for his passage away. But the day before, I haveing shewn his Lordship a privacie in my house, formerly made in tymes of persecution, and in which, after the late unfortunate warre, I secured my self against the violent strict search of Capt. Stone's troop, his Lordship so approved of itt, for his securitie, that hee wisht hee had given 100,000 friends of his were with him; gave the Colonel many thanks for his kind offer, but for the present said hee was well pleased and satisfied with his present quarters, but desired him to keep the opportunity of his sister's pass, and his horses, till hee heard from him again, and so took leave of him, and I conducted back to his horses. This morning, being Friday, Jo. Pendrell came to my Lord, and staid all day with him, who att night sent him to White Ladyes, to enquire what was become of the King; who returned, and said he went from thence the night before to Madeley in Shropshire, with a design to gett over Severn, and so to steere for Wales (but Severn was so guarded hee could not pass, but was forc't to stay there all that night and next day in a barn of Mr. Woolfs); of whose removeall as soon as my Lord heard, hee resolved speedily to remove to Col. Lane's, and wisht me to send to him to have his horses sent for him that night, which I did, and they came accordingly; and so, after many thanks for all my care and kind entertainment, haveing dismissed Jo. Pendrell, hee went, and safelie arrived att the Colonel's the next morning. Mr. Huddleston and my self were walking in the long walk, and concluding in the afternoon to go to White Ladyes, to receive a perfect relation of all the transactions there, where unexpectedly wee saw Jo. Pendrell coming to us, and asking us where my Lord was, wee telling him he was gone from hence; hee replied, wee then are all undone, for att my return yesterday, there being no passage over Severn, the King was forc't, on Friday night, to come back to Boscobell, and there mett with Col. Carelos, and that they had no entertainment for him, neither knew they how to dispose of him, who grew very melancholly upon itt: but hearing by mee that I left my Lord here, hee sent mee to his Lordship, to gett a place for his security with him here. Whereupon Mr. Huddleston and myself went with Pendrell to the Colonel, hee being a stranger to him, and wee durst not write by him; where I being arrived, acquainted the Colonel that Pendrell came to us from some person of eminent qualitie, whose name he was not to discover, to bring him to my Lord; and therefore I came with him my self, that hee should not bee afraid to give admittance: whereupon the Colonel immediatly took him to my Lord, who, after some private conference and direccions for Mr. Huddleston and myself, hee sent him to us, to return with speed, and in the way homewards to acquaint us the person hee came from was the King, which his Lordship till then never discovered; and that hee desired myself to attend his coming that night, about an eleven of clock, att his usuall pitt in Alport's Leasow; and that Mr. Huddleston and self should appoint a place in my ground, whether hee and his brothers should bring the King, about 12 or one of clock that night: which wee accordingly did, and Pendrell speedily sent away to acquaint his Majestie. Att night, Mr. Huddleston and self, as soon as all the familie was gone to bedd, went to our severall stands, hee to a close called The Moor, and my self to the usuall drie pitt. My Lord came punctually according to his howre, whom I brought up to his chamber, and after the time prefixed, hee wisht mee to go to Mr. Huddleston, to see if they were come with his friend, as hee called him; but I returning, and telling him they were not, hee seemed much troubled, and apprehensive of his miscarriage; then, after a little while, he wished mee to go again, and to stay in the orchard expecting them, where, after a while, I saw them coming up the long walke, which I speedily acquainted his Lordship with, who wished mee to stay att the orchard door, and to shew him the way to the stays, where my Lord expected him with a light. When hee came to the door, with the Pendrells guarding him, he was so habitted like one of them, that I could not tell which was hee, only I knew all the rest. I could scarce putt of my hatt to him, but hee discovering by the light the stays, ymediatly went to them, where his Lordship expected him, and took him up to his chamber; then I took the Pendrells into the buttry, to eat and drink, that I might dispatch them away, and secure the house: bet ere they had done, my Lord sent Mr. Huddleston down to mee, desiring mee to come up, which accordingly I did, and coming att the chamber door, his Majestie and my Lord being both at a cupboard's head nigh to it, talking, his Lordship said to mee, this gentleman under disguise, whom I have hitherto concealed, is both your maister, mine, and the maister of us all, to whom wee all owe our duty and allegiance; and so, kneeling down, he gave me his hand to kiss, and bidd me arise, and said hee had received from my Lord such a character of my loyaltie and readiness in these dangers to assist him and his friends, that hee would never bee unkindful of mee or mine; and the next word after was, where is the private chamber my Lord tells me of? which being already prepared and shewed him, hee went into itt, and when come forth, said itt was the best place he was ever in. Then hee returning to his chamber, sitting down by the fier side, hee pulled off his shoes and stockings, and washed his feet, which were most sadly maled, and then pulled of likewise his apparell and shirt, which was of hurden cloth, and put him one of Mr. Huddleston's, and ther apparell of ours; then, after he had refreshed himself a little, by eating some biskett, and drinking a glass of wine, hee grew very chearfull, and said, if itt would please Almighty God to send him once more an army of 10,000 good and loyall soldiers and subjects, he feared not to expell all those rogues forth of his kingdom: then, after an howres discourse or more, he was desirous to repose himself on a bedd that night. The next day, the servants were not all forth to work, only the cook maide, a scablike, kept within to gett provision, as intended, for a relation of Mr. Huddleston's, who fled to him from Worcester fight: neither shee nor Mr. Huddleston's dollars admitted to his sight, nor having the least suspect who hee was, the boys having, during his stay, liberty to play, and to catch who were coming: whereupon Sir Preston one night att supper with the other boys said, eate hard, boys, for wee have been on the life guard and hard dutie these day (more trulie spoke then hee was are). In the morning, my Lord took my wayther to his Majestie, and acquainted him with shee was, who, kneeling down to kiss his hand, hee most graciously saluted, and when shee had brought up dinner, would have had her sitt down with him. Mr. Huddleston and myself wayting. In the afternoon I was sent to Hampton, to enquire after news, and my return wish by my Lord to send for horses that night from Col. Lane's, which hee did accordingly, and he returned with them. All that night his Majestie lay on his bed, Mr. Huddleston watching within, and myself without doors. The next morning, my studie-door being open, his Majestie was pleased, with Mr. Huddleston and myself, to go into itt, and for diversion to look through of it into the court and com'on roade, where he saw many of his soldiers, and some of his own regiment, which he knew, come up to the doors, some for provisions, and others for plaisters for their wounds. There he told us of the Scotts usage, and of his march from thence to Worcester, and of the fight there, and inquired of us how this country and the gentry stood affected, and who were against him: then looking upon severall books, hee saw Mr. Turbervill's Catechisme, and read a little of itt, said itt was a pretty book, and that hee would take itt with him. In the afternoon, reposing himself on his bed in the parlour chamber, and inclining to sleep, as I was watching att the window, one of the neighbours Isaw come running in, who told the maide, soldiers were coming to search, who thereupon presentlie came running to the stairs head, and cried, soldiers, soldiers are coming; which his Majestie hearing, presentlie started out of his bedd, and runn to his privacie, where I secured him the best I could, and then leaving him, went forth into the street to meet the soldiers, who were coming to search, whom, as soon as they saw, and knew who I was, were readie to pull mee in peeces, and take mee away with them, saying, I was come from Worcester fight; but after much dispute with them, and by the neighbours being informed of their false information, that I was not there, being very ill a great while, they lett mee goe; but till I saw them clearly all gone forth of the town, I returned not; but as soon as they were, I returned to release him, and did acquaint him with my stay, which hee thought long, and then hee began to bee very chearfull again. In the interim, whilst I was disputing with soldiers, one of them, called Southall, came into the fould, and asked a smith, as hee was shoeing horses there, if he could tell where the King was, and hee should have a thousand pounds for his payns, as the smith, called Holbeard, since severall times hath told mee and others. This Sowthall was the great priest-catcher, and Capt. Lane's and Mr. Vernon's true cavaleer in the plotting time. That afternoon my Lord sent word he would send Col. Lane with an horse for the King about midnight, and that I must expect him att the usuall place. At night his Majestie wisht Mr. Huddleston to shew him our oratory, saying, hee knew hee was a priest, and hee needed not fear to own itt to him, for, if itt pleased God to restore him to his kingdom, wee should never need more privacies; who having seen itt, said itt was a very decent place. Afterwards I went to expect the Colonel, and took a nephew, Mr. Fra. Reynolds, with mee, to hold the horses whilst the Colonel went up to the house with mee: who arriving, I brought him to the orchard stile, where he would stay and expect till we brought his Majestie to him; of which I acquainting his Majestic, he sent mee for my mother to come to take leave of him, who bringing with her some raysings, almonds, and other sweetmeats, which shee presenting to him, some whereof hee was pleased to eat, and some took with him: afterwards, wee all kneeling down, and praying Almighty God to bless, prosper, and preserve him, hee was pleased to salute my mother, and give her thanks for his kind entertainment; and then giving his hand to Mr. Huddleston and my self to kiss, saying, if itt pleased God to restore him, hee would never be unmindfull of us, hee took leave and went, conducted with Mr. Huddleston and self, to the Colonel, and thence to his horses expecting him, where hee having gott on horsback, wee kneeled, and kiss his hand again, offering all our prayers for his safetie and preservation, Mr. Huddleston putting on him a cloak of his, to keep him from cold and wett, which afterwards, by the Colonel's order, was sent to mee, wee took leave."

Lineage.

For the genealogy of Admiral Irby, (who is younger brother of the present Lord Boston) we refer to BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage; but as the estate of Boyland Hall, together with others in the county of Norfolk, was acquired by him in marriage with his first wife, and inherited by her from the family of Garney's, we shall here give some account of that ancient family.

The first of the name, which we have met with on record, is Robert Garnoise, who is there stated to have "held many lands in Chembenhall, in the county of Suffolk" 6 RICHARD I. 1194. This is probably the same place as that now called Chipenhall, in the immediate vicinity of Laxfield, at which latter place the family seems for many ages to have resided.

ROBERT GARNEYSE, of Laxfield, by charter without date, but about the time of King JOHN, granted to the monks of the neighbouring abbey of Sibton, in the county of Suffolk, thirty acres of land in Laxfield.

WILLIAM, son of Robert Garneyse, of Laxfield, by charter, also without date, but about the time of HENRY III., confirmed his father's gift to the monks of Sibton.

THOMAS GARNEYSE, another son of Robert, granted to the church of Sibton, a rent charge of 8*d.* per annum, issuing out of lands in Dennington, county of Suffolk. He was living 24 HENRY III., 1239.

RICHARD-GARNEYSE, son of the last mentioned William, about the beginning of the reign of EDWARD I., gave a messuage in Stradbroc, to Alice, daughter of William de Redshall.

From this time, the name continually occurs in records relating to Laxfield and its vicinity, but no connected pedigree of the family has hitherto been traced to a period earlier than the reign of EDWARD III., when the name of

ROBERT GARNEYS, of Heveningham, in the county of Suffolk, very frequently occurs. He was probably the first of his family who acquired the manor of Ros Hall, in the parish of Beccles, in the same county, and dying on the 14th May, 1411, 12 HENRY IV., left by Catharine Brooke, his wife, (who d. 1405) two sons, PETER, his heir.

William, of Gelderton, in the county of Norfolk. He m. Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Sir Ralph Bigot, knt. of Stockton, in the same county, (representative of a younger branch of the earls of Norfolk, of that name), by Elizabeth his wife, daughter and co-

* Silvester died before the first coronation of King HENRY II., 19th December, 1154, seized of one-third of a knight's fee in Kenton and its vicinity in the county of Suffolk, and Alice his niece, wife of Ivo de Kenton, was found by inquisition, 30th October, 6 RICHARD I. 1194, to be his heir.

Geoffry, son of Silvester de Kenetune, gave lands in the town of Walpole, county of Suffolk to Geoffry de Bleis, temp. King JOHN.

Sir Ivo de Keneton claimed free warren in his manor of Kenton, 14 EDWARD I., was knight of the shire for the county of Suffolk, 18 EDWARD I., 1290, and summoned to perform military service against the Scots, 29 EDWARD I., 1301 He d. before 7 EDWARD II. 1313, and

Sir Nigel de Kenton, was his son and heir, and aged 40 years and upwards 2nd January, 1313. He was chief arrayor of the hundred of Loes, in the county of Suffolk, 24th April, 19 EDWARD II. 1326, and by his wife Matilda, he had issue, besides Robert, John, and Thomas, Ivo de Kenton, his eldest son and heir, on whom his father on his marriage with Agnes, daughter of Adam Tastard, of Cransfield, county of Suffolk, anno 8 EDWARD III. 1334-5, settled the manor of Kenton, &c. in tail. He had a second wife, Mar-heir of Sir Thomas Mortimer, knt. of Attleborough, in the same county, whose ancestors had under that title been barons of the realm, and dying in 1424, was succeeded by Richard Garneys, esq. of Gelderton, his eldest son and heir, who d. s. p. about 1447.

The elder son,

PETER GARNEYS, esq. of Ros Hall, m. Anne, daughter and co-heir of Sir Ralph Ramsay, knt. of Kenton Hall, in Suffolk, with whom he obtained the manor of Kenton,* which thenceforth became the principal residence of the family. He d. in 1451, having devised his manor of Ros Hall to his second son Edmund, in whose posterity it continued several generations.

The eldest son,

THOMAS GARNEYS, esq. of Kenton Hall, m. Margaret daughter and co-heir of Sir Hugh Francis, knt. of Gifford's Hall, in Wykhambrook, in the county of Suffolk, by whom (who after his death m. Thomas Preston, esq. of Isleham, in Cambridgeshire) he had three sons,

Thomas, who d. young and unm.

JOHN.

Richard, of Mendlesham, in the county of Suffolk, who m. Elizabeth, daughter and heir of William Toppefield, esq. of Gissingham, in the same county. He was the first of this family who possessed BOYLAND HALL, which he purchased, and dying 14th May, 1515, was succeeded by his son,

JOHN GARNEYS, esq. of Boyland Hall, who d. 18th Dec. 1553, leaving by Ursula, his wife, dau. of Thomas Berney, of Redham, in Norfolk,

RICHARD GARNEYS, esq. of Boy-land, who was living a widow, 29 EDWARD III. Ivo de Kenton, son and heir of the last Ivo, d. before 44 EDWARD III. 1370, seized inter alia of the manor of Kenton, and had issue, Robert de Kenton, who was under age at his father's death, and was living, 3 RICHARD II. 1378.

Alice de Kenton, (probably sister and) heir of Robert, m. Sir Roger Wyllysham, knt. who was knight of the shire for Norfolk, 6 RICHARD II. 1382, and d. 1383.

Alice de Wyllysham, their sole daughter and heir, m. Sir Ralph Ramsay, knt. sheriff of Suffolk, 9 HENRY IV. They were both living 18 RICHARD II., and were succeeded in their estates of Kenton, by Ann, their daughter and co-heir, who m. Peter Garneys, of Beccles, esq. as stated in the text.

Hence the manor of Kenton descended to Wentworth Garneys, esq. the last heir male of this family, and on his death the greater part of it became the property of Lady Colt, his eldest surviving sister and co-heir, by whose grandchild, Mary, wife of John Bond, esq. of Grange, county of Dorset, and Mary-Alice, wife of John Wentworth, esq. of Forrest Hall, in Essex, it was sold in 1772, and 1774.

land Hall, who built the present mansion house there. He married Margery, daughter of James Tyrrell, esq. of Columbine Hall, in Suffolk, and dying s. p. 3rd January, 1586, was succeeded in his estates, by virtue of a settlement previously executed by him, by his kinsman, Nicholas Garneys, esq. of Kenton Hall.

The abovementioned Thomas Garneys, of Kenton Hall, died 12th December, 1458, and was succeeded by his eldest son.

JOHN GARNEYS, esq. of Kenton Hall, who was born in 1454. He espoused Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Sulyard, knt. of Wetherden Hall, in Suffolk, chief justice of England, anno 2 RICHARD III. and d. 11th June, 1524, and his widow, 2nd April, 1539.

ROBERT GARNEYS, esq. of Kenton Hall, eldest son and heir of John, succeeded to the estates at the decease of his father, and married Anne, second daughter and co-heir of Thomas Bacon, esq. of Baconsthorp, in the county of Norfolk, who d. in 1558, and of whom he had, besides other children,

JOHN, of Spexall, in Suffolk, his eldest son, who died v. p. leaving by Anne, his wife, daughter of Thomas Rookwood, esq. of Eurtun, in the same county, amongst other children,

THOMAS, who s. his grandfather.

Robert Garneys aforesaid died 2nd August, 16, and was s. at Kenton by his grandson, THOMAS GARNEYS, esq. of Kenton Hall, eldest son of John Garneys, esq. of Spexall, as before stated, died v. p. His wife Frances, daughter of Sir John Sulyard, of Wetherden Hall aforesaid, by whom had an only child and heir, ELIZABETH GARNEYS, who was three years old at her father's death. She married Philip Strelly, of Strelly, in Nottinghamshire, who d.

MES I. On the decease of Thomas Garneys, esq. without issue male, which occurred on the 20th December, 1566, the ten estates devolved, by virtue of an entail, on his brother,

By his wife, daughter of Thomas Cleve, esq. of Irby, in Norfolk, he had issue, of which CHARLES, the eldest son, succeeded his father at Kenton and Boyland Halls, and Cleve. His sixth son, m. Ann, daughter of John Jolly, of Southwold, and was ancestor of Charles

He d. 30th Jan. 1657, and was s. by his son,

JOHN GARNEYS, esq. of Boyland Hall aforesaid, and of Somerleyton Hall and Kenton Hall, in Suffolk, whose estates were greatly augmented by the acquisition of those of his mother's family. He was twice married. By his first wife, Ann, daughter of William Rugg, of Felmingham, in Norfolk, he had issue, THOMAS, who succeeded his father in the Somerleyton estates, which he sold, and d. s. p.

iv. MARGARET, eventually co-heir of her brother, married Sir William Gostlin, knt. and died 23rd January, 1723, leaving issue.

v. MARTHA, of whom hereafter.

The son and successor,

MARTHA, fourth surviving daughter of John Garneys, esq. and sister of Wentworth Garneys, espoused Robert Raworth, esq. of London, and dying 22nd August, 1694, left

JOHN RAWORTH, esq. who succeeded his maternal uncle at Boyland Hall, and by Ann, his wife, daughter of Caleb Frienfield, had an only child and heir,

Lineage.

RICHARD ATKINS, esq. the first of the family who settled in Ireland, of ancient Yorkshire descent, obtained a grant of lands in the county of Kerry, between the years 1640, and 1660, which he soon afterwards alienated, having determined to return to England. For which, his native country, he had set out accompanied by his wife, but the lady, whose family were settled in Kerry, desirous of remaining amongst her relatives, had influence enough to persuade him, when sojourning for a night at a small village between Mallow and Buttevant, to purchase several adventures, which were confirmed to him as a loyal subject, when Sir Peter Courthope, was governor of Munster, about 1660. The East and West Creaghkerries were the lands so acquired, and were named Fountainville by Mr. Atkins, they are situated in the barony of Fermoy, and county of Cork, midway between Mallow, Buttevant, and Doneraile. This Richard was second son of Atkins, of Bredding,* in Yorkshire, although his descendants settled in Ireland have invariably borne the arms of the Atkins of Yelverton, in Norfolk. He married a daughter of — Fuller, esq.† of the Sandbanks, in the county of Kerry, (but

* The Atkins family of Yorkshire were of the ancient family of Atkins in Monmouthshire, and at the period of which we are now treating, were rather numerous, in the former county, the following persons were all allied to Mr. Atkins, but in what degree is not now known, viz.

Jonathan Atkins, of Hinderskill, Yorkshire, was one of those persons who compounded for their estates in 1665; see the List of those persons who did so, he compounded for £70. Redding is a small village in the parish of Tawston, in Yorkshire, and situated between Harrowgate and Knaresborough, and near Fountain Abbey.

Samuel Atkins, of Yorkshire, was tried with several other gentlemen, and acquitted, as not being accessory to Sir Edmondsbury Godfrey's murder, see page 369 of Kennett's History of England, vol. iii.

Of the Atkins family in England at this period, were the following,

Sir Thomas Atkins (son of John of King's Lynn, in Norfolk) knt. alderman of Norwich, afterwards an alderman of London, Sheriff of London in 1637, and lord mayor in 1645: he was M.P. for the said city, from 1647 to 1658, and colonel of the city militia: he left a son, Thomas, of Windsor, Berkshire, in 1657.

In Sommers's Tracts, Alderman Thomas Atkins' speech is mentioned, which he delivered on Thursday, January 7th, 1649, at the solemn thanksgiving to Cromwell, &c. and at pages 582, and at 589, vol. iv. is given the following account of alderman Atkins, He was a busy stickler for independency and republicanism, and the principal tool by which the Rump Parliament managed the common council of London, his speeches are to be found at the aforesaid pages. The Hosannah by him, also June 7th, 1649, he was rather cross in his language, and very fond of hospitality and good cheer.

MACLEOD, OF RASAY.

MACLEOD, JOHN, esq. of Rasay, North Britain, b. 27th March, 1806; m. 1st September, 1835, Mary, only child of Major-General Sir Donald Macleod, K.C.B. of the H. E. I. C. S. and has a daughter, Mary-Julia-Hastings.

Macleod of Rasay, "Chief of the Macleods Siol Torquil," succeeded his father in October, 1823.

Lineage.

LEOD, ancestor of the Macleods, son of Olaus the Black, and brother of Magnus, the last king of Man and the Isles;* was the fifth generation of that race, in a direct male line. He was young at his father's death, and was brought up in the house of Paul, son of Boke, sheriff of Skye, who had been a constant friend of his father's, and a man of the greatest power and authority in those parts. Leod lived in the time of Alexander III. King of Scotland. He succeeded his father in the patrimonial estate of Lewis and its dependencies, consisting of the Baronies of Assynt, Coigach, Castle Leod, Strathpeffer, Rasay, Edrachullis, Gairloch, Lochbroom, Strathannan, &c.; and got from the said Paul the lands of Herries, and from his grandfather, the Earl of Ross, a part of the Barony of Glenelg. He married the daughter and only child of Macrailld Armine, a Danish knight, who had considerable property in the islands, by whom he got the lands of Mogenish, Bracadale, Durinish, Lindell, Dunvegan, Vaterness, and part of Troterness, in the Isle of Skye. Leod had two sons, TORQUIL, who inherited the paternal estate of Lewis, &c.

TORMOD, who had for his portion Herries and Dunvegan.

These brothers, Torquil and Tormod, were called, "Macleods," or "Sons of Leod," and hence the surname of the family. The descendants of Torquil, are distinguished by the appellation of "Siol Torquil," or "Race of Torquil," and "Macleods of Lewis," and their descendants. Those of Tormod, by that of "Siol Tormod," or "Race of Norman," and "Macleods of Herries," and their descendants.

These have always been two distinct clans,

* GODFRED, surnamed "Crown," or "the White Hand," son of Harold the Black, King of Norway, was the undoubted founder of the dynasty of the Norwegian kings of Man and the Isles; the ancestors of the clan Macleod.

each independent of the other, and following their respective chiefs.

It is still disputed which was the elder; the seniority and precedence are claimed by the descendants of both; and, as it is impossible, at this distance of time, to ascertain precisely to whom the precedence ought to be accorded; all that can be done, is to state the arguments brought forward by each. The following are those of the Siol Torquil:

Torquil inherited the paternal estate of Lewis, with all its dependencies, viz.—The Baronies of Assynt, Coigach, Castle Leod, Strathpeffer, Strathannan, Lochbroom, Edrachullis, Gairloch, Rasay, &c.; and also the lands of Troterness and Vaterness, in the Isle of Skye. These lands, with the exception of Troterness and Vaterness, formed the original, and by far the greater portion of Leod's estate. Torquil carried the armorial bearings of the Kings of Man and the Isles, his paternal ancestors, and these are carried by his descendants until this day.

In the records of Denmark, there is mention made of the Macleods of Lewis, being recognised in that country as the lineal descendants, in the male line, of the Norwegian Kings of Man.

The precedence and seniority are given to the Lewis family, by Sir David Lindsay, of the Mount, lord Lyon king at arms, in the reigns of JAMES IV. and V. and Queen Mary; and also by Buchanan, in his History of the Clans, published in 1723.

It has always been an unvaried tradition in the Rasay family, that Torquil was the elder son, which tradition is confirmed by the family papers.

The Siol Tormod, on the contrary, say that Tormod had the greater portion of his father's property; however, a glance at any map of the country, will prove that this was not the case. Indeed, in an old paper, now in possession of Macleod of Rasay, it is said, that Herries itself was the only portion given to Tormod by his father.

The Siol Tormod, did at one time carry the armorial bearings of the Kings of Man, but they have since changed these for others. It may here be observed, the Siol Tormod have never said at what time, or for what reason, they effected this change. Now both these ought to have been recorded, in order to account for the alteration. In several public acts, the name of "Macleod of Herries," is placed before that of "Macleod of Lewis." This may be the case, but it is certain, that Sir David Lindsay, (who was undoubtedly the most learned herald of his day, and lived in a time when both families flourished,) would not have given the precedence to Macleod of Lewis, unless he was convinced it was his by right. The Macleods of Herries, designate themselves, "Macleods of Macleod," but this is a title of comparatively modern date, having been first assumed by Roderick Macleod, seventeenth Laird of Herries and Dunvegan, in the year 1693, or 1694; when, though perhaps not the most ancient, they certainly were the most powerful branch of the clan Macleod. The claims of each branch of the clan Macleod for seniority and precedency, having now been stated, it remains for the reader to form his own opinion as to their respective merits.

To proceed with the history of the Siol Torquil.

Leod, first Baron of Lewis, died about the year 1300, and was succeeded, in his paternal estates, by his son, TORQUIL, second Baron of Lewis, who married Dorothea, daughter of William, Earl of Ross. He was a faithful adherent of Robert Bruce, in whose reign he died, and was succeeded by his son.

RODERICK, third Baron of Lewis. He married a daughter of Mackintosh, of that Ilk, and dying in the reign of DAVID II. was succeeded by his son, TORQUIL, fourth Baron of Lewis, who received a charter from DAVID II. confirming to him the lands of Assynt. He married Margaret Nicholson, by whom he got a considerable accession to his estate, and had a son, RODERICK, his heir.

He died in the reign of ROBERT II. and was succeeded by his son,

RODERICK, fifth Baron of Lewis. He m. Margaret Macdonald, daughter of the Lord of the Isles, by whom he had two sons and a daughter, TORQUIL, his heir.

Norman, to whom his father gave the lands of Assynt, in vassalage, and who was ancestor of the Macleods of of Assynt.

Margaret, married to William Mackintosh, of that Ilk.

He died in the reign of JAMES I. and was succeeded by his son,

TORQUIL, sixth Baron of Lewis, who died in the reign of JAMES II. leaving a son and successor,

RODERICK, seventh Baron of Lewis. He married Mary, daughter of Macleod of Herries, and had three sons, Roderick, Torquil, and Malcolm. The eldest, Roderick, being killed in the battle of the Bloody Bay, in 1480, where he was fighting in the cause of John, Earl of Ross, and Lord of the Isles. The second son, TORQUIL, succeeded his father about 1495, as eighth Baron of Lewis. He married the Lady Catherine Campbell, sister of Colin, first Earl of Argyle. He was appointed heritable baillie of Troterness, which was confirmed to him by a charter, under the great seal, dated Kilkinan, in Kintyre, 20th June, 1498; but this charter was rendered null, by a general revocation in 1499, and Troterness was let by the commissioners of the crown, to Ranald Bane Allanson, of Moydert. Donald Dubh, whose claims to his inheritance, on the death of his grandfather, John, Earl of Ross, and Lord of the Isles, were disputed by the government, found in Torquil a faithful and powerful friend. Indeed, he was too much so for his own interest, for in the year 1506, being charged under penalty of high treason, to deliver up the person of Donald Dubh, and having refused to comply, he was formally denounced a rebel, and all his estates forfeited. The estates continued in possession of the crown until 1511, when they were restored to one of the old family, in the person of

MALCOLM, ninth Baron of Lewis, the brother of Torquil, the last chief, whose son, John Mac Torquil, the government disinherited. The island of Lewis, and the other possessions of the family, were confirmed to Malcolm, by a charter from JAMES V. dated 29th June, 1511. This Malcolm married Christina Urquhart, daughter of Thomas, Baron of Cromarty, by whom he had three sons, RODERICK, afterwards Baron of Lewis.

MALCOLM, to whom his father gave the lands of Rasay, Roun, and ball Gairloch, in vassalage, and whose ancestor of the MACLEODS of Rasay known by the name of Siol Vre Gallacallum, or "Sons of Malcolm."

Norman, ancestor of the Macleods of Edrachullis.

Malcolm dying about the year 1515, was succeeded by his nephew,

JOHN MAC TORQUIL, tenth Baron of Lewis, who forcibly obtained possession of the lands of Lewis, and the command of the Siol Torquil, which he retained during his life, to the exclusion of his cousin, Roderick, the heir of Malcolm. It is not known to what he was married, but he had an only daughter, his heiress, who was married to Donald Gorme of Sleat, heir male to the lords of the Isles, after Donald Dubh, who had many years been in captivity. John Mac Torquil dying in 1538, Roderick entered an agreement with Donald Gorme, by which the latter agreed to give up all his claims to the Lewis, and allow Roderick to take possession of that and the rest of the inheritance bequeathed him by his father, Malcolm, on condition that he, Roderick, would assist him against Macleod of Herries and the Siol Tormod, and also co-operate with him, in his endeavours to obtain the Earldom of Ross, and the Lordship of Isles. On these conditions Roderick took possession of the Lewis in 1538. This

RODERICK, eleventh Baron of Lewis, was known in history by the name of Old Rory, having lived to the age of nearly one hundred years. In May, 1539, he, with his clan, accompanied Donald Gorme to Skye, where they laid waste the lands of Macleod of Herries. From Skye they passed over into Ross Shire, where after ravaging the district of Kinloch, they proceeded to Kintail, with the intention of surprising Mackenzie's Castle of Elandonan. Here, however, Donald Gorme was killed, and the Macleods, discouraged by the event, returned home, after burning all the boats belonging to the Kintail men. In 1540, JAMES V. arrived with a powerful fleet to quiet the highlanders, and subdue the turbulent chiefs. Roderick, with his principal clansmen, were made prisoners in Lewis, and obliged to accompany the other captive chiefs to Edinburgh, where they were all forced to remain until they gave up hostages as a pledge of their future good behaviour. JAMES V. died soon after, and the highland prisoners were all released by the Earl of Arran in 1543. Roderick married first, Janet, daughter of John Mackenzie, of Kintail. The alleged issue of this marriage was a son, "Torquil," afterwards, from his residence among his mother's relations in Strathcoanon, surnamed "Connanach." But this Torquil Connanach, was never acknowledged by Roderick, who said he was the son of the Breve, or Judge of the Island, and in consequence, divorced his mother, Janet Mackenzie. Roderick married secondly, Barbara Stewart, daughter of Andrew, Lord Evandale and Ochiltree. This marriage took place in 1541, and by this lady, Roderick had a son, also called Torquil, but who was surnamed "Oighre," or "The Heir," to distinguish him from Torquil Connanach, whose claims, as heir of the Lewis, being supported by the Mackenzies, a feud between them and the Siol Torquil ensued. In the year 1566, Torquil Oighre, a young chief of great promise, was, with many of his attendants, drowned in a tempest, when sailing from Lewis to Skye. As he left no male issue, this event gave fresh spirit to the supporters of Torquil Connanach, and also to that individual himself, who had now married a daughter of Macdonnell of Gleungarry. In the year 1571, Roderick was made prisoner by his son, Torquil Connanach, who detained him four years in captivity, at the Castle of Stornoway. Being brought, while a prisoner, before the Earl of Mar, then regent, and his privy council, Roderick was compelled to resign his estate into the hands of the crown, taking a new destination of it to himself in life rent, and, after his death, to Torquil

Connanach, as his son and heir apparent. On his liberation, the first act of Roderick was to revoke all that he had done, when he was a captive, on the ground of coercion, and of the undutiful conduct of Torquil Connanach. Fresh dissensions followed this revocation, and, at length, in 1576, both father and son were summoned to Edinburgh, where in presence of the regent Morton and the privy council, they agreed to forget their mutual animosities. Torquil Connanach was again recognised as heir apparent of the Lewis, and in that character received from his father Coigach, and several other lands, for his support during the life of the latter. In 1585, these quarrels were again renewed with greater violence than ever. Roderick had recently married, for his third wife, a sister of Lauchlan Maclean, of Dowart, and by that lady, was father of two sons; the elder named Torquil Dubh, or "The Black," and the younger, Tormod. He had likewise five natural sons, all come to man's estate, three of whom, Donald, Ruair, Oig, and Niele, joined with their father, when that chief once more disinherited Torquil Connanach, and named Torquil Dubh as his heir. The other natural sons, Tormod Uigach and Murdoch, attached themselves to Torquil Connanach. Tormod Uigach was slain by his brother Donald, who again was seized by Murdoch, and delivered to Torquil Connanach for punishment; Donald, however, contrived to escape, and, in his turn, seized Murdoch, who was then imprisoned by old Roderick in the Castle of Stornoway, in Lewis. Torquil Connanach took up arms to relieve Murdoch, and justified himself for his hostility to his father, by alleging that his own life was in danger from the latter. Having besieged the Castle of Stornoway, and taken it, he not only liberated Murdoch, but again took his father prisoner. He likewise carried off all the charters and papers of the family, which he afterwards delivered to Mackenzie of Kintail. Before leaving Lewis, Torquil Connanach sent for his son, John, a youth who had been brought up by the Earl of Huntly, and made him keeper of the Castle of Stornoway, in which Roderick the old chief was kept prisoner. John continued in possession of the castle and island for some time, when he was attacked by Ruair Oig, his natural uncle, who killed him, and once more restored old Roderick to his estate and liberty, both which he enjoyed during the rest of his turbulent days. On hearing of the death of his son, John, Torquil Connanach, by the advice of the Mackenzies, apprehended and executed Donald, his natural brother, whom they supposed knew the designs of Ruair Oig. Thus was the Siol Torquil weakened by private dissensions, exposed to fall a prey, as it did soon afterwards, to the growing power of the Mackenzies. Old Roderick, whose life had been one continued scene of troubles, died about the year 1590. He was succeeded by his son, Torquil Dubh, as TORQUIL, twelfth Baron of Lewis, whose title, however, was disputed by Torquil Connanach. The island estates were all held by Torquil Dubh, whilst the mainland estates were in possession of Torquil Connanach, whose right however, to the whole, had recently been acknowledged by government. Torquil Connanach had now lost both his sons, John, the eldest, having been killed at Stornoway, and the second, Neill, dead of a fever. He had married his eldest daughter, Margaret, to Sir Roderick Mackenzie, of Tarbat, brother of Mackenzie of Kintail, and ancestor of the Earls of Cromarty. He now threw himself entirely into the hands of the Mackenzies, to whom, in the end, he even conveyed the barony of the Lewis, so far as writings could accomplish this object. The estate of Lochbroom, and a great deal more of the Lewis property, was given by Torquil Connanach to his daughter, Margaret, as a dowry; and her husband joined the Lewis arms with his own. In the mean time, Torquil Dubh, married a sister of MacLeod of Herries, and proceeded to ravage the lands of Coigach and Lochbroom, openly announcing his intention of keeping by force what he had hitherto possessed. As this young chief was much beloved by his clan, and was followed by 700 or 800 men, he was enabled for some time, to set his rival at defiance, in spite of the power of the Mackenzies. At length his enemies made a complaint against him to the privy council, of which body, unfortunately, Mackenzie of Kintail was a member. Torquil was summoned before the council, but naturally hesitating to trust himself, in a court, where his enemy Kintail had so much power, he was denounced as a rebel, and being soon afterwards treacherously seized, by the breve or judge of Lewis, and delivered by him to Mackenzie, Torquil Dubh was, without further ceremony, beheaded in July, 1597.

Torquil Dubh left three young sons, Roderick, William, and Torquil, whose cause in the Lewis was supported by the Macleans, and Macleods of Herries, and also by their natural uncle Niell, who took the command of the Siol Torquil, during the minority of young Roderick. The cause therefore of Torquil Connanach and the Mackenzies appeared at this time to have gained little by the death of Torquil Dubh. At this same time the Mackenzies tried to seize the whole lands of Gairloch from the Siol Vic Gillicallum, of Rasay, which renewed an ancient feud between these two families. In the year 1598, an act was passed by the government, by which all chiefs, and others, possessing, or pretending any right to, property of any kind in the Highlands and Isles, were to show their various title deeds before the lords of the Exchequer, on the 15th May, 1598. Absolute forfeiture was the penalty of disobedience to this act, and unfortunately, the Macleods of Lewis were amongst the number of those who did not obey. In May, 1598, the island of Lewis was solemnly forfeited to the crown, and given by JAMES VI. to a company of lowland adventurers, whose object was to civilize the isles, according to plans suggested by the king. Now nothing could more displease Lord Kintail, than the settlement of these adventurers in Lewis, for his greatest wish was to secure that island for himself and his own family. It was for this reason, and not for any love he bore Torquil Connanach, he had hitherto interfered so much in the affairs of the Siol Torquil, and unhappily, the dissensions in that clan, added to the simplicity of Torquil Connanach, greatly favoured his designs. He now therefore used every means in his power to annoy the adventurers, in order that they might give up the Lewis, but he did this only secretly, for fear of incurring the displeasure of government. In October, 1599, the adventurers first landed in Lewis, where they completed a town, where they encamped. They were much opposed and disturbed by Niell and Murdoch, the two surviving natural sons of old Roderick; but about the year 1600, these two brothers quarrelled with each other, and the adventurers taking advantage of this, offered to Niell Macleod, that if he would deliver up his brother Murdoch to them, they would give a portion of the island to himself, and also obtain for him a pardon for his past conduct. Niell accepted these terms, delivered up his brother to the adventurers, and accompanied them himself to Edinburgh, where he received a full pardon. In the mean time Murdoch Macleod was executed at St. Andrew's, and owing to some confessions made by him, and of complaints by the adventurers, Lord Kintail was apprehended, and committed prisoner to Edinburgh Castle, whence, however, he contrived to escape without a trial, by means of his friend, the lord chancellor. The adventurers returned to Lewis with Niell Macleod, their prospects much improved by their alliance with the most powerful man in the island; however, soon after their return, some injury done by one of them to Niell, embroiled them once more with the latter. Mackenzie, who since the agreement between Niell and the adventurers, had almost despaired of frustrating the enterprise, no sooner heard of this quarrel, than he hastened to profit by it. For this purpose he released Torquil.

or Norman Macleod, the younger brother of Torquil Dubh, and only surviving legitimate son of old Roderick, whom he had detained captive for many years, without a warrant. He sent this young man to the Lewis, promising him secretly great assistance, if he would attack the adventurers in concert with Niell. Tormod arrived in the Lewis in 1601, and was received with joy by all the Siol Torquil, of which he took the command, the chief, his nephew, being still a child. Encouraged by the reception he met with from the clan, and guided by the advice and experience of Niell, Tormod attacked the camp of the adventurers, forced it, burned the fort, killed many of the men, and at last, obliged the principal adventurers to capitulate, and finally to leave the Lewis. Tormod continued undisturbed in the Lewis from 1601 until 1605, during which time he commanded the Siol Torquil, in the capacity of guardian to the chief, his nephew Roderick, who was a minor. In the summer of 1605, the adventurers once more returned to the Lewis, where they landed with a considerable force, and immediately sent a message to Tormod, offering that if he would submit to them, they would take him to London, and not only procure his pardon from the king, JAMES VI. but would suffer him, through his friends, to sue for his majesty's favour, and for means of subsistence. Much against the advice of Niell, Tormod agreed to these terms, and declined to risk a battle against the adventurers and their forces. Niell, however, with those who adhered to him, still held out, and continued to harass the adventurers for some years. According to their promise, the adventurers sent Tormod Macleod to London, where he made such progress in convincing JAMES of the injustice of a grant to the lowlanders, of what was by right his nephew's, that the adventurers became alarmed he would procure its recall. They therefore used all their influence against him, and some of them being of the royal household, they prevailed so far, that he was sent to Edinburgh Castle, where he was detained for ten years. The king then gave him liberty to go to Holland, to the service of Maurice, Prince of Orange; and he died in that country without heirs.

In the year 1607, the Lewis adventurers having sustained many annoyances from the persevering hostility of Niell Macleod, who was assisted by Macniel of Barra, the captain of Clanranald, and Macleod of Herries, began to be weary of their undertaking; and reduced and dispirited by the frequent attacks made upon them, they at last forsook the island, and returned to their own homes. Lord Kintail, who had all along wrought to this end, now began to stir in the matter. By means of his friend, the lord chancellor, he passed under the great seal, a gift of the Lewis to himself, in virtue of the resignation made formerly in his favour, by Torquil Connauch. The adventurers, however, were not so unmindful of their own interest, as to allow this to pass unchallenged. They complained to his majesty, who was highly incensed against Kintail, and forced him to resign his right thus surreptitiously obtained. Lewis being now once more at the disposal of the king, he granted it anew to three persons only, viz. James, Lord Balmerino, Sir George Hay, and Sir James Spens, of Wornestoun. This new grant was effected in 1608, and in 1609, Lord Balmerino was tried and convicted of high treason, and his grant of the Lewis forfeited; but Hay and Spens invaded the Lewis with a large force, in order, if possible, to apprehend Niell Macleod, who still held out and opposed their designs. Niell was secretly encouraged by Lord Kintail, who however avoided suspicion by sending his brother, afterwards "Tutor of Kintail," to aid the adventurers. Kintail having shipped some victuals in Ross Shire, for the supply of the adventurers, secretly procured this vessel to be seized on her passage to the Lewis, by Niell Macleod, expecting that the adventurers, trusting to these provisions, and disappointed of them, would be forced to abandon the Lewis. This expectation was fulfilled, for Sir George Hay and Sir James Spens, being unsuccessful in apprehending Niell Macleod, and lacking food for their followers, were obliged to leave the Lewis and disband their forces; leaving, however, a small garrison in the fort of Stornoway. This fort, very soon after their departure, was burned by Niell, and the garrison taken prisoners, but these he sent safely home to Fife.

Thus ended, in 1610, the last attempt made by the lowlanders to colonize the Lewis; for disgusted with their want of success, Hay and Spens were easily prevailed upon to sell their title to the Lord of Kintail, who likewise obtained from the king a grant of the share in the island forfeited by Lord Balmerino. Having now at last procured a legal right to the Lewis, Kintail lost no time in asserting his claims. He procured from the government, a commission of fire and sword against the Lewis men, and landing on the island with a large force of his clan and followers, speedily reduced the islanders to obedience.

Niell Macleod, with his son Donald, and about thirty other men, retired to an insulated rock, called "Berrisay," situated on the west coast of Lewis, where they maintained themselves for three years. Being then forced to evacuate this place by the Mackenzies, Niell retired to Harris, where he surrendered to Roderick Macleod of Harris, and entreated him to take him to the king in England. This Harris undertook to do, but when at Glasgow, on his way to London, he was charged under pain of treason to give up Niell Macleod, which he accordingly did, and also at the same time, Niell's son, Donald. Niell was brought to trial, convicted and executed, and died "very christianlie," in April, 1613. His son Donald was banished from Scotland, and went first to London, where he remained for three years, and thence to Holland, where he died.

Of the three sons of Torquil Dubh, Roderick, William, and Torquil, it is said that Roderick, the chief, went abroad, and died soon afterwards in Flanders, without children; William, the second, died very young at the university of Glasgow; Torquil, who by the death of his elder brothers, became chief of the Siol Torquil, remained for a time with Sir Roderick Macleod of Herries, his uncle; he then went to London, and endeavoured to obtain some redress from the king; but failing in this, he went to Paris, where he was introduced to HENRY IV. then monarch of France, as "a brave man who had suffered much injustice in his own country." Henry generously gave him an appointment at his own court, and Torquil adopting France as his native country, remained there until his death. He left no legitimate children to inherit his claims, and by a charter dated 1571, in which Macgillecallum Garoc Macleod, of Rasay, head of the Siol Vic Gillecillum, is mentioned as heir male of the family of Lewis, failing issue male of old Roderick Macleod of the Lewis, then chief of the Siol Torquil; the representation of the ancient and powerful family of "Macleod of Lewis," with the chieftaincy of the "Siol Torquil," devolved upon MACLEOD OF RASAY.

Barons of Rasay.

MALCOLM MACLEOD, first Baron of Rasay, son of Malcolm Macleod, ninth Baron of Lewis, was left, on the death of his father in 1515, the islands of Rasay and Rona, and half the lands of Gairloch, in Ross Shire, as his heritage. He was called "Malcolm Macgillecallum," or "Malcolm the son of Malcolm," and hence the patronymic of the head of this house. In the year 1518, the Rasay men, with the rest of the Siol Torquil, followed their chief, John Mac Torquil, of the Lewis, the ally and friend of Sir Donald Macdonald, of Lochalch, in an expedition against Macian of Arduamurchan, who was the enemy of Sir Donald. They defeated and slew Macian at the battle of "The Silver Craig," and many people were induced by this success to join their party. Sir Donald was, however, soon afterwards slain in Morven, and all his adherents dispersed and returned to their respective homes. Malcolm was a firm friend of his brother, "Old Roderick, of the Lewis," whom he aided against all his enemies. He died about the year 1557, and left two sons,

ALEXANDER, his heir.

Roderick, to whom he left in patrimony the half of Gairloch.

Malcolm was succeeded by his son,

ALEXANDER MACLEOD, second Baron of Rasay. In his time, first began the feud between the "Siol Gillecillum," or "Macleods of Rasay," and the Mackenzies of Gairloch, who wished to possess themselves of the whole of that property, and to expel the Macleods. Alexander died about 1591, and left two sons, MALCOLM MACALISTER, his heir.

John, who afterwards greatly distinguished himself.

MALCOLM MACALISTER, third Baron of Rasay, was called "Garoc," or "the Strong." It is this Malcolm that is mentioned in the charter granted to Roderick Macleod of the Lewis, in 1571, as heir male of the Lewis family, failing issue male of the said Roderick. He was a brave and clever man, and accompanied by his brother, John Macleod, in the year 1588, joined the Earl of Sutherland in Caithness, where he (the Earl) was waging war against the Earl of Caithness. Great was the havoc and devastation they committed, until, as observes the historian, "Their armies wandering in disarray, had themselves in a fearful and confused tumult amongst the caves and rocky mountains. Divers of the Caithness men were killed, and a great prey of cattle and goods was taken away, the like whereof was never seen in this country for many years. They burnt and wasted the town of Wick, but they saved the church, where they found the heart of the last Earl of Caithness, in a case of lead, the ashes of which heart were thrown to the wind by John Macleod, brother of Macgillecallum of Rasay." Malcolm Garoc died about 1590, and was succeeded by his son,

MALCOLM, fourth Baron of Rasay. He received a charter from the king, dated 1566, of the lands of Rasay, &c. in Inverness-shire. In 1597, John Macleod, brother of Malcolm Garoc, was killed in a brawl by Duncan Bane, of Tulloch. This Malcolm finding the family of his chief, Macleod of Lewis, on the decline, formed a league of friendship, offensive and defensive, with Donald Macdonald of Slate; and in pledge of this friendship, it was agreed, that always on the death of each Macdonald of Slate, his successor should give Macgillecallum a sword; and again, on the death of each Macgillecallum, his successor should give a sword to Macdonald of Slate. Both the custom and the friendship of these two fe families for each other, have remained inviolate until this day. Owing to the fall of the Lewis family, and the increased power of Mackenzie of Kintail, Malcolm was obliged to resign his lands of Rasay, &c. in Kintail's favour, and to hold them of him. He accordingly received a charter from Lord Kintail, dated 1610. This Malcolm was the first Baron of Rasay, who succeeded to the chieftainship of the Siol Torquil, which has ever since remained in his family. The feud between the "Siol Torquil" and the Mackenzies of Gairloch, was now at its height. In the year 1611, a sea battle was fought before the old castle of Rasay, between Macgillecallum himself, and his followers, on one side, and Murdo Mackenzie, son and heir of Mackenzie of Gairloch, and his followers, on the other. This was a bloody battle, and continued all day. In the end, Murdo Mackenzie wounded Macgillecallum, and with his own hands put out his eyes, and threw him into the sea. All the Rasay men were killed, so also were Murdo Mackenzie, and Alexander Bane, son and heir of Bane of Talloch, who was with Murdo Mackenzie, all of whose company perished, with three exceptions, who fought very manfully, and died shortly afterwards of their wounds. This was nearly the last battle fought between the Mackenzies and the Macleods, for soon afterwards the Mackenzies conquered the whole of Gairloch, of which they have since kept possession. Malcolm having been killed in this battle (anno 1611), was succeeded by his son, ALEXANDER, fifth Baron of Rasay, and chief of the Siol Torquil. He married Julia, niece of Sir Roderick Macleod of Herries, by whom he had four sons, Alexander, John, Malcolm, and Murdoch, and two daughters, Katherine and Florence. He died in 1643, and was succeeded by his son, ALEXANDER, sixth Baron of Rasay. He married Sybella, daughter of Roderick Mackenzie of Applecross, by whom he had only two daughters, Janet and Julia, and dying soon after, was succeeded by his second brother,

JOHN, seventh Baron of Rasay, commonly called "Garoc," on account of his extraordinary size and strength. He obtained a charter for his lands in 1648, and married Janet, daughter of Sir Roderick Macleod of Herries. This John Garoc was not only a man of most uncommon strength of body, in which he exceeded all his contemporaries, but a man of great spirit, merit, and resolution. He was a steady loyalist, and inviolably attached to the cause of CHARLES I. and II. He was present at the battle of Worcester, when most of his men were cut off, and his brother Malcolm made prisoner. He received a full certificate from General Middleton, of his attachment to the royal cause, as also of his services rendered to it. He never complied with the usurper Cromwell's government. On the Restoration, John Garoc went to London, where he was most graciously received by CHARLES II. who shewed him many marks of favour and affection. Tradition says, Charles even went so far, as to restore to John Garoc the Lewis, the old property of his family, and that the chief sailed from Rasay, with all his followers, and landed in Lewis, where he regained possession of the title deeds, and other valuable family papers, which had remained in the hands of the Mackenzies since the time of Torquil Connanach. But as he was sailing back in triumph to Rasay, a great storm arose, and he and all with him perished. Thus died John Garoc Macgillecallum, of whom many and marvellous tales are still told in every district of the highlands, and whose name, in his own clan, is held in the highest esteem.

That Charles ever restored him the Lewis requires confirmation, but it is certain that he, and a large company, were drowned in an awful tempest at sea, on their return from an expedition to the Lewis.

He had no children by his wife, and after his death, the clan fell into great trouble. Alexander Macrae of Inverinate, who had married Janet, eldest daughter of Alexander, sixth Baron of Rasay, elder brother of John Garoc, tried to secure for his wife and her children, the island of Rasay. This the clan would not allow, and both Janet and her younger sister, Julia, were obliged to sign a resignation for themselves and their heirs. Rasay, with the chieftainship of the Siol Torquil, then devolved upon,

ALEXANDER MACLEOD, eighth Baron of Rasay, who was nephew of John Garoc, and next heir male. He obtained a charter, dated 19th August, 1692, for the lands, and was thereupon infeft. He married Katherine, daughter of Sir Norman Macleod of Bernera, by whom he had a son and heir,

MALCOLM MACLEOD, ninth Baron of Rasay, who succeeded his father about the year 1718. He married Mary, daughter of Roderick Mackenzie of Applecross, and by her had three sons, John, Murdoch, and Norman, and two daughters, Janet and Flora. Malcolm was a firm adherent of the unfortunate house of Stuart, and in 1745, joined the standard of Prince CHARLES, with many of his clan. He remained with the prince until after the fatal battle of Culloden, when he returned to Rasay. On his arrival, he found the Macleods of Dunvegan, who had espoused the cause of the house of Hanover, had burned his castle, carried off all the cattle on the island, and in fact, almost ruined both himself and his people. Malcolm was now obliged to conceal himself, as he was surrounded by enemies. About this time Prince Charles, accompanied by two of the chief's sons, arrived in Rasay, where they remained in safety for some time. The prince afterwards went to Skye, and in some months landed safely in France. Malcolm was finally obliged to resign his lands to his eldest son.

JOHN MACLEOD, tenth Baron of Rasay. He married Jane, daughter of Archibald Macqueen, esq. and by her had issue, LYON, OF AULDBAR.

LYON, JOHN, esq. representative of the family, succeeded his father, David Lyon, esq. of Portland Place, London, and of Jamaica, in June, 1827.

Lineage.

This family descends in the direct male line from the Honourable Sir Thomas Lyon, knt. of Auldbar, Forfarshire, North Britain, who was designated Master of Glamis, as presumptive heir to the title, being brother of John, eighth Lord Glamis, grandfather of the first Earl of Strathmore. (See BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage.)

Sir Robert Douglas, in his Peerage of Scotland, makes the following mention of Sir Thomas Lyon: "He was one of the principal agents in the seizure of the person of King James VI. at the Raid of Ruthven, on the 23rd August, 1582. The king going towards the door was stopped by the Master of Glamis, and bursting into tears, Glamis said, 'No matter, better children weep than bearded men.' When the king recovered his liberty next year, the Master of Glamis retired into England, and was forfeited 2nd March, 1584; he returned to Scotland the same year, and with the Earls of Angus and Mar, seized on the castle of Stirling, but was soon obliged to fly to England; he and the other banished lords returning in 1585, with a great force, compelled Stewart, Earl of Arran, to quit the royal presence, and they were received into favour by James, who was pleased to appoint the Master of Glamis captain of his guards in place of Arran, and high treasurer of Scotland: he was constituted an extraordinary lord of session, 9th February, 1585, held it till 6th November, 1591, constituted an ordinary lord of session 28th March, 1593, and sat till 28th May, same year: he was knighted at the coronation of James and Queen Anne, 27th May, 1590; he held the office of treasurer till 1595; had a charter to the Barony of Dod to Thomas Lyon, of Auldbar, knt. and Euphemia Douglas, his wife, 6th April, 1594. At his death, King James said, that 'the boldest and hardiest man in his dominions was dead.' He married first, Agnes, third daughter of Robert, fifth Lord Gray, relict of Sir Robert Logan, of Restalrig, and Alexander, fifth Lord Howe; secondly, Lady Euphemia Douglas, fourth daughter of William, Earl Morton; he had a daughter married to Robert Semphill, of Belltrees, and a son, John Lyon, of Auldbar, who was served heir of Sir Thomas Lyon, of Auldbar, knt. his father, in the Barony of Melgund, lands of Auldbar, &c. 6th August, 1608, he married a daughter of George Gladstones, Archbishop of St. Andrew's." His great-grandson,

JOHN LYON, esq. who settled at Brechin, North Britain, married Elizabeth Burn, also of Brechin, and had issue,

JOHN, of whom presently.

David, m. Isabel Greig, and had issue several children, who all died young, except Isabella.

The elder son,

JOHN LYON, esq. of Castle Lyon, in Perthshire, and Kinnaird, in Fifeshire, married Jane, daughter of Alexander Ochterlony, esq. of Pitforthly, in the county of Angus; she was aunt and representative of the gallant Major-general Sir David Ochterlony, bart. G.C.B. who died unmarried in 1825;* they had issue, John, died unmarried.

MAC BRAIRE, OF TWEEDHILL AND BROADMEADOWS.

He succeeded his father in 1832.

Lineage.

The name of Mac Braire, or Mac Briar, is one of some antiquity in Dumfriesshire, and the adjoining counties on the south-west border of Scotland.

Since the middle of the last century, the present family has represented the Mac Brairs of Netherwood, frequently alluded to in old local histories, and described in books of heraldry, as "an ancient family in Dumfriesshire,"* who were supposed, originally, to have emigrated to the South of Scotland from the county of Aberdeen, a highland origin, which the name itself indicates.†

The Netherwood family settled and possessed considerable landed property in Dumfriesshire, prior to the year 1400, which appears by family deeds and papers, as well as by the earlier records of that country; and besides their original estate on the river Neth, in the immediate vicinity of the town of Dumfries, different branches of the family were land owners in other parts of the country, and in Galloway, and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright. They appear to have intermarried with the Maxwells, Johnstons, and other families of distinction in the district, and to have long had great influence in the burgh of Dumfries, of which the head of the family was provost from time to time.‡

The estate of Netherwood descended in regular succession for many generations, down to the year 1740, when it was in the possession of Archibald Mac Braire, the last proprietor of the name, whose affairs becoming embarrassed, he was compelled to alienate the entire of the landed property which had been so long in his family, and shortly after that period, the direct line of the Netherwood family became extinct.

The present family are the immediate descendants of Robert, son of Thomas Mac Braire, of Newark, who was a younger brother of the Laird of Netherwood, in the early part of the 16th century.

ROBERT MAC BRAIRE, settled in Edinburgh as a merchant, about the year 1560, and he and his successors for four generations continued to reside there.

ROBERT MACBRAIRE, (great-grandson of the above Robert,) eldest son of John Mac Braire, merchant and burgess in Edinburgh, settled in Glasgow, and married (25th November, 1715) Margaret, eldest daughter of the Rev. John Pettigrew, minister of the parish of Meikle Govan, Renfrewshire, a well known personage, as an author and wit of the day, and left issue,

‡ The following incidents in the life of one of the family, who seems to have taken a part in public affairs at the time of the Reformation, are alluded to by several writers.

John Mac Braire, or Mac Brsy, a gentleman of Galloway, in consequence of publicly expressing sentiments favourable to the Reformation, then in progress, was obliged to take refuge in England, about the year 1538. At the death of Edward VI. he retired from that country to Frankfort, where he preached to the English congregation. He is called an eminent exile in Styrpe's Annals, i. 130. On the accession of Elizabeth,

- i. JAMES.
- ii. Robert.
- iii. Frederick.
- iv. Arthur.

The eldest son,

JAMES MAC BRAIRE, settled as a merchant in the island of Newfoundland. In 1794-5, at the breaking out of the French revolutionary war, he quitted business, and having raised, at his own expense, above one hundred men for a fencible regiment, then forming for the defence of the North American colonies, joined it as captain, and served for several years. On his regiment being disbanded, at the peace of Amiens, he returned to Newfoundland,* and afterwards was called upon to fill several important public situations in the town of St. John's. He finally in 1817, retired to his native country, and soon afterwards purchased the estates of Tweedhill and Broadmeadows, both in Berwickshire, and was thus the means of restoring his family and name to the place which they had held for centuries amongst the landed proprietors in the South of Scotland. He married (10th May, 1793) Elizabeth, only daughter of Joseph Bower, esq. a merchant and broker in Bristol, son of James Bower, esq. barrister-at-law, of the same city, and had an only surviving son, the present JOHN JOSEPH MAC BRAIRE, esq. of Tweedhill and Broadmeadows.

he returned to England, and on the 13th November, 1568, was inducted to the vicarage of St. Nicholas, in Newcastle, and was buried there November 16th, 1584. Ball mentions several of Mac Braire's works, and says, "he wrote elegantly in Latin." (Vide Ball, Spotteswoode, &c.; also notes to M'Cries' Life of Knox).

* In 1809-10, at the recommendation of his friend, the late Admiral Sir Richard Keats, then governor of Newfoundland, he was appointed by the Prince Regent, major-commandant of a local volunteer corps, 500 strong, which continued embodied to the end of the war.

Mr. Douglas is a deputy lieutenant for Lancashire and Flintshire, and in the commission of the peace. He served as sheriff of the latter county in 1821.

Lineage.

ALEXANDER DOUGLAS, the first ancestor of this family who settled in England, was of the MORTON line of the house of DOUGLAS,* and came in the retinue of JAMES I. in 1603, on his accession to the English throne. The

* The first grant of lands on record to this family was anno 1150, on Douglas Water, in Duglasdale, in Lanarkshire, and William, who inherited the estate, was the first to assume the name of Douglas in several charters which he witnessed between the years 1170 and 1190, during an age when it was the practice of landowners to designate themselves from the names of their possessions. The Celtic, or Galic name Duglas, signifies black water, an appropriate appellation for the river, which is of a black colour, having its sources and supplies from a moorish country. The same word, Dulas or Duglas, in the Welch language, (another dialect of the Celtic,) is literally black and blue, and the river Dulas means dark blue water.

The distinguished house of Douglas had divided into four principal branches, viz. Angus, Hamilton, Queensberry, and Morton, and has been celebrated throughout the historic records of Scotland, as well as in the annals of border warfare, principally against the Percys, in which it had been always successful, and made one Percy prisoner. But in the last fatal rencounter between the two rival chiefs, so beautifully described in the affecting popular ballad of Chevy Chase, the Douglas fell. In the year 1329, Sir James de Douglas received a grant from Edward III. to repair with the HEART of King Robert Bruce to Jerusalem, and deposit it in the Holy Sepulchre, which has been the principal bearing in the Douglas arms ever since.

king granted him possessions near Reath, in the county of York, where he m. a daughter of Sir Marmaduke Langdale, and was succeeded by his son, ALEXANDER DOUGLAS, who lived temp. CHARLES I. at Townend Hall, in Arkendale. During the civil wars, he raised and equipped a body of horsemen for the king's service, chiefly from among his own tenantry, and at his own expense. On his route to join the royal forces, with this troop of which he was captain, he was intercepted and taken prisoner by a detachment of Cromwell's army. He escaped, however, and was secreted for a long time in a cave in a neighbouring wood, where he was sustained by a faithful servant. From this circumstance it acquired the name of "Douglas Wood," which it still bears. Tradition says there was a passage to the cave from the opposite side, under the river. From his adherence to the house of Stuart, his estates were confiscated, and all applications to CHARLES II., after his Restoration, for their restitution, were fruitless. He m. The seventh child,

WILLIAM DOUGLAS, esq. b. 28th February,

* Is an extract from "the pedigree of the ancient knightly family of Gardiner, of Bermondsey, Peckham, and Dorking, in the county of Surrey, extracted from the visitation books of that county, and deduced down to Mary, sole surviving daughter and heir of William Gardiner, of Dorking and Croydon, in Surrey, by Anne, daughter of Richard Peck, now wife of John Douglas, of the parish of St. George, Hanover Square, gentleman, from their authentic evidences, by John Warburton, Somerset Herald, A^o. 1754." It is noticed that he said William Gardiner fell heir to, and possessed the family seat of Haling, near Croydon, which was built by Stephen Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, and lord chancellor of England, temp. HENRY VIII. and MARY, and that he was the last survivor of his family in the male line. Queen Elizabeth, when young and much out of health, ran sent there for change of air, and deriving great benefit, said its name should be changed to living, or All-heal, from its salubrious effect upon her.

† His life was singularly chequered. His first useful outset was with an eminent manufacturer, at Middleton, near the seat of Sir Ashton Lever, in Lancashire, who was then forming his famous Museum. Here, instead of attending to business, he was assiduously assisting Sir Ashton in the stuffing of birds; he was, therefore, removed and placed more suitably to his genius, at military college in Flanders, where he gained promotion by the translation of the work of a celebrated French engineer, on fortification. He afterwards entered the Austrian army as a cadet, at the time when there was a menace of war with the Turks, and at Vienna he became intimate with the stud Baron Trenck. Being sent by Prince John of Lichtenstein, to purchase horses in England, and jocosely observing, that he thought his head turning on the gates of Constantinople would not be a very becoming sight, he did not return, and abandoned the Austrian for the British service. He obtained a lieutenant's commission in the Leicester militia, during the heat of the general war then raging, and was put on the staff of Colonel Delbeig, of the engineers, engaged in fortifying Chatham lines on the threatened invasion.

After the peace of 1783, he married, and determined to enter the church. He accordingly kept collegiate terms, and graduated at Oxford; was ordained, got moderate preferment, and became a chaplain to the Prince of Wales.

He had naturally great taste and talent for the fine arts, which had been matured by the study of some of the principal galleries of painting and sculpture in Europe, over a good portion of which he had travelled: he produced some excellent portraits of his friends, both in oil and miniature, as an amateur; but his favourite and lasting study was antiquarian research, in which he attained great eminence. He associated much with the literary and scientific men of his day, and having opened some hundred sepulchres of the Celtic, British, Roman, and Danish inhabitants of Britain, he formed a large museum of their contents, and was elected a fellow of the Society of Antiquaries.

His publications were numerous, and like his life, varied. Besides his "Translations," he wrote "Travelling Anecdotes through various parts of Europe," much in the manner of Sterne, (with characteristic and humorous plates, drawn and etched by himself,) which went through three editions from 1782 to 1786.

Various novels.

A Dissertation on the Antiquity of the Earth.

Two Dissertations on the Brass Instruments called Celts, and other Arms of the Ancients.

His principal work was the "Nenia Britannica," in folio, to illustrate the history of Britain in the 5th century, with numerous plates (of his own execution) of arms, coins, shields, weapons, gold, silver, and other female decorations and ornaments, with a variety of implements and curious relics deposited with the dead in the many barrows he had opened.

His literary life closed with the publication of some sermons.

CHARLES-BYTHESEA, b. in 1833.

Æmilia-Cecilia.

Agnes-Mary.

Mr. Brome succeeded his father in 1830.

Lineage.

The very ancient and eminent family of Brome lineally derives from the Earls of Anjou, who took the surname of Brome or Broome, after their pilgrimage to the holy land; Fulk, Earl of Anjou, having worn a sprig of the Broome plant, as the symbol of humility. Fulk was father of Geoffrey Plantagenet, who m. Matilda, daughter of HENRY I. and widow of Henry V. Emperor of Germany.

For some time previous to the year 1200, the family, of which we are treating, resided at Broome in Salop, and acted a distinguished part in the days of our early monarchs, for we find, from the pedigree in the College of Arms, that SIR WILLIAM DE BROME, was standard bearer to EDWARD III. THOMAS BROME, secretary to HENRY VI. and HENRY BROME, his son, a faithful adherent of the Earl of Richmond, in a battle in which he fell at Bosworth in 1485. At a subsequent period, JOHN BROME acted as standard bearer to the gallant Sir Alan Zouch; and BARTHOLOMEW BROME attached himself to the celebrated Archbishop Cromwell.

mer, marrying the prelate's niece, Anne, daughter of Edmund Cranmer, archdeacon of Canterbury. While parent stock thus flourished, branches became established in various counties, and acquired considerable landed possessions. In the time of HENRY IV. JOHN BROME, a younger son of the family, wedding Joan, daughter and heir of Thomas Rody, of Baddesley Clinton, in Warwickshire, seated himself there. He had two sons, JOHN, the elder, of Baddesley Clinton, m. Beatrice, daughter of Sir Ralph Shirley, and was father of Nicholas Brome, of Baddesley, who d. 9 HENRY VIII. leaving a daughter, Constantia, wife of Sir Edward Ferrers, knight, to whom she conveyed Baddesley Clinton, (see vol. iii. p. 127). WILLIAM, the younger son, was of Halton, in Oxfordshire, and his descendants continued in high repute for several generations; until the male line failing, the estate of Halton was carried by an heiress, Ursula Brome, in marriage to Sir Thomas Whorwood, knight, of Sandal Staffordshire.

In the sixteenth century, the Broomes, or Bromes, of Broome, in Shropshire, migrated into Kent, and subsequently removed into Hertfordshire, in consequence of the marriage of

JOHN BROME, esq. (son of William Brome, esq. and the lineal descendant of Sir William de Brome, standard bearer to EDWARD III.) with CORDELIA, daughter and co-heir of John Sandford, esq. of Herts, by Anne, his wife, daughter and co-heir of EDWARD DENNY,* esq. of Bishop's Stortford. By Cordelia, Mr. Brome left at his decease, 30th November, 1734, aged fifty-nine, with other issue, a son,

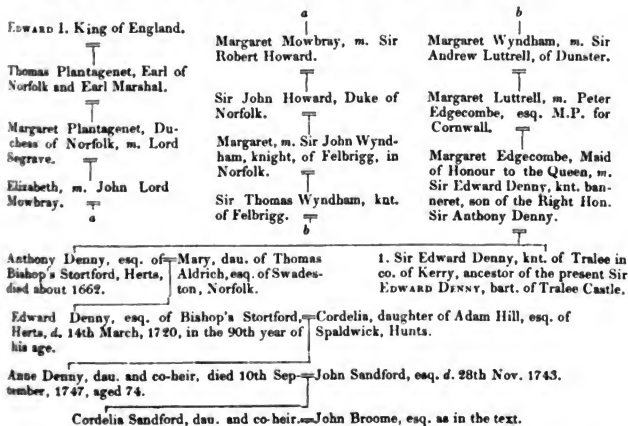

JOHN BROME, esq. of the Manor House, Bishop's Stortford, b. 12th November, 1717, who m. first, in 1739, Martha Osborne, by whom he had two children, a son and a dau. both d. s. p.; and secondly, in 1761, Mary, sister of Sir Charles Saxton, baronet, many years commissioner of Portsmouth, by whom he left, with other children who d. unm. a son,

This gentleman assumed, by sign manual in 1836, the surname and arms of Tooker, in addition to and after those of Whalley, in compliance with a direction contained in the will of his great uncle, JAMES TOOKER, OF NORTON HALL, esq.

Lineage.

The family of Whalley in Somerset claims to be descended from Wyamarus Whalley, who accompanied WILLIAM the Conqueror from Normandy, and was the standard bearer at the battle of Hastings. The Conqueror gave him the Lordship of Whalley in the county of Lancaster, in which shire as well as in the counties of Stafford and Nottingham, his descendants possessed extensive property. Edward Whalley, major-gen. in Cromwell's army, who signed the death warrant of KING CHARLES, was of this family. He was first cousin to the Protector. On the return of CHARLES II. he fled to America, where he remained in concealment till his demise, which is supposed to have taken place about the year 1679. A curious account of his wanderings and death, and of his companion Colonel Goffe, is to be found in Hutchinson's History of Massachusetts Bay. Sir Walter Scott in Peveril of the Peak introduces an anecdote of Edward Whalley, at this period, founded on fact.

Other members of the family attached themselves to the royal cause, and at the Restoration, among those who were to have been invested with the proposed order of knighthood, to be called the Royal Oak occurs the name of William Whalley of Norton, county of Leicester.

Mr. Worsley is Master of Arts of St. John's College, Cambridge, was many years in Lord De Grey's hussar yeomanry corps, is a magistrate and deputy lieutenant of the North Riding, and member of the Yorkshire Philosophical Society. He succeeded his uncle, Edward Worsley, esq. on the 21st March, 1830.

Lineage.

The family of Worsley, or De Workesley, as it was anciently written, is of high antiquity, being descended from Sir Elias Workesley, lord of the manor of Worsley, (now Worsley) about seven miles from Manchester, at the time of the Norman conquest. He is mentioned in an old chronicle as attending Robert, Duke of Normandy, in his expedition for the recovery of the Holy Land, and is said to have been buried at Rhodes. This family continued to hold large possessions in the said county till the year 1377, in the reign of Edward III. when Elizabeth, daughter of

Geoffrey Workesley, being found by an inquisition to have been born out of marriage, the lordship came to Sir John Massey, who had married the sister of Sir Geoffrey; however, the estate was again taken possession of by Robert Worsley, and Thomas Brereton, esq. of the county of Chester, who married the daughter and heiress of Sir John Massey, recovered it from Robert Worsley by a suit in Chancery; it was afterwards disposed of to the Lord Chancellor Egerton, from whom it descended to the Duke of Bridgewater, who made the canal from the mill in the township of Worsley over the river Irwell, at Barton Bridge, to convey coals from his mines to Manchester. The family we are now treating of branched off about the year 1307, in the reign of EDWARD II. and are still in receipt of quit and chief rents over the townships of Worsley, Bedford, Astley, &c. in Lancashire; the remaining branch of the family continued lords of Worsley Hall, in the said county, till the 3rd of HENRY VIII. (1512) when Sir James Worsley, of Worsley Hall, married the heiress of Appuldercombe, in the Isle of Wight; Richard, their descendant, was created a baronet by JAMES I. in 1611, whose descendant, the late Sir Richard Worsley, bart. of Appuldercombe Park, died intestate, and without issue, in the year 1805; when the baronetage devolved on his kinsman, the Rev. Sir Henry Worsley Holmes, whose son, Sir Leonard-Thomas-Worsley Holmes, was the last baronet. The Appuldercombe estate vested in Miss Bridgman Simpson, who became the wife of the present Lord Yarborough, but is since dead, and his lordship enjoys the estate.

The family before us has been traced down by regular descent from the time of the conquest, and has at various times been connected with many houses of distinction.

THOMAS WORSLEY, esq. of Hovingham Hall, m. Mary, daughter of Henry Arthington, esq. of Arthington Hall, in the county of York, and was s. by his son, Constable, esq. of Wassand, in the county of York. The eldest son and successor,

THOMAS WORSLEY, esq. of Hovingham, was for many years member of parliament for the borough of Caln, and was a distinguished cultivator and patron of literature and the arts. He held the office of surveyor general of the Board of Works, under the auspices of his majesty, GEORGE III. from whom he received many flattering marks of royal favour. The family mansion house at Hovingham was designed and built by this gentleman, and was enriched by him with an extensive library of classical and scientific books, together with a fine collection of pictures and various other works of art. He m. Elizabeth, daughter of the Rev. J. Lister, and had issue several children, Frances, (unmarried) being the only one now surviving. Of the sons,

This gentleman, formerly a major in the army, served in the 95th or rifle corps, (now rifle brigade,) from 1805 to 1825, and within that period was engaged in the following expeditions:—to Germany in 1805; at the taking of Copenhagen and capture of the Danish fleet in 1807; to Corunna in 1808 with Sir David Baird's army, and in that disastrous retreat; and to Lisbon in 1809 with the light division under Major General Crawford. He arrived at Talavera de la Reyna, the day after that sanguinary battle, having made a forced march of fifty-six miles in twenty-four hours, with the expectation of being up in time to participate in the engagement. In 1810, he had to return to England from severe illness; but rejoining the army in 1812, fought at Vitoria, and was one of the volunteers from the light division at the storming and capture of St. Sebastian, 31st August, 1813, in which attack he received so severe a wound, that it exfoliated bone for four years, and for which he receives a pension for life. Captain Perceval accompanied the army of occupation to France in 1816 and 1817, and was captain of the guard of honour on the landing of Queen Dowager Adelaide at Dover, 1818. He proceeded to the North American Colony of Nova Scotia in 1825, and having obtained an unattached majority by purchase in the October of that year, was placed on half-pay, and retired from the service in September, 1833, by the sale of a majority in the 8th hussars.

ROBERT, Lord of Breherval, Montinney, and Vassé, in Normandy, the first of this family who came into England, held, with other great possessions, the castle of Yvery, in the duchy, by the service of three knights' fees. He is presumed to have been younger son of Eudes, sovereign Duke of Brittany, and accompanying the Conqueror in 1066, was rewarded with the lordships of Karry and Harpetrèe, in the county of Somerset; but returning afterwards into Normandy, he died of a grievous illness, soon after the year 1083, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

ASCÉLIN GOUËL DE PERCEVAL, surnamed the Wolf, from the violence of his temper. He was also an adventurer with the Conqueror, and obtained many large manors in England, besides those granted to his father, particularly Weston, in Gordano, Stawell, &c. in the county of Somerset. He married Isabella, daughter of William, Earl of Breteuil, Pacey, Constantin, and Yvery, (which alliance brought a near relationship to WILLIAM the Conqueror,) and had issue, COLLINS, OF BETTERTON.

COLLINS, The Reverend JOHN FERDINANDO, of Betterton, in the county of Berks, b. 15th October, 1812, m. 30th September, 1836, Sarah, daughter of John Hawthorn, esq. of Glenluce, in the county of Wigton, and late of the island of Jamaica, and has issue,

JOHN-FERDINANDO, b. 12th July, 1837.

Mr. Collins succeeded to the estates of his father on attaining his majority.

Lineage.

The family of Collins is of great antiquity in the county of Berks, but appears to have come originally from the county of Salop; for in Domesday Book, the name is found as possessing property in the hundred of Hodnet, in that county. The family have held the estate of Betterton from the reign of HENRY VI. descending from father to son, to the present time.

Whether they were inhabitants of these parts previous to HENRY VI. is not exactly known; but in an old family record, written by John Collins, the seventh in descent, (living 1640,) we find the following account, entitled,

“To the memory of posterity the history of the family of Collins of Betterton.

“John, Lord Strange, of Knocking, in Shropshire, for want of issue, as the manner of the times was, for the health of his soul, gave to the Priory of Poughley, the Manor of West Betterton, in the time of Henry VI. at which time the ancestor of this family, Thomas Collins, was possessed of it, (as lessee) the first in descent. If he was the first Collins settled here originally is not known, then he may be supposed to have ascended out of Shropshire, and tenant in some sort to Lord Strange, of Knocking, in Shropshire, where in the Hundred of Hodnet, the family of Collins is recorded in Domesday. But the common report of the country was that this family is much antienter in this place of Betterton, and I am induced to believe so, because there are no vestigia mentioning of any preceding family.”

THOMAS COLLINS, of Betterton, temp. HENRY VI. had a son,

JOHN COLLINS, b. 1st HENRY VII. Of this gentleman it is recorded in a lease now in the possession of the family, that in the time of HENRY VII. a lease for forty years was granted by the Prior of Poughley to himself and Joan his wife: he had issue.

JOHN COLLINS, b. 13th HENRY VIII. to whom and his wife Joan, daughter of Cowedge, of Ginge, in the county of Berks, the second lease of Betterton was granted in the time of HENRY VIII. of whom nothing is so much remarkable, as that he was a Wickliffe, and persecuted for his religion, and it is supposed some of his predecessors were, as appears ex Reg. Epis. Lincoln By his wife, Joan, he had issue, sold it again to the said John for the sum of £100. as appears by a lease now extant. He m. Joan, daughter of — Blagrove, of Elton, in the county of Berks, and had an only son,

BRUCE, OF CLACKMANAN AND COWDEN, OR NEWTON.

BRUCE, MISS MARGARET, of Cowden, Perthshire, succeeded her father, Captain William Bruce, of Cowden, on the 22nd January, 1807.

Lineagt.

The present proprietrix is descended both of the Bruces of Clackmanan, and of the Bruces of Cowden, or Newton, sprung from the family of Airth, an early and distinguished branch of the former.

The direct line of the Bruces, of Clackmanan—eventually chiefs of all the Bruces in Scotland—having been only seriatim traced down to Sir David Bruce, of Clackmanan, who succeeded in 1405, under the article of Bruce, of Kennet, in the second volume, (p. 485, et seq.) it may be proper to observe, that the same Sir David, Laird or Baron of Clackmanan, was succeeded by John Bruce, of Clackmanan, his son, who was the father of Sir David Bruce of Clackmanan, which last had issue, Sir David Bruce, of Clackmanan, from whom the direct male representation and descent was continuous, and came to centre in Sir Henry Bruce, of Clackmanan, proprietor of the Barony of Clackmanan in the year 1669. This

SIR HENRY BRUCE, of Clackmanan, m. first, Mary, daughter of Sir Alexander Shane, of Sauchie; secondly, Lady Ann Ramsay, daughter to the Earl of Dalhousie, Countess Dowager of Dundee, and by the former had three sons,

1. DAVID, his successor, who m. Lady Margaret Mackenzie, daughter of George, Earl of Cromarty, but died without progeny.

II. CAPTAIN JOHN, who m. Ann, daughter of Mr. Archibald Robertson, of Bedley, by whom he had no sons, but an only daughter, Margaret, who m. John Forbes, esq. of Newhall, and left issue.

III. HENRY, of whom we are about to treat.

The third son,

HENRY BRUCE, of Clackmanan, married Jean, daughter of Alexander Bruce, of Kinnaird, and died at the age of eighty, in 1741, being described in the Scots Magazine, and obituaries of the day, as "Representative of the family of Bruce." By that lady he had issue, Alexander, who predeceased him unmarried.

HENRY, his successor.

JANET, who married William Bruce, of Newton, afterwards of Cowden, of whom and her descendants in the sequel.

The son and successor,

HENRY BRUCE, of Clackmanan, the heir by the death of Alexander, his elder brother, m. Catherine, daughter of Alexander Bruce, of Newton, and sister of William Bruce, of Cowden, his brother-in-law, by which lady, who survived him, he had no issue who came to maturity. There is the following intimation of his death in the Scots Magazine for the year 1772:—"Died 8th July, 1772, at Clackmanan Castle, Henry Bruce, of Clackmanan, esq. aged 72, descended of John de Bruce, 3rd son of Robert, Lord of Annandale, who was competitor for the crown of Scotland with John Baliol. He was heir of Sir Robert Bruce, of Clackmanan, who in 1359 obtained a charter from King Robert Bruce, in which he is designated the king's beloved and faithful cousin, and from whom all the other families of the name of Bruce in Scotland are descended."

By his death without issue, his representation undoubtedly on the descendants of ton,* alluded to, (who sold that property, and acquired Cowden, by which he and his heirs were afterwards designated, and who was, also in another capacity, brother-in-law of the last Henry Bruce, of Clackmanan, who married his sister,) she had issue.

HENRY, captain in the East India Company's service, who d. unm.

WILLIAM, captain in the Bengal artillery, who continued the line.

The only surviving son.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM BRUCE succeeded to the estate of Cowden, m. Margaret, eldest daughter of Dr. Robert Oliver, (by Margaret, second daughter of William Russel, esq. late of Kingsseat and Slipperfield, in Tweedale,) and dying 22nd January, 1807, left issue by this lady,

MARGARET, his successor, proprietrix of Cowden, and sole heir and representative of HENRY BRUCE, the last of Clackmanan, and of HENRY BRUCE, of Clackmanan, his father.†

* The Bruces of Airth, of whom Captain Bruce, of Cowden, father of the lady in question, was descended in the male line, were the oldest cadets of Clackmanan, being sprung from the latter more than four centuries ago. They were affluent and of great distinction both in Scotland and foreign countries, and spread into various respectable branches.

SIR ALEXANDER BRUCE, of Airth, their representative after the middle of the sixteenth century, m. Janet, daughter of Alexander, Lord Livingstone, ancestor of the Earls of Linlithgow and Calder, by whom he had

WILLIAM BRUCE,¹ younger of Airth, who predeceased his father, but left issue by Jean, daughter of John, Lord Fleming, ancestor of the Earls of Wigton, three sons,

- i. JOHN, of Airth, who m. Margaret, daughter of Robert, Lord Elphinstone, whose male line is extinct, but of whom Robert Bruce Dundas, esq. of Blair Castle, is the heir of line.
- ii. WILLIAM (Sir), of Stenhouse, created in 1629, baronet of Nova Scotia, with remainder to him and his heirs male general, of whom the knightly house of Stenhouse, now the heirs male of the ancient family of Airth.
- iii. PATRICK.

The third son,

PATRICK BRUCE, of Newton, who acquired the estate which lay in the barony of Bothkenner,

The above were the heraldic ensigns of Henry Bruce, last of Clackmanan, grand-uncle of Miss Bruce. They were also carried by David Bruce, of Clackmanan, in 1686, who added the motto, "Non deest generoso Pectori virtus;" above the crest, and both constantly carried the supporters and the crest.

Seat—Cowden House.

Stirlingshire, in 1627, upon the resignation of Dame Jean Fleming, Lady Airth, his mother, left issue,

WILLIAM BRUCE, of Newton, who succeeded in 1655, father of ALEXANDER BRUCE, of Newton, the father of WILLIAM BRUCE, of Newton, (who sold Newton, and acquired Cowden,) formerly referred to, the husband of JANET BRUCE, only sister of Henry Bruce, of Clackmanan. This last William Bruce, of Newton, as already mentioned, had a sister Catherine, married to Henry Bruce, of Clackmanan.

† It clearly follows, therefore, from the above deduction, that Miss Bruce, of Cowden, is preferable heir of line of Clackmanan to the Bruces of Kennet, who are sprung (in the female line) from Thomas Bruce, of Kennet, younger brother of Sir David Bruce, of Clackmanan, who succeeded in 1405, and (in the male line) from a younger son of Sir Robert Bruce, of Clackmanan, in 1506; whereas this lady traces her descent directly from the male representative of Clackmanan, in 1741, lineally descended of that very Sir David, independent of being heir of Henry Bruce, last of Clackmanan, son and heir of the former. It is especially incumbent to notice this circumstance, as the Bruces of Kennet, owing to some error or misconception, are represented² "as heir male, and of line to Sir Robert de Bruys, of Clackmanan, who died in 1405," the father of the previous Sir David, which is obviously incorrect.

² In the article of Bruce, of Kennet, referred to, second volume of the present work, p. 485.

FORBES, OF CULLODEN.

FORBES, DUNCAN-GEORGE, esq. of Culloden House, in the shire of Inverness, b. in London, 17th June, 1781, m. 29th March, 1818, Sarah, only daughter of the late Rev. Joseph Walker, of Lancaster, Ash, and Satley, in the county of Durham, by Eliza, his wife, daughter of Edward Boys, esq. of St. Albans, and had by her, who died at Culloden House, 18th January, 1838, aged forty-three, deeply lamented, three sons, ARTHUR, b. at Douglas, Isle of Man, 25th January, 1819. Duncan, b. at Hedge Grove, Keswick, Cumberland, 7th May, 1821.

Joseph-William Forbes, b. at Ryefield Lodge, Ross-shire, 3rd November, 1827.

Mr. Forbes, who succeeded his father, 26th May, 1803, is a magistrate and a deputy lieutenant for the counties of Inverness and Nairn, and was formerly colonel of the Culloden volunteers. He is also patron of the parish of Urquhart, in Ross-shire, and a director of the Royal Academies of Inverness and Tain.

Lineage.

The founder of this distinguished family was

DUNCAN FORBES, (the great-grandfather of the Lord President Forbes,) a member of parliament and provost of Inverness. He was descended from the family of Lord Forbes, through that of Tolquhoun, and by the mother's side, from that of Keith, Earl Marischall, (as a narrative in the hand-writing of the President's father informs us). He purchased the barony of Culloden from the Laird of Mackintosh in 1626. During the civil commotions which disturbed the kingdom in the reign of CHARLES I. and after the death of that prince, he seems to have adhered to the presbyterian party, and to have aided all the measures in which the Marquis of Argyll participated, and from his situation as chief magistrate of an important town, his assistance must have been of much consequence. Duncan had two brothers, JOHN, whose son Malcolm became Marquis of Montilly, in France; and PATRICK, (commonly called Black Patrick, bailie of Inverurie,) from whom descended the family of Forbes, of Foveran. Duncan Forbes died 14th October, 1654, aged eighty-two.

“ Thy memorie will ever recent bee
Preserv'd by such as draw their blood from thee;
Who in regarde
Of thy good fame,
Receive rewarde
By claimeing to thy name;

For thy remains give honour to this place,
And thy true vertue honours all thy race.”*

By his marriage with Janet, eldest daughter of James Forbes, of Corsinday, a family also descended from that of Lord Forbes, Duncan had three sons and two daughters,

- i. JOHN, who succeeded him.
- ii. James (Capt.), who lived in Caithness, and married in 1643, Agnes Monro, daughter to Mr. George, of Pitludie. (styled in the marriage contract, “ Minister of Godis Word at the Kirk of Rosemarkie,) elder brother to Sir Alexander Monro, of Bearcrofts, and by her had several children.
- iii. Duncan (Capt.), who lived in Assynt, married in 1653, Isobell, daughter of Patrick Ruthven, of Dundee.
- i. Elizabeth, married to William Baillie, of Duncan, Inverness-shire.
- ii. Anna, married first, (contract dated 1641,) to Evan Macpherson, of Clanny; and secondly, (marriage contract dated 1652,) to Alexander Mackintosh, of Connedge, said to be an ancestor of the late Sir James Mackintosh, of the Cullachy family.

The eldest son,
JOHN FORBES, the second of Culloden, married (contract dated 1643,) Anna, eldest

* From the Epitaph on Duncan and his Wife.

daughter of Alexander Dunbar, of Grange, by his first wife, Jean Campbell, daughter of Sir John Campbell, of Cawdor, (a family since raised to the Earldom of Cawdor,) and by the said Anna had six sons and two daughters.

- i. DUNCAN, who succeeded him.
- ii. David, afterwards Sir David Forbes, of Newhall, under the title of Lord Newhall, one of the judges of the Court of Session; was an eminent lawyer and man of letters; an influential patron of Allan Ramsay, (the "Sir William Worthy," of Ramsay's "Gentle Shepherd,") and ancestor of the family of Rae, of Eskgrove, baronet. Sir William Rae, late lord advocate of Scotland, and now member of parliament for Bute-shire, is descended from a daughter of Sir David Forbes, by Katherine Clerk, daughter of John Clerk, of Pennicuik. Their marriage contract in the charter chest at Culloden House, is dated 12th February, 1680.
- iii. Thomas, m. Jean Cuthbert, daughter of David Cuthbert, in Inverness.
- iv. Alexander, who went to New England.
- v. Jonathan, physician in Elgin, m. a daughter of Brodie, of Lethen, in Nairnshire.
- vi. John, who was Lieutenant Colonel John Forbes, of Pitcairrieffe, in Fifeshire. Happening at the time to be leaving London for the north of Scotland, he was employed to carry the order respecting the massacre of Glencoe, to Sir John Hill, governor of Fort William. It is but justice to the memory of both, to state that when the letter was opened, they expressed their utmost horror at the contents. He m. Elizabeth Graham, daughter of Baillie Graham, of Edinburgh.
- i. Jean, married (contract dated 1681.) to Sir Robert Munro, of Fowlis.
- ii. Naomi, married (contract dated 1682,) to Robert Dunbar, of Burgie.

John Forbes was provost of Inverness, (we believe member of parliament for the county,) and the friend and co-adjutor of the Marquis of Argyll. At the Restoration, although he escaped the unhappy fate of that nobleman, and of others who were put to death, still, his name being in the list of persons exempted from the Act of Indemnity, he was involved in all the vexations and tyrannical acts of vengeance, short of death, which disgraced the reign of CHARLES II. He was severely fined, and both himself and family were tormented with every species of civil and ecclesiastical oppression, but

" Oft the cloud which wraps the present hour, Serves but to brighten all our future days."

The truth of this observation, if not felt by John Forbes, was at least evident to his family after his death. The frowning aspect of government by introducing the habits of economical and private living, instead of excessive hospitality and expense, into his family, must have conduced to the accumulation of his fortune, and about the year 1670, his landed estate was doubled by the purchase of the extensive and valuable barony of Ferrintosh and the estate of Burchren. These estates were the patrimony of Inverallochy, a son of Lord Lovet. The word Ferrin-tosh, it may be mentioned, signifies "The Land of the Thane," it having anciently formed part of the thanedom of Cawdor, (celebrated in "Macbeth"). John Forbes died about the year of the Revolution, 1688, and was succeeded by his eldest son.

DUNCAN FORBES, the third of Culloden. He had received a liberal education at Bourges and on different parts of the continent, and acted a decided and distinguished part in the great events of his time. He married (contract dated 1668,) Mary, daughter of Sir Robert Innes, of that Ilk, a family long established in the county of Moray, with the dignity of baronet, and which, through the female line, has lately succeeded to the dukedom of Roxburgh. By this lady he had two sons, JOHN, his heir, born about the year 1672, and DUNCAN, afterwards lord president; and seven daughters. The eldest, Jean, married to Sir Harry Innes, of that Ilk; the second, Anna, to Peter Forbes, of Phylinc, in Assynt; the third, Mary, (contract dated 1698,) to Robert Urquhart, of Burdsyards; the fourth, Margaret, (contract dated 1699,) to George Munro, of Newmore; the fifth, Isobell, to Fraser, of Achnagairu; the sixth, Naomi, to Dr. Alexander Paterson, of Inverness; and the seventh, Grizell, (contract dated 21st April, 1709,) to David Ross, of Kindeace.

Duncan Forbes was among the first and the most strenuous of those who, in Scotland secretly prepared or openly hastened the events which tended to produce the overthrow of James, and to secure his exclusion; and as he was a member of the Scottish parliament, his decided love of freedom made him a very conspicuous character in that assembly. The year after the Revolution, his estates of Culloden and Ferrintosh were ravaged by the soldiers of Buchan and Cannon, and his houses and other property destroyed, to the amount of £54,000 Scotch money, as ascertained by a regular proof. His hostility to the jacobite interest was the avowed cause of these outrages, and his known merit in promoting the Revolution, no doubt was the real cause of the favourable result of his claim for compensation by the Scotch parliament. This compensation was made by the perpetual grant of a liberty to distil into spirits the grain of the barony of Ferrintosh, upon paying a small specific composition of 400 merks Scotch, or £22. 4s. 5d. $\frac{1}{3}$ sterling, in lieu of excise; the whole excise within Scotland, at the time, being £40,000 sterling. The act conveying this grant was passed 22nd July, 1690, and was afterwards confirmed and explained by another of 16th July, 1695, which declares the said lands to be liable only to their proportion, conform to the original act, of what additional excise then was, or thereafter should be imposed by law upon the kingdom. This valuable privilege was supported in its fullest extent by a decision of the parliament of Scotland in 1703, and by another of the Court of Exchequer in Scotland in 1711.

In 1784, government resolved to resume the privilege of Ferrintosh, after it had for nearly a century been enjoyed by the family of Culloden. The representatives of the family being employed abroad for many years, this part of the estate was much neglected, and arrangements had just been made with a company to bring it to an increase of value, when government came to this resolution. Of the value of this privilege we may form some idea from Mr. Arnot's statement, in his History of Edinburgh, that more whisky was distilled in Ferrintosh, than in all the rest of Scotland. If we suppose the number of arable acres (and they amount to a great deal more than this) to be 1800, and take the produce at only five bolls of barley per acre, this would give 9000 bolls. If the profit to the proprietor upon the distillation of these 9000 bolls into whisky, (duty free) should be taken at the very low calculation of two pounds sterling per boll, the return to the family would amount to no less a sum than £18,000 sterling, per annum, besides insuring the conversion into arable land of the rest of the barony upon easy terms. The family, as might be expected, urged every argument to induce government to desist from resuming its own grant of a perpetual property of such value, but in spite of every opposition and appeal to justice and good faith, it was taken away early in 1785, for the miserably inadequate compensation of £21,500. Duncan Forbes latterly served in parliament for the county of Nairn, and died in 1704. He was succeeded by his eldest son,

JOHN FORBES, the fourth of Culloden; member of parliament for Inverness-shire; an affectionate friend and brother; a truly upright man, of considerable talents and knowledge of the world, and one who acquitted himself on all occasions, both in public and private life, as an enlightened and worthy member of society. He married (contract dated 1699,) Jean Gordon daughter of Sir Robert Gordon, of Gordonstone, by Margaret, eldest daughter of William, Lord Forbes, and dying without issue, in the year 1734, was succeeded by the lord advocate of Scotland, his only brother.

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE DUNCAN FORBES, fifth Laird of Culloden, and afterwards lord president of the Court of Session.

From the Edinburgh Review, (Feb. 1816.) of the "Culloden Papers, comprising an extensive and interesting correspondence from the year 1625 to 1748," discovered in 1812, by the late Hugh Robert Duff, esq. of Muirtown, and under his superintendance, published by Cadell and Davies in 1814, we extract the following passage:—"The Culloden Papers are a collection of documents, consisting chiefly of letters of correspondence, which were lately found in Culloden House, belonging to the family of Forbes, in the vicinity of Inverness. The family had long been distinguished as the head or principal member (it is now indifferent which) of one of the great highland clans, and was formerly still more conspicuous by the share which it took in all the public transactions of its native land. By the most brilliant and honourable part of its history, is that which records the life of Duncan Forbes, who died president of the Court of Session, in the year 1747. The eminent man raised himself to that high station by the unassisted excellence of a noble character, by the force of which he had previously won and adorned all the subordinate gradations of office. He led the lead in all affairs touching Scotland, for nearly half of the last century, was particularly active during the two rebellions—maintained a constant intercourse with all the great men of his day, both Scotch and English, and died, leaving behind him a bright and unenvied reputation, of which the recollection is scarcely yet effaced in this country. Forbes displays one of those characters which are sometimes to be found in what Hume calls the corners of history, but which deserves to be blazoned at large on its broadest page. He is in every situation so full of honour, of gentleness, of true wisdom, of kindness and intrepidity, that we doubt if there be any one public man of this part of the empire, or of the age that is gone, whose qualities ought to be so strongly recommended to the contemplation of all those who wish truly to serve their country. There are various lords and lairds who make but a shabby figure in this collection, but our great pride and consolation is in the ever clear honour and open heart of him to whom they address themselves. For Duncan Forbes no descendant will ever have cause to blush or feel ashamed; and the perusal of this book will prove, that Scotland, even since she ceased to be a separate kingdom, has had at least one statesman whose principles were as pure as his understanding was enlightened, and whose concern for his country was not so much as suspected to be quickened by any regard to his own power or emolument." "His natural talents," says another respectable authority, "were of the very first order, enlarged by an excellent education, completely disciplined and fully matured by habits of intense study, and of minute, and at the same time extensive observation; and they were all employed most honourably and conscientiously in the real business of life. His learning was profound and extensive beyond that of his compeers, and in forcible, manly, and persuasive eloquence at the Scottish bar, he had no competitor. Yet with all this vast and visible superiority, he was never dogmatical. Every thing like artifice he held in abhorrence; and truth and justice, being at all times the objects he aimed at, the law of kindness was ever on his lips, and an impress of candour and sincerity gave an oracular dignity to every sentiment which he uttered. Of the volume of inspiration which he could consult with advantage in the original tongue, he was a diligent student. Being called upon rather for active personal exertion than for those efforts of mind which can be well and successfully made only in the seclusion of the closet, and through the medium of the press, of course his writings are not numerous, but they exhibit strong traces of a pure, a pious, and an original mind. In the infant manufactures of his country he took unceasing interest, and his upright and pure spirit breathed into her tribunals of justice an order and an equitable impartiality to which they were before total strangers, and which to this day happily never has forsaken them. Besides the new order of court, as to the hearing of causes, which he had the merit of introducing, he wrought great and happy changes in the manner of the judges. By the candour, the strict integrity, and the nice discernment, combined with that admirable command of temper which marked his character, he was enabled to introduce a dignified urbanity and a gentlemanly deference among the members of court to the opinions of each other, which succeeding lord presidents have found no difficulty to sustain. In private life he was every thing that is amiable; as a husband and a father affectionately tender, as a friend, generous in the extreme. His neighbours he was always ready to oblige, and merit of every description found in him a prompt, a steady, and a disinterested patron. He was sprung from a family whose hospitality had been proverbial for ages, and to be of his party, in his moments of relaxation, was a felicity eagerly coveted by the greatest and wittiest men of his time. To sum up all in one word, such was the sterling worth of his character, that he was universally feared by the bad, and as universally loved by the good of all parties."

The ingratitude of GEORGE II. to Forbes, whose gigantic efforts during the Rebellion of 1745, can never be forgotten, to whose diversion in the north, it was owing that the whole of the disaffected clans did not pour down their forces on the south, and to whom that monarch therefore probably owed his continuance on the throne; an ingratitude which preyed on the warm and generous Forbes, and brought him to an untimely grave, has been often alluded to. He had spent several years rents of his estates in the public service in 1745. His brother had expended large sums in the same cause in 1715. Of this, amounting to about thirty thousand pounds sterling, not one sixpence was ever repaid. "The mere money," (says the Edinburgh Review, in the able article from which we have already quoted) he probably never thought of, but the sentiment conveyed in the refusal was somewhat hard to bear. On this subject he was silent. But he had induced others, on his credit, to advance funds for the exigence of the day, and he openly remonstrated against not being enabled to do justice to them. He was thanked by his majesty, but this is sometimes the coldest form in which an old servant can be discarded. No cause was ever found sufficiently plausible to be openly stated in defence of this conduct, but when we recollect the characters of the Duke of Cumberland and of Forbes, we cannot doubt that one of the popular accounts is the true one, which ascribes it all to his having plainly, and even in the king's presence, expressed his decided disapprobation of the violence of the royal army, after the battle of Culloden. Generous men are peculiarly liable to be hurt by ungenerous treatment, and it is said that his sense of the ingratitude which had been testified towards him, never left Forbes till it was buried two years afterwards in the untimely grave towards which it hastened him." "To a mind so pure and so gentle, as was that of President Forbes, this ingratitude, on the part of the government, must," says Mr. Chambers, "have been exceedingly painful, but we do not believe that it was the only or the principal thing that weighed down his spirit. The care of the Highlands had been imposed on him for many years; he had been a father and a friend to almost every principal family they contained, and with few exceptions, these families had in return made the strongest professions of loyalty to the government, and of friendship and affection to himself. How must he have felt to see the very men he had saved from total destruction, procured them the favourable notice of the government, and even high and honourable situations, rushing, from mistaken views of their own or country's interests, upon the ruin of both! It was this, we have no doubt, gave the secret but incurable wound which, though he continued to perform the duties of his station with inflexible firmness and with imperturbable patience, brought him by slow degrees to an untimely grave."

To these remarks we will add an extract from a letter found among some old papers in Culloden House. It was written by the president a short period before his death to his son, John Forbes, afterwards of Culloden. "I am very sorry for you, my dear John, the great charges and expenses I have been at in supporting his majesty in the rebellion, have far exceeded the sum I thought it would have cost when I saw you last. I would advise you to go to London, where I believe I may have some friends yet. Mr. Scroope, Mr. Littleton, and Mr. Mitchell, (afterwards Lord Littleton and Sir Andrew Mitchell,) are kind-hearted affectionate men, and they will tell the king that his faithful servant, Duncan Forbes, has left you a very poor man. Farewell, may the God of heaven and earth bless you. Duncan Forbes." The poet Thomson thus speaks of the president:

"Thee, Forbes, too, whom every worth attends,
As truth sincere, as weeping friendship kind;
Thee truly generous, and in silence great,
Thy country feels through her reviving arts,
Plann'd by thy wisdom, by thy soul inform'd;
And seldom has she known a friend like thee."

Duncan Forbes, who was born at Bunchrew, one of the family seats, near Inverness, 10th November, 1685, m. Mary, daughter of Hugh Rose, of the ancient family of Kilravock, in Nairnshire, and dying 10th December, 1747, was succeeded by his only child,

JOHN FORBES, esq. of Culloden, the intimate friend of Thomson, Armstrong, and the other wits and literati of his day. He served with great distinction at the battles of Fontenoy and Culloden. At the former, his horse was shot under him. By economy and judicious management, he succeeded in retrieving the fortunes of his family, which had received a severe and well nigh fatal shock from the serious extent of his father, the president's losses and advances, in the cause of government, during the rebellion of 1745-6, losses and advances never suitably acknowledged in the proper quarter, an ingratitude still the wonder and reproach of the age. He married first, Jane, daughter of Sir Arthur Forbes, bart. of Craigievar, by whom he had two sons, Duncan who died in youth, and ARTHUR, his heir; and secondly, in 1772, Jane, daughter of Captain Forbes, of New, by whom (who wedded afterwards, Grant, of Drumminner, Aberdeenshire,) he had no issue. He died 26th May, 1803, and was s. by his only son, the present DUNCAN-GEORGE FORBES, esq. of Culloden House.

FAGAN, OF FELTRIM.

FAGAN, WILLIAM, esq. of Cork, chief, in Ireland, of the ancient family of Fagan of Feltrim, m. in 1827, Mary, daughter of Charles Addis, esq. of Westminster, and has issue.

Lineage.

PATRICK O'HAGAN, alias FAGAN, second son of John O'Hagan, Baron of Tullagh-Og in Tyrone, by Catherine, his wife, daughter of Hugh Mac Mahon, Baron of Furuey, and second brother of Bryan More Mac Mahon, Dynast of Monagan, accompanied his father in 1180, in his expedition at the head of the forces of Tyrone, to the assistance of O'Melaghlin, prince of Meath, in order to repel the encroachments of the English settlers in his principality. So soon as the object of the expedition was fulfilled, the troops returned to their respective homes; but Patrick O'Hagan remained in Meath, where he married Dorothea, daughter of Cormac or Charles O'Melaghlin, son to the last reigning prince of that name, and acquired with her a large territory, which was confirmed to him by charter in 1210, by Walter de Lacy, lord of Meath, in obedience to the command of King JOHN, then in Ireland. From that period Patrick assumed the English costume and an English name, and served his lord paramount with attachment and fidelity. In 1233, he accompanied William de Lacy on an incursion into O'Reilly's country, bordering on the province of Meath, and was slain with William de Lacy, and others of the English and Irish chiefs. His son,

JOHN FAGAN, of Derry Fagan, Faganston, Monrath, &c. in Meath, also supported the English interest until his death in 1248. He m. Ann, daughter of Sir Alexander Plunkett, knt. and was father of

PATRICK FAGAN, of Derry Fagan, Faganston, Monrath, &c. who m. Susanna, daughter of Sir John Barnewall, knt. of Crickstown, and dying in 1274, was s. by his son,

RICHARD FAGAN, of Derry Fagan, Faganston, &c. who got a librate of 20 marks upon the treasury of Ireland, in consideration of his good services against O'Reilly and Bermingham, and in 1343, a further grant of part of the lands forfeited by his father-in-law Sir Hugo de Lacy. He m. Margaret, daughter of the said Sir Hugo de Lacy, and died in 1348, leaving a son and successor,

JOHN FAGAN, of Derry Fagan, Faganston, &c. constituted high sheriff of the liberties of Meath by letters patent, dated 32 EDWARD III. and governor of the castle of Trim for life, in the 47th of the same reign. He m. Ann, daughter of Hugh Mac Canna, baron of Trucha, in the county of Monaghan, and was s. by his son,

SIR HUGH FAGAN, knt. of Derry Fagan, Faganston, &c. who, with his son and heir John Fagan, then of full age, attended the court of RICHARD II. in Dublin, in 1399, and did homage, surrendering all their lordships, but the King not only gave them a new grant of the possessions to hold them from the crown of England by knights services and fealty, but also created them knights. Sir Hugh m. Eleanora, daughter of Sir Robert Tuite, knt. and was father of

RICHARD FAGAN, esq. of Derry Fagan, high sheriff of the liberties of Meath in 1457. This gentleman, in liquidation of the great disbursements made by him in the king's service, obtained in 1458, a librate of 20 marks on the treasury of Ireland. He m. Cecily, daughter of Sir Rowland Fitz Eustace, knt. baron Porchester, and had a son and successor,

CHRISTOPHER FAGAN, esq. of Derry Fagan, Faganston, Monrath, &c. who m. Catherine, daughter of James Fitzgerald, third son of Thomas, seventh Earl of Kildare, and had issue, RICHARD, Thomas, Hugh, James, and JOHN. Christopher Fagan, taking part in the insurrection of Perkin Warbeck was attainted, and his lands granted to Aylmer of Lyons, to the Barnewalls, and others. He fell at the siege of Carlow in 1494, together with four of his sons. His youngest child however, John

Fagan, escaped the slaughter and fled to the city of Cork, then holding out in the most formidable manner for Perkin. His deluded zeal for the cause he espoused was such, that he got the title of Archrebel from the English writers of the history of the times.

The eldest son of Christopher,

RICHARD FAGAN, esq. m. Anastasia, dau. of John Rochford, esq. of Killadown, in Meath, and of Carrick in the county of Kilkenny, and was father of THOMAS FAGAN, esq. of Dublin, who was left, in 1494, an infant at his mother's breast, and brought by her, in the calamity of the times, to Dublin to her father's house, where especial care was taken of the orphan, and Mr. Rochford providing for his education, eventually made ample provision for him. He married in 1524, Amy Nangle, daughter of the Baron of Navan, with whom he acquired considerable estates in the city and county of Dublin, as well as in the counties of Meath, Wexford, and Sligo, as appears by the several grants and pardons of alienation made thereof to his male descendants by JAMES I. CHARLES I. and CHARLES II. styled him from Feltrim in the said county. He left two sons,

1. CHRISTOPHER, high sheriff of the county and city of Dublin in 1565, and lord mayor in 1573. He m. Joan, daughter of Sir James Fitz Simonds, knt. also lord mayor of Dublin, and had one son, and seven daughters, viz.

i. Ellen, m. to Dominick Rice, esq. of Ballymacdoyle, grandfather of James Rice, Count of the Holy Roman Empire.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM FAGAN, esq. was surnamed the "Rich," from having acquired a very large fortune, which soon vanished through his attachment to King JAMES II. as well as his unbounded generosity to the chief officers of his army, as appears from the many bonds and notes still in the possession of the family. He d. s. p. bequeathing the residue of his property to his brother,

He wedded after the revolution, Mary, daughter of Patrick Nagle, esq. of Ballinamona Castle, in the county of Cork, by Catherine, his wife, daughter of Hugh de Lacy, esq. of Bruff, in Limerick, and was s. by his son.

PATRICK FAGAN, esq. of Killarney, who m. in 1732, Christiana, daughter of Thomas Fitzmaurice, esq. of Cossfoyle, in the county of Kerry, by Mary, his wife, daughter of Robert Rice, esq. of Ballangolline and had issue, inter alios, upon he retired with a pension, and the cross of the royal military order of St. Louis. Subsequently he lost considerable property by the French Revolution, and eventually died in London, 6th January, 1816, aged eighty-three.

This gentleman, for many years well known and highly esteemed in the English and French capitals as "the Chevalier de Fagan," m. Catharine, daughter of Joseph de Cortes, and had two sons, namely,

He m. in 1788, Maria-Theresa-Pauline, Marchioness de Lawoestine, daughter of Maximilian, Marquis de Lawoestine, and de Beclaeer, grandee of Spain of the first class, and thus became allied to the houses of Bourbon and Rohan Soubise in France. By royal permission he assumed the title of Count de Fagan. Following the example of his father and brother, he also emigrated at the commencement of the Revolution, but returned to France after the peace of Amiens. On the renewal of hostilities he was seized, and sent, as a prisoner of war to Verdun, where he resided for several years. Being recalled subsequently to Paris, he was charged with a commission of great importance to the cabinet of St. James's, but on his return he was imprisoned in the dungeon of Vincennes, under an accusation of having exceeded his instructions. He suffered, however, a detention of twenty-four hours only, Napoleon having deputed Baron Mounier, counsellor of state, to excuse the unjust conduct shewn towards him, and to testify his imperial satisfaction for the distinguished manner in which he had fulfilled his mission. 4. Patrick-Charles, b. 17th March, 1780, a brave and gallant officer in the same service as his brother; distinguished himself on various occasions during the Mahratta wars of 1803-4 and 1805, especially in the disastrous retreat of Colonel Monson, before the army of Tuswunt Rao Holkar, July, 1804. It was this officer who, when adjutant of the 1st battalion 12th regiment N. I. together with Lieutenant Grant, the adjutant of the 2nd, planted, under peculiar circumstances, the colours of their corps on the ramparts of Bhurtpore, in one of the assaults on that fortress during the siege of 1805, by the army under Lord Lake. in the relinquishment of the situation of Adjutant-general by Lieutenant-colonel George Fagan, his excellency must endeavour to diminish the effects of that loss, by rendering the memory of Lieutenant-Colonel Fagan's official exertions an example and incitement to the army.

"The universal tribute of acknowledgment paid to the ability and indefatigable zeal of Lieutenant-Colonel Fagan, ought to stimulate every officer to aim at attaining a similar character. This however is not to be acquired by arduous alone; recollection of the tone of Lieutenant-Colonel Fagan's professional energy should impress this conclusion on every one disposed to strive for equal reputation; that no talents, not even such as Lieutenant-Colonel Fagan possessed, will carry an individual to proud distinction, unless he joins to them, habits of application and a judicious direction of his genius.

"It is to the combination of these qualities, that Lieutenant-Colonel Fagan has owed the high estimation in which his talents were held, and the sorrow now expressed that the Service has ceased to benefit by them."

In 1825, he commanded a brigade at the siege and in the storm of the celebrated fortress of Bhurtpore. For his services on that occasion, he received the thanks of the commander in chief and the supreme government in India, was included in the thanks of both houses of Parliament to the army which achieved that important conquest, and finally was rewarded by his sovereign with the insignia of a companion of the Bath. In 1829, he was nominated to the staff as brigadier of the 2nd class, and appointed to command the district of Rohilkund. Lineage.

The Burrells are of very ancient date upon the borders of England and Scotland, particularly in that district formerly known by the name of the East Marches; their names occur in various records of the times and in family muniments, as Boraille, Borell, Burwell, but now generally Burrell.

On the 11th August, 9 RICHARD II. (A.D. 1385,) at Neubotilwode, (a place on the borders,) the king grants to his "leige Johannes Boraille de Tevydale," all the lands with the appurtenances which belonged to John Ker, in Altonburne and Neysebit, in Tevydale, and all the lands with the appurtenances which belonged to John de Aynslee and William Hessewell, in Doulfinesston and Edeleshevid, in Tevydale aforesaid, and which on account of their adhering to the king's enemies of Scotland had been confiscated, to hold to the said John Boraille and his heirs for ever, without any payment. (2 Rot. Scot. 75.)

In the same year, 9 RICHARD II. the same

John Burrell and Johannes de Budthorpe, gave to Thomas Strother one half of West Newton, in the parish of Kirknewton. (Hodgson's MSS.)

The Burrells, of the town or vill of Howtell, in the parish of Kirknewton, were an old family in this parish, and were the same as the Burrells of Milfield, in that parish, from whom Mr. Burrell is lineally descended; they both used the "Burrell porch," in Kirknewton church, as their common burial place.

The town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, the chief town connected with East Marches, was the principal place of residence of the Burrells; and they have been found to be settled there so early as the year 1250.

It is difficult, at this distance of time, to trace the connection between the family of Broomepark and that of Lord Willoughby de Eresby, (whose surname is Burrell,) and Sir Charles Burrell, but that they are of the same lineage there can be little doubt.

* By Frances Herne, his wife, daughter of John Bettesworth, esq. of Carhays, who was son of John Bettesworth, LL.D., by Frances, his wife, one of the two sisters and co-heirs of William Trevanion, of Carhays, in Cornwall, M.P. for Tregony, the other having married Admiral Bryon, the grandfather of Lord Bryon, the poet. John Trevanion Purnel Bettesworth Trevanion, the cousin of Mrs. Bryan Burrell, eldest son of John Bettesworth, took the name and arms of Trevanion, by sign manual in 1801, and is the present immediate representative of that ancient family, and possessor of Carhays. (See vol. i. p. 233).

In Cuckfield church, in Kent, there are numerous monuments to the memory of the ancestors of Lord Willoughby, and upon the oldest of them is the following inscription :

" Gerrard Burrell, D.D. Archdeacon and Residentary of Chichester, settled at Cuckfield, 1446, died April, 1508. He was the youngest son of Sir John Burrell, of Devonshire, who attended Henry V. to France, 1415, with one ship, 20 men at armes, and 40 archers. His grandfather, Ralph Burrell, descended from an ancient family in Northumberland, married Sismonda, daughter and co-heir of Walter Woodland, in Devonshire."

John Burrell, esq. was mayor of Berwick, 9th September, 1449. (Raine's North Durham Appx. No. 765.)

John Burrell, esq. was mayor of the same borough, 25th September, 1551. (Berwick Records.)

James Burrell, esq. surveyor, in 1602, of her majesty's works at Berwick, and from whom are many interesting communications to the privy council, respecting the destruction of the old wooden bridge over the Tweed, (Lansdowne MSS.) alderman of Berwick, and mayor of that borough in 1611. He erected the present stone bridge at Berwick.

THOMAS BURRELL, of Milfield, purchased a capital messuage and lands, called Slaty Raw, in the parish of Ford, by charter dated 16th February, 26 ELIZABETH, 1583-4; this estate was sold to Thomas Carr, esq. of Ford, and now belongs to the Marquis of Waterford. He was possessed also of a freehold estate at Milfield, and died 1615. James Burrell, of Berwick, alderman, was one of the administrators in trust of his effects. He left four sons and one daughter,

In 1697, he purchased great part of the remainder of Abberwick and the leasehold corn tithes of the townships of Botton and Abberwick; he was a very active magistrate of Northumberland during the reigns of Queen ANN and the two first GEORGES, as the records of this county most abundantly testify, and a firm supporter of the reigning family, during the rebellion of 1715. He married 1st July, 1680, at St. John's Church, Newcastle, Martha, daughter of George Reveley, of Newton Underwood and Thropple. He died and was buried in Bolton chancel, 15th July, 1700, where a neat monument is erected to her memory, and he died and was buried in the same place, 15th January, 1730-1. He had fifteen children, Marion.

Isabella-Lucy, died in August, 1835.

Alice-Elizabeth.

Mr. Malcolm represented Boston in the parliaments of 1826 and 1830.

Lineage.

This family is the representative, or chief of the clan Challum, or M'Callums, settled according to the traditions of the country from a very early period in Argyleshire, and originally styled the Clan Challum of Ariskeodnish, in which lordship most of their estates are still situated.

In the year 1414, Sir Duncan Campbell,* knight of Lochow, granted to REGINALD MALCOLM, laird of Corbarran, certain lands in Craignish and on the banks of Loch Avich, with the office of hereditary constable of his castles of Lochaffy and Craignish. He died A.D. 1446, and was succeeded by his son, JOHN, who was confirmed in his father's lands and offices, as is evident from a precept bearing date 1st December, 1448. This family, which seems soon after to have declined, appears to have been a branch of that of Poltallock, from the circumstance that the farm of Corbarran, or Corran, then the only remaining portion of their possessions, is said to have been bequeathed by the last of this race, to Zachary, the then proprietor of Poltallock, as his chief or representative of the elder branch of his house.

DONALD M'GILLESPIE VIC O'CHALLUM, or Donald, son of Archibald, son of Malcolm, was seized of the lands of Poltallock, A.D. 1562, as appears from a charter bearing date 18th May in that year. He m. Grizell, daughter of Stirling, of Kippendavie, and had a son,

DUNCAN M'DONALD, M'GILLESPIE, Vic O'Challum, who succeeded his father A. D. 1609. He m. a daughter of Neill Campbell, Bishop of Argyle, and had a son, Donald killed, r. p. A. D. 1647, when fighting in single combat with Alaster M'Col, surnamed Colkitto, at Ederline.†

* Sir Archibald Campbell, knight of Lochow in 1372, had two sons, Colin, surnamed Jongaloch, or the wonderful, and Duncan. Duncan was fostered and brought up by the Clan Challum, or M'Callums of Ariskeodnish, in the parish of Kilmartin, who, in order that the estate might devolve upon their foster-child, Duncan, set fire to the house in the town of Kilmartin, in which his elder brother, Colin, was passing the night. The latter was obliged to fly clothed in complete armour, but before he could effect his escape, and force his way out, his coat of mail had become so heated by the flames, that he was compelled to jump into a pool formed by the windings of the river Skeodnish, which flows at the foot of the eminence on which Kilmartin stands, which pool is pointed out by the Highlanders to this day, and called in Gaelic, Linna Licrach, or the Pool of the Coat of Mail.

† A battle took place May 25th, A. D. 1647, at Ederline, where Alaster and his men fought with their accustomed bravery. Among the most conspicuous men on the parliamentary side was Zachary, Uad Donald, More of Poltallock, famed for his great strength, and skill in the use of the broadsword. In the heat of the engagement Alaster met Donald, when he exclaimed, "You once made me your guest, yield, and this night be mine." "Let either of us gain the day," was Poltallock's answer, as he rushed on his foe.

Duncan died A. D. 1648, and was succeeded by his nephew,

The Rev. ARCHIBALD M'CALLUM, of Poltallock, minister of Kilmichael Glasrie, son of the Rev. John M'Callum,* who was brother of Duncan, and second son of Donald, of Poltallock. Archibald M'Callum m. Janet, eldest daughter of John Boyd, of Kirkdyk, in Kilmarnock, niece and heiress of the Rev. John Boyd, minister of the Baronie church in Glasgow; and d. in 1686, leaving three sons, Zachary, Donald, and Duncan. The eldest,

ZACHARY M'CALLUM, of Poltallock, succeeded his father in 1686. In 1687 we find him addressed as Laird of Poltallock, and baillie of Glasrie in a writ directed to him out of chancery for holding an inquest for ascertaining the value of the lands of Otter, then confiscated by JAMES II. He purchased the property of Knorkaton, with the proceeds, it is said, of the farm of Corbaran, or Corran, left to him, as before stated, by Malcolm, of Corbaran. He m. Janet, daughter of M'Lachlan, of Innischonnell, and dying in 1692, was succeeded by his son, ARCHIBALD M'CALLUM, of Poltallock, who, in 1697, sold his paternal estate to his uncle Donald, and emigrated to Ireland, where his line has since become extinct.

DONALD M'CALLUM, of Poltallock, who thus acquired the estate, m. Margaret, dau. of John Campbell, and had by her four sons, Archibald, Alexander, John, and George. He d. in 1703, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

ARCHIBALD M'CALLUM, of Poltallock, who m. a daughter of M'Lachlan, of M'Lachlan, but having no issue, the estate devolved at his death, in 1756, on his brother,

ALEXANDER M'CALLUM, of Poltallock, who m. Elizabeth, daughter of Dugald Clerk, of Blackcan and Pennymore, in the county of Argyle, by whom he had issue, a son Dugald, who, on his death at an extremely advanced age in 1779, became Alaster was losing ground, when some of his men came behind and cut Poltallock in the leg. The hero fell upon his knee, and M'Col turned away as assuming him no longer worthy of his attention. It is alleged that after all Poltallock slew seven of his assailants before he was himself killed. Chambers' Edinburgh Journal, vol. iv. p. 373.

Mrs. Hawkins succeeded to the representation of this, the elder branch of the family of Nicholl, of Llantwit Major, as well as to the representation of the Morgans of Tymawr, the Herberts of Magor, and the Perrotts of Llandegveth, at the decease of her father, the late William Nicholl, esq. in 1813.

Lineage.

The origin of the ancient family of Nicholl, written at various periods Nycol, Nicol, Nicoll, Nicolls, Nicholls and Nicholl, has been by antiquaries variously and largely treated upon. It is stated that, in the time of Edward the Confessor, one Nicholas de Albin, alias Nigell, or Nicholl, came over from Normandy, and was the common ancestor of the Nicholl family. In the county of Chester, Robert Fitz Nigell or Nicholl flourished soon after the Conquest, and in the same shire we find William, Baron of Malpas, who lived in the reigns of STEPHEN and HENRY II. bore for his arms "three pheons or darts' heads," as appears on his seal to the grant of the eighth part of Duckepton to his youngest son Richard, his second son, Robert, having married Mabel, daughter of Robert Fitz-Nigell.

John Fitz-Nicholas held courts in 1307, for the manor of Nichole, in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, called in the rolls the manor of Nicolls, or Fitz-Nicolls. John Fitz-Nicholl held the same manor from 1327 to 1377. The Nicholls of Essex bore for their arms "sa. a pheon arg." In the county of Northampton, William Nicolls, esq. of Hardwick, who was born in 1479, carried "sa. three pheons arg." and was ancestor of the Nicolls, afterwards baronets,* who had the same arms confirmed and ratified in 1588, with the addition of a canton arg. Camden assigned similar arms to the Nicholls of Trewane, in Cornwall, with a crescent for difference; and the seal of John Nicholl, esq. of Llantwitt Major, Glamorganshire, whose will was proved in 1599, was "sa. three pheons arg." thus fully proving that the different families of Nicholl have in all ages borne the pheons for their coat armour. The precise date of the settlement of the Nicholl family in Glamorganshire is not known, but from the will of John Nicholl, dated in 1598, and proved the following year, it is very evident they were a family of consequence, from the property they then possessed. John desires to be buried by his father, Ilyd Nicholl, in Llantwitt church, which Ilyd it is natural to suppose was born at Llantwitt, having been christened after the patron Saint of Llantwitt, Saint Iltutus, or Ilyd. † His property went, by will, to William Nicholl, esq. of Tredunnoch, and at his death, without male issue, it passed to Sir John Nicholl, kn. of Merthymawr.

‡ The ancient family of PERROTT derived their name from Castle Perrott, in Brittany, built in 957, by William de Perrott, whose great-grandson, Sir Richard Perrott, Seigneur de Perrott in 1066, furnished William of Normandy with his quota of ships and men, accompanied the expedition to England, and settling in Somersetshire, commenced the building of a city, whose remains are north and south Perrott, between which the river Perrott rises and runs into the Severn. Sir Richard left issue by his wife, daughter of Sancho Ramyno, second king of Aragon, a son and heir, SIR STEPHEN PERROTT, who, growing too powerful in the lands he inherited in Somersetshire, King HENRY I. called him thence, and gave him as much territory as he could conquer in South Wales, which was then in confusion. He was thus forced to leave, with regret, the infant city his father had founded; and to which he had given the name of Perrott; but not being able to contest it with Henry, he went into Gloucestershire to raise forces. Not willing, however, to lead his troops into a country of which he knew nothing, he went to Wales in disguise, in order to view the state of it, and was there struck with the beauty of the Princess Helen, daughter and sole heir of Marchin, descended from Howel Dda, King of South Wales. She was no less charmed with his graceful stature, his amiable and majestic countenance, and most wonderful brilliant and piercing eye, which commanded reverence from all that beheld it. this Princess, whom he married, gained him great part of that country, the respect and love of the people. They had issue, one son, Sir Andrew Perrott, Lord of Iystington, in Pembrokeshire, who claimed the kingdom of Wales in right of his mother, Helen, and collected a body of forces to defend his crown, but afterwards compromised the matter by having a grant of the land twenty miles round his camp; he built on the very spot where his army was encamped, a castle, which he called Herbeth or Narbeth, in Pembrokeshire, and placed there a garrison to defend his lands in the year 1112. These lands were afterwards converted into a forest, and is called the Forest of Narbeth. Sir Andrew left issue, Sir William, Lord of Iystington, and knight banneret, whose descendants continued to reside in Pembrokeshire until the heiress of the family conveyed the vast possessions into the Packington family. A younger son removed into Brecknockshire, and was ancestor of the Perrotts of that county, and also of those settled in Glamorganshire at Gellygare, one of whom, the Rev. Gregory Perrott, who had property at Gellygare, in the county of Glamorgan, and at Bedwely, in the county of Monmouth, born A.D. 1655, rector of Llandegveth, in the county of Monmouth, died 7th Sept., 1741, aged eighty-six, and was buried in the chancel at Llandegveth, leaving (by Blanch, his wife, daughter of William Lewis, esq. of Kilvanhanghod, in Glamorganshire, who died, aged seventy, 12th April, 1729, and was buried with her husband in the chancel at Llandegveth), John, Jerome, William, Anne and Elizabeth, wife of Meredith Evans, and an eldest son and heir, the Rev. Turberville, of Coety Castle.

This ancient and knightly family (the most powerful of all the Normans that settled in Glamorganshire) were, previous to their advent into that county, Lords of Crick Howell (now written Crickhowell), in Brecknockshire, which they obtained at the conquest of Brecknock, from Sir Bernard Nemarch, the Norman knight, who, in the early part of William Rufus's reign, entered Brecknockshire, and won the lordship from the then possessor, Bleddyn ap Meenyreth, a Welsh Prince.

SIR PAYN DE TURBERVILLE, was one of

The former, William Perrott, esq. of Llandegveth, b. 11th June, 1736, died unm. 19th March, 1779, aged forty-three, and was buried in Llandegveth church, leaving his sister, Jane Perrott, his heir, who died 26th July, 1812, having m. 4th July, 1769, William Nicholl, esq. of Tredunnoch, as above. Arms of Perrott, of Llandegveth; gules, three pears or, on a chief argent, a demi-lion issuant sable, armed of the field. Crest, a parrot vert, holding in his beak a pear or, with two leaves vert. Motto, Amo ut invenio. The arms as well as the crest alludes to the name, pear or, a golden pear. In the reign of Elizabeth a member of this family was one of the most powerful men of his day. Sir John Perrott, Lord of Haroldston and of Langhorn, which castle he built, he was likewise Lord of Carew and his castle, in Pembrokeshire, to which he added the fine part called Castle Perrott: he was lord-deputy, lieutenant-general, and general-governor of the kingdom of Ireland, admiral of England, a lord of the privy council, knight of the bath, &c. he possessed an estate of £22,000 per annum: he was m. twice; by his first wife he had a son, Sir Thomas, created a baronet, 28th June, 1611, who died before his patent was made out; by his second wife he had a son, Sir James Perrott, who garrisoned Carew and Langhorn castles with 1150 men, all at his own expence, and offered them as places of security to his sovereign when his troubles increased; he was of the king's council, and such was his affection to him for his loyalty, that he ordered a warrant for a patent, creating him Marquis of Narbeth, Earl and Viscount Carew, and Baron Perrott. After the restoration Charles II. neglected this family, whose castles had been torn from them, their estates plundered, and some given to Oliver's adherents; themselves loaded with fines, and their houses and parks destroyed.

Lineage.

The name FREWEN, which in ancient records is spelt variously, Frewyn, Freuen, Frewin, and Frewen, is a Saxon one of the most antiquity, and first occurs in a pedigree given at length in the Saxon Chronicle, from which we learn that Frewen was the grandfather of the celebrated hero,

Woden; or demi god, Woden; without contending for the authenticity of this pedigree, it will be sufficient to state in proof of its antiquity, that Asserius Menevensis, who wrote about the year 880, quotes it as a very ancient record in his day.

That a family of the name existed in the county of Worcester, about the time of the Norman conquest, we have incidental notice from William of Malmesbury, who in his life of St. Wolstan, the last Saxon Bishop of Worcester, relates an absurd story in which one Frewen a chaplain of his, is described as playing no very creditable part.* Wolstan was appointed to the bishoprick in 1062.

RICHARD FREWEN, living in 1430, was bailiff of Worcester in 1473.† He was one of the principal benefactors that assisted Sir Reginald Bray in restoring the abbey church of Great Malvern, of which monastery his relative, Richard Frewen, was prior, about 1480.‡ The effigies of him and his wife in stained glass were inserted in the abbey windows.§ He was father of

 As there exists a mistake respecting the place of this prelate's birth, (Wood stating that he was born in Kent,) it may be well to add, that it took place in an old house at Northiam, now used as a farm house, and called "Carriers;" it was at that time the residence of his father, John Frewen, there being no glebe house belonging to the living.

†† This eminent person, who became so distinguished a churchman, was educated in the free stone on the ground near the south wall of the church, commemorates his death and that of his son Francis. || His second son.

JOHN FREWEN, bapt. 1st July, 1599, was an intimate friend of Sir Thomas Coventry, of Cromb Dabitot, his near neighbour, and a judge of the Court of Common Pleas, through whose influence with Lord Chancellor Bromley, of Holt, he was, in 1603, presented to the rectory of Northiam in Sussex, which was then in the gift of the crown, in consequence of the patron (Anthony Viscount Montagu) being a Catholic. John Frewen died at Northiam, 2nd May, 1628. He was a learned puritan divine, and author of various works, of which we have only notice of the following:—¶

1. Certaine fruitful Instructions and necessary Doctrine to edifying in the Fear of God; dedicated to Sir Thomas Coventry, London, 1587.

2. Certaine fruitful Instructions, for the general Cause of the Reformation against the Slanders of the Pope and the League, London, 1589.

3. Certaine Sermons on the XI Chapter of St. Paul his Epistle to the Romanes; dedicated to Thomas Coventry, esq. of Cromb Dabitot, (afterwards Lord Keeper), London, 1612.

4. Certaine Choise Grounds and Principles of our Christian Religion; dedicated to Sir Thomas Coventry, Attorney General, London, 1622.

By his first wife, Eleanor, who was buried at Northiam, 8th September, 1606, he had seven children as follow, and by his second wife, Helen, daughter of Miles Fleet, of Sandhurst, in the county of Kent, married 7th October, 1607, buried 8th May, 1617, five more: the issue of the first marriage were,

A. January 25, 1608, and M. A. May 25, 1611, having made great proficiency in logic and philosophy, he was elected probationer fellow of the college, July 22, 1612, about which time he took orders, became a frequent preacher, and was divinity reader in the same college: he proceeded to the degree B. The sixth son,

STEPHEN FREWEN, bapt. 19th October, 1600, was a citizen of London, of the Skinners' Company: he realized a large fortune in trade, which was much increased by his inheriting Archbishop Frewen's property, of which he conveyed 27,000 guineas in specie in his carriage to London, after the prelates' funeral: this money which he deposited with Sir Robert Vyner, the banker, was by this last lent to KING CHARLES II. and all lost on the shutting up of the Ex-

Digby, the ambassador into Germany, and in 1622, accompanied him (then created Earl of Bristol) in the same capacity, to the court of Spain, where he was when Prince CHARLES came to Madrid as the suitor of the Infanta: he preached before the prince from the text 1 Kings xviii. 21, "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him." The Catholics were fully impressed with the idea that Charles was quite prepared to return to their faith, and he was continually appealed to on the subject:³ this sermon intended to confirm him in the Protestant religion, made a lasting impression, for on his accession to the throne, he called for Frewen by name, and put him into the list of his chaplains with his own hand.⁴

In 1625, he was made a prebendary of Canterbury; and on the death of Dr. Langton was elected president of Magdalen College, October 24, 1626, and compounded for his degree D.D. December 16th in that same year. In 1628 and 29, he executed the office of vice chancellor of Oxford, and September 13th, 1631, succeeded Dr. Warburton in the deanery of Gloucester. About the year 1635, he was inducted to the rectories of Stanlake, Oxfordshire, and Warneford, Hampshire, both in the gift of his college. In 1638-39, he again became vice chancellor at the particular request of Archbishop Laud, with whom he was most intimate. Whilst president of Magdalen, he was mainly instrumental in sending the University plate to the king at York, and he also lent £500 to the college, to be presented to Charles towards the expenses of the war, upon which the parliament ordered him to be apprehended, (July 7th, 1642,) but he withdrew, and did not return to Oxford until the king came there after the battle of Edgehill. In 1643, August 17th, he was nominated to succeed Dr. Wright in the See of Lichfield and Coventry, but the troubles of the times prevented his consecration till the ensuing year, when it was performed in the college chapel, by Archbishop Williams and others, in the month of April, 1644.⁵ Hacket speaks in the highest terms of Dr. Frewen's generosity, in leaving the presidency of his college, a secure and valuable situation, to brave all the dangers and opprobrium of a bishoprick at a time when the title was merely nominal, the bishops having been expelled from the House of Peers, and the property of the see exposed for sale.⁶ In 1652, by the act of November 18th, his property was declared to be forfeited for treason, and £1000 reward offered by Cromwell to any one who would bring him dead or alive; but his name being incorrectly inserted in the proclamation as Stephen Frewen, D.D. he found time to escape into France,⁷ where he remained till the fury of the times abated, when he returned and lived very privately, sometimes with his nephew at Fulham, in Middlesex, and sometimes at Banstead in Surrey.⁸

At the Restoration, Dr. Frewen being one of the nine bishops who survived the persecution, was nominated to the See of York, confirmed in Henry VIII's Chapel, Westminster, October 4, 1660, and about the same time appointed lord high almoner of England. chequer.* As a trifling compensation, government allowed him £300 per annum, and offered to settle the rent of the Post Office on him and his heirs for ever, which being then only £100 per annum, he did not think worth his acceptance, and he was deprived of the £300 annuity in the reign of King WILLIAM, by an alteration in the Excise, from which it arose. Mr. Alderman Frewen purchased Brickwall House of William White, esq. and bought other large estates in the counties of Lincoln, Middlesex, Kent, and Sussex. He lived to a great age, having survived two attacks of the plague, and died at Brickwall, and was buried at Northiam, 11th September, 1679.

Mr. Frewen married first, 9th April, 1629, Katherine, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Scott, of Goteley, in Northiam, and by her (who died in child-birth, and was buried in St. John Baptist's Church, London, 1st December, 1630.) had issue,

THOMAS, of whom presently.

He m. secondly in 1636, Elizabeth Greene, supposed to have been daughter of John

Greene, esq. serjeant-at-law, descended from the family of Green,† of Green's Norton, in Northamptonshire, and by her (who died and was buried in St. John's, London, 26th December, 1655.) had another son, John, bapt. 28th May, 1637, buried 2nd October, 1638.

He was s. by his elder son.

THOMAS FREWEN, esq. bapt. 27th September, 1630: returned to parliament for the borough of Rye in 1678, which place he represented in six successive parliaments, until 1698. He married first, Judith, sole daughter and heir of John Wolverstone, of Fulham, in the county of Middlesex, in whose right he inherited a large property there, and by whom (who died 29th September, 1666, in the twenty-seventh year of her age, and eleventh of her marriage, and lies buried in York Minster, †) he had five children. Mr. Frewen married secondly in 1671, Bridget,‡ daughter of Sir Thomas Laton, of Laton, in the county of York, and co-heiress of her brother, Charles Laton, inherited in her right, the large estates in would conform and accept it, Dr. Frewen had the grant of renewing leases in that See as well as York, which was exceedingly profitable, the lives having all fallen in during the Rebellion: this grant will not appear undeserved, when we consider the profitable preferment given up for a see which for near twenty years produced nothing, and the loss of all his temporal estate on account of his exertions in the royal cause. In 1660, October 28th, he assisted at the consecration of Gilbert Sheldon, Bishop of London, and in the January following, at that of Gilbert Trowside, Bishop of Bristol. In 1661, he was chairman of the Savoy Conference: his opponent Baxter speaks of him as a peaceable man, and one who refrained from taking an active part in the proceedings.¹ In 1663, December 20th, he assisted at the consecration of William Paul, Bishop of Oxford, to which he was commissioned by Archbishop Sheldon. This great prelate closed his eventful life, March 28th, 1664, and was buried May 3rd, under the east window of York Cathedral, where a handsome monument is erected to his memory.

Dr. Frewen was accounted a general scholar and good orator, but has left nothing extant except an oration and certain verses on the death of Prince Henry.² The works of the anonymous author of the Whole Duty of Man have by some been attributed to him, though apparently without sufficient reason: there are, however, in the possession of the present family the following works in his own hand writing:

A collection of Latin orations from 1628 to 1660; most of which were delivered by him in convocation whilst vice chancellor; one of them delivered before King CHARLES I. at Woodstock, in 1629, and another in the bishop's palace, London, on the election of Bishop Laud to the dignity of Chancellor of Oxford.

A common place book in folio, and another in quarto. The most interesting of his works, viz. "An account in Latin of his visit to the various German courts while chaplain to Lord Dight," has been unfortunately lost.

Dr. Frewen expended near £1500 in repairing the cathedral at Lichfield, and a large sum in improving the palace at Bishopsthorpe, where he entirely rebuilt the great dining room and chambers over it. He bequeathed by his will £1000 to Magdalen College, Oxford, with some smaller legacies for charitable purposes. The advowson of Northiam, which he inherited from his next brother, Thankful Frewen, he left to his nephew, Thomas Frewen, the third rector of this family, and all the rest of his property, amounting to £30,000, to his brother and executor, Stephen Frewen, alderman of London.³

Dr. Frewen was so particular in his moral character, that he never allowed a female servant to belong to his household: the circumstances attending his birth (sui filius utero matris vivente concisus) had such an effect on his mind that he resolved to remain single, and died unmarried.⁴

HENRY SCOTT, of Halden, died in 1472, in the lifetime of his father, and left issue,

Henry, who succeeded his grandfather; from him descended the eldest branch of the family,† who resided at Halden till Reginald Scott sold the mansion and estate to Sir Edward Hales.

THOMAS.

The second son,

THOMAS SCOTT, married Mildred, only daughter and heir of George Conghurst, of Conghurst, in the parish of Hawkhurst. This family of Conghurst had been seated here from time immemorial. Their original residence, called Old Conghurst, a castellated mansion situated close to the Level, (formerly an arm of the sea,) was burned by the Danes at a very remote period:‡ they subsequently removed to the high ground, where the present house is situated. This last house Thomas Scott, after his marriage, began to rebuild, but he died before it was finished, and his widow completed it. By her he had issue,

GEORGE, his heir.

‡ Nothing now remains of old Conghurst, except the scite, which is moated round, it is about half a mile from the present house; this latter has been much modernized, but still retains some ancient portions, particularly in the kitchen, where are to be seen the arms of Scott and Conghurst, quarterly, and underneath them the date, 1599.

But to a heavenly husband wed
There blest her soul lies in eternity

Lineage.

The Shuttleworths are mentioned in the records of Lancashire as resident in that county temp. RICHARD II. and at a very early period became seated at Gawthorp, by the marriage of Henry Shuttleworth with Agnes, daughter and heir of William de Hacking. The Gawthorp family was the parent stock whence diverged the many branches of the name seated in the counties of Lancaster, Derby, York, Durham, and Leicester. For fuller particulars of the Shuttleworths of Gawthorp, refer to vol. iii. p. 518; and to Nichols' Leicestershire, vol. ii. p. 474, for details of the Shuttleworths of Great Bowden.

HENRY SHUTTLEWORTH, esq. of Ribbles-ton, in Lancashire, and afterwards of Glentworth, Lincolnshire, only son of Edmond Shuttleworth, esq. and descended from a scion of the Gawthorp family, was nominated high sheriff of the county of Leicester in 1755. Digby, of which SIR KENELM DIGBY was so bright an ornament (for ample details of the Digbys refer to p. 464). By the heiress of Bletsoe, who died in 1786, Mr. Shuttleworth had issue,

* From the Northampton Herald County Newspaper.

"It is with the sincerest regret that we announce the death of Charles Shuttleworth, esq. of the Grange, Great Bowden, Leicestershire, who expired on Monday evening last, at his house in London, after a very short illness. His loss will be severely felt in the parish of Great Bowden, in the welfare of which he much interested himself. He was a man estimable in all the relations of life, possessing much active charity and benevolence, and so enthusiastic in all his undertakings, that he overcame difficulties which to other people would have been insurmountable. He was a good husband, an affectionate father, a kind master, a liberal landlord, a staunch and uncompromising friend; he had some of the bluntness, and all the hospitality of the good old English country squire, and he dies regretted by all who ever knew him. He had nearly completed the establishment of a national school in Great Bowden."

ROKEBY, OF ARTHINGWORTH.

ROKEBY, LANGHAM, esq. of Arthingworth House, in Northamptonshire, b. 6th March, 1784, lieutenant-colonel of the militia, a magistrate for the counties of Northampton and Leicester, and a deputy lieutenant of the former. Colonel Rokeby succeeded his father 16th December, 1826.

Lineage.

"A celebrity has recently been given (we quote the learned historian of Yorkshire, the Rev. Joseph Hunter,) to the romantic beauties of 'Rokeby,' by Sir Walter Scott. Few persons visit the neighbourhood without observing with what extreme accuracy of observation and felicity of expression the bard has described the passage through the glen:

A stern and lone, yet lovely road,
 As e'er the foot of minstrel trode;

or view 'Egliston's grey ruins,' or 'Rokeby's turrets high,' without feeling that the charm of poetry is thrown over them."

The poet has touched upon the historical interest which belongs to Rokeby and Mertham, and has given what professes to be a pedigree of their ancient lords, but it was no part of his plan to enter critically into their history. We shall endeavour to do so more minutely, and present the reader with more definite information on the antiquity, the character, and eminent services of the family who held for many centuries this now classic spot.

At the period of the Conquest, all the territory abutting on the Tees, at their northern border, was granted to Alan, Earl of Bretagne, and formed his English Earldom of Richmond. These broad lands were partitioned among the junior members of his family and his followers, and in the distribution, Rokeby became part of the possessions of the Fitz Alans, a northern baronial house, whose chief seat was at Bedale. But their interest at Rokeby was scarcely more than nominal, for beneath them was a subinfeudation, in favour of a family which, residing on the lands of Rokeby, was usually described as "De Rokeby," and eventually assumed that name as a personal appellation.

Tradition asserts that the family had been seated on these lands in Saxon times, but it first appeared prominent in public affairs in the person of THOMAS DE ROKEBY, whose rise in royal favour is circumstantially related by Froissart. "In the 1st year of the reign of EDWARD III." says the old Chronicler, "the Scots, under the command of the Earl of Moray and Sir James Douglas, ravaged the country as far as Newcastle. Edward was in those parts with a more powerful army, and an engagement was expected and wished for, when the Scotch army suddenly disappeared, and no information could be gained respecting the route they had taken. The young king caused it to be proclaimed throughout the host, that whoever should bring certain intelligence where the Scotch army were, should have one hundred pounds a year in land, and be made a knight by the king himself: immediately fifteen or sixteen knights and esquires passed the river with much danger, ascended the mountains, and then separated, each taking different routes. On the fourth day, Rokeby, who was one of them, gave the king an exact information where the Scotch army lay." "This," continues Hunter, "is not a legendary story invented by some family annalist or doating chronicler of public affairs, the veracity of the narrative being here supported by the most authentic records of the realm; and it is a gratifying fact that we are so often enabled to prove circumstances in our old Chronicles, (which on a first view have an air of romance and fable,) by fiscal documents, where least of all anything imaginary is to be found. In the Patent Rolls, 1 EDWARD III. m. 7, is a grant to Thomas de Rokeby of £100 to be taken annually from the Exchequer 'till £100 lands shall be provided for him, in which the service is described nearly as it is related by Froissart, and in the same rolls, 5 EDWARD III. m. 7, is a grant to him in fee of the manor of Paulinesgray, in Kent, with lands in the North which had lately belonged to Michael and Andrew de Harcle, forfeited in release of his £100 annuity from the Exchequer. Sir Thomas Rokeby subsequently held commands against the Scots, was twice high sheriff of Yorkshire, and became (12 and 13 EDWARD III.) governor of the castles of Berwick, Edinburgh, and Stirling. In 1346, he pre-eminently distinguished himself at the battle of Neville's Cross, and was one of the few magnates present at that engagement to whom the letter of thanks was addressed, of which a copy is to be found in the Fœdera. In 1349, he went to Ireland as lord justice, and held that appointment until 1355, when Maurice Fitz Thomas Earl of Desmond, succeeded him. The administration of Sir Thomas Rokeby, in Ireland, is famous for the attempt he made to abolish the custom of coigne and livery, a species of arbitrary purveyance for the persons in authority there, and a tradition has been handed down attested by Hollinshead, that being once censured for using wooden dishes and cups, as not benefitting his degree, Sir Thomas replied, that he would rather drink out of such cups and pay gold and silver, than drink out of gold and silver and make wooden payments. In the latter transactions of his life, Sir Thomas appears with the addition, "the Uncle," to his name; and another Sir Thomas Rokeby occurs, styled "the Nephew." He seems to have participated in the triumph of Neville's Cross, and to have accompanied the elder Rokeby to Ireland. A third SIR THOMAS ROKEBY was high sheriff of Yorkshire, 8th HENRY IV. and during the year of his shrievalty, the Earl of Northumberland made his last attempt to dethrone KING HENRY, Sir Thomas collecting the posse comitatus, met the earl at Bramham Moore, and a conflict ensued, in which Northumberland, and the Lord Bardolph were slain. The next Rokebys, distinguished in state affairs were WILLIAM ROKEBY, lord chancellor of Ireland and Archbishop of Dublin, who died in 1521, and Sir Richard Rokeby, his younger brother, comptroller to Cardinal Wolsey. The archbishop was interred in a sepulchral chapel built by himself at Sandal Parva, in Yorkshire, and his tomb still remains. While this eminent churchman was running the race of high preferment, the eldest branch of the family remained quietly on the hereditary patrimony of Rokeby and Mortham. In the reign of HENRY VII. the head of the house was another

SIR THOMAS ROKEBY, who had three sons; the two younger were the ancestors of families of the name resident at Marske and Staningford. The eldest son,

RALPH ROKEBY, esq. of Mortham, who succeeded to the paternal inheritance, was living in the reigns of HENRY VII. and HENRY VIII. The era of the "jargon" of the Felon Sow of Rokeby, which may be seen in the notes to the poem of Rokeby, refers to the time of this Ralph, and the Mrs. Rokeby mentioned in it, is supposed to be his wife, Margaret, eldest daughter and co-heir of Robert Danby, esq. of Yaf-forth, and also cousin and co-heir of Sir Richard Conyers, knt. By this lady he had issue,

THOMAS, his heir.

John, D.C.L. a learned divine and civilian.

Richard, a soldier under Lord Scroop, of Bolton, whose standard he is said to have borne at Flodden. He m. a daughter of Ellerker, of Risby, and had a son Thomas, a military officer, who d. s. p.

Ralph, of Skiers, an eminent lawyer, made serjeant-at-law 6 EDWARD VI. He m. Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Danby, esq. and had issue, Thomas, whose only daughter and heir Grace, m. Conyers, Lord Darcy and Earl of Holderuesse.

William, a soldier in the French wars.

Ralph, who left two daughters, Mabel, wife of Colonel Gabriel Savile; and Priscilla, of Captain Musgrave.

Robert, slain in France.

Dorothy, m. to William Rokeby, esq. of Hotham.

2. Ralph, who left behind him a MS. history of the ancient family of which he was a member. He m. first, Douglas, daughter of William Ferne, esq. of Don-caster, by whom he had no child, and secondly, Joan, daughter of John Portington, esq. of Port-ington, by whom he had a daughter, ANN, m. to Sir John Hotham, of Scarborough.

3. George, who m. first, Joan, second daughter and co-heir of Henry Rokeby, esq. of Kirk Sandall, and secondly, Elizabeth Ferne, widow of Anthony Roth-wood, by both of whom he had issue.

4. John, who m. Margery, daughter of Thomas Westby, esq. of Ranfield, and had, with two daughters, Margaret and Faith, one son, Thomas, who m. Mrs. Smith, of Beverley, and was father of Sir Thomas Rokeby, knt. Marshall de Camp in France.

3. Jane, m. to Robert Byard, gent.

4. Mary, m. to William Puleston, esq.

5. Margery, m. to William Head-ley.

The eldest son,

THOMAS Rokeby, esq. of Mortham is described by Ralph Rokeby, the historian of the family, as "a plain man as might be, whose words came always from his heart without feining, a trusty friend, a forward gentleman in the field, and a great housekeeper, whereby he reigned so in the heart and good will of his countrymen, that his son and heir, Christopher Rokeby, being assaulted at a quarterly race by Christopher Neville, (brother to the mighty Earl of Westmoreland,) whom the earl had sent thither with two men to kill him, was both defended and guarded from the violence of adversaries, and was able so to have rebounded the blows given him by them, that should have spilt the best blood in their bodies, of his part had been willing, for then not a gentleman in the field but cried a 'Rokeby:' but the good old Thomas, being then in the commission of the peace, commanded and entreated peace, (as he said,) it grieves me to see him bleed that bleeds, yet keep the peace." Thomas Rokeby, m. a daughter of Robert Constable, of Cliff, in Yorkshire, and had, with a daughter m. to Wycliff, of Wycliffe, four sons,

1. CHRISTOPHER, of Mortham, who m. Margaret, daughter of Sir Roger Lascellas, of Brackenburgh, and had, with daughters, two sons. The younger, Roger, d. s. p. the elder.

JOHN, of Mortham, appears by the visitation of Yorkshire, 1584, to have been then in prison in the Fleet, "religious causa." He m. a daughter of the ancient family of Thweng, and was succeeded by his son, who bore the favourite family name of

THOMAS, and was knighted.

Of his descendants little more than their names are recorded. It would, otherwise have been gratifying to have known something of the personal habits and actions of those in whose time the chief line of the ancient family of Rokeby fell to decay, and especially of Sir Thomas Rokeby himself, whose necessities must have been great, (it may be presumed) when he disposed of the domain at Rokeby. The purchaser was William Robinson, esq. and it remained with the Robinsons until sold to the father of the present proprietor, JOHN B. S. MORRITT, esq.

- II. Ralph, master of St. Katherine's and one of the masters of requests to Queen Elizabeth.
- III. THOMAS, of whose line we have to treat.
- IV. Anthony.

The third son,

THOMAS Rokeby, esq. is thus described by Ralph Rokeby, the historian of the family to whom we have already referred. "Thomas Rokeby I will mention with reverence, for he beareth about him continually an arde and ensign of valour and honourable service done to his country; for being at Norram Chase, lieutenant to his brother, Christopher, he had a spear broken in his face: after, in the chase, he dismounted himself to mount his captain, who had his horse slain under him, where exposing himself to all danger for his brother's deliverance, he was taken prisoner when others fled." Thomas Rokeby m. Katherine Leigh, and had issue,

WILLIAM, his heir.

The third son,

THOMAS Rokeby, esq. of Barnby, m. Elizabeth, sister of Sir William Bury, knt. of Grantham, Lincolnshire, and had with six daughters, five sons, namely, male issue, became extinct in 1706, by the death of his son Thomas, in that year.

II. Thomas (Sir), knt. sometime fellow of Catherine Hall, Cambridge, and afterwards of Gray's Inn, who became one of the judges of the Court of King's Bench. To this gentleman, who died s. p. there is a sumptuous monument in the chapel of Archbishop Rokeby, at Sandal.

III. John d. s. p.

IV. Joseph, who left, (beside two daughters, the elder Elizabeth m. to John Buxton, esq. and the younger to Richard Wyndlow, esq. of York.) an only son, Joseph, of New Building and Sandal in Yorkshire, in whom vested the representation of the family from 1706 to 1741, in which year he died s. p.

V. BENJAMIN, of whose line we have to treat.

Mr. Sergeant Drewe d. in 1622, was buried at Broadcliff, and s. by his eldest son,

SIR THOMAS DREWE, of the Grange, in Broadhambury, in the county of Devon, who received the honour of knighthood at the coronation of King CHARLES I. and was sheriff of his county in 10 JAMES I. Sir Thomas sold Killerton to Sir Arthur Accland, bart. and erected the family seat on the site of an ancient Grange of Doukeswell

Abbey.* He m. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Edward Moore, of Odiham, in the county of Southampton, and by her, who d. in 1635, had, with five daughters, Elizabeth, Mary, Bridget, Jane and Anne, two sons,

* The Grange was evidently built by Sir Thomas (on quitting the mansion at Killerton, which his father, the sergeant, had erected) upon the site of an ancient dwelling of the Abbots of the adjacent abbey of Donkeswell, to which monastery extensive lands in Broadhembury belonged, and a large portion of which had been purchased by servant Drewe from Henry, Earl of Southampton, and son of Thomas Wrothesley, Earl of Southampton, grantee at the dissolution. Some portions of the ancient house of the Abbot appear to remain. The dwelling built by Sir Thomas was a handsome mansion, in the form as it seems of an I in compliment to JAMES I. it has, however, undergone considerable alterations. One remarkable chamber, wainscoted with carved oak of very rich and elaborate design, and skilful workmanship, is still in perfect preservation; and presents a specimen, perhaps, unequalled, of the richly decorated withdrawing room of the time of JAMES I. The royal arms and initials of JAMES decorate the chimney-piece; and amongst the various ornaments are to be observed the bearings of the builder, Sir Thomas Drewe, and of the family of his wife, the Moores of Hampshire.

ful character will be found in vol. ii. of the work, p. 291, by his friend George Ellis, who after his decease, conducted the publication which first appeared in 1800.

* Major-general Sir Gregory Way entered the army in 1797, and on his voyage to America to join his regiment the 26th, was taken prisoner by a French privateer, and carried into Nantz: at length released from imprisonment by an exchange, he was appointed in 1800, lieutenant of the 35th regiment, and was engaged at the siege of Valetta and capture of Malta.

In 1802, he became captain of the 5th regiment, was in Lord Cathcart's expedition, and was wrecked off the Texel, and taken prisoner by the Dutch. He was afterwards in the expedition to Buenos Ayres, and led part of the light troops to the siege of the city: and in 1808, being appointed major of the 29th regiment, proceeded to Portugal, in which country, as well as in Spain, that regiment highly distinguished itself. At Roleia, Major Way on gaining the plateau with a few men and officers of his regiment, had the blade of his sword shot away at the hilt, at which moment the small party being charged by the enemy, he was rescued from the bayonet of a French grenadier by the gallantry of General Brenier. At Vimera, the capture of Oporto, Talavera, Albuera, and almost every conflict of that eventful war, the 29th were engaged: at the last, Major Way on the fall of his lieutenant-colonel succeeded to the command, and in the midst of action was shot through the body and his left arm fractured, and compelled to quit the field.

On his return in 1811, with the skeleton of the 29th reduced from their full number to about 100 effective force, Colonel Way, by considerable exertion re-formed the corps, and embarked a second time for the peninsula in 1813. But the heat of the climate, after the severe wounds he had received, made his return to England indispensable, when his majesty GEORGE IV. conferred on him the honour of knighthood, with permission to assume the order of the tower and sword, presented to him by the King of Portugal; and the appointment of companion of the Bath.

He was subsequently appointed to the staff in North Britain, as deputy-adjutant-general, and on that situation being abolished in 1827, was named colonel of the royal veteran battalion, and raised to the rank of major-general on the accession of WILLIAM IV.

Lineage.

JOHN DE BURGO, younger brother of Ulick de Burgo, ancestor of the Marquis of Clanrickarde, having accredited the bills of the citizens of Galway, was commonly known by the name of John, of Galwey, and for his signal services in defending Ball's Bridge, Limerick, against the great force of O'Brien, of Desmond, in 1361, received the honour of knighthood from Lionel, Duke of Clarence, the lord lieutenant of Ireland, by the name of SIR JOHN DE GALWEY, with permission to him and his heirs to carry in his arms the representation of Ball's Bridge, and the date, 1361, under the same, for ever. He also had granted to him and his heirs, the government of Limerick, with the privilege of being met at the bounds of the city by the mayor and corporation in their regalia, and the garrison with their arms and music to conduct him to his house. In addition, he received a grant of a house, garden, and mill, in every walled town in Ireland, and an entire street in Dublin, formerly known by the name of Galwey Lane, now part of Dame Street.

Sir John, from his constant attachment to the crown in those troubled times, and the services in the province of Connaught, and in the counties of Clare, Limerick, Cork, and Kerry, became so obnoxious to the disaffected, that they accused him of many crimes before EDWARD III. who cited him to appear before him, when he manifested his innocence so clearly, that the king granted him many confiscated lands, confirmed him in his title and privileges conferred by the Duke of Clarence, gave him for a motto, "Vincit veritas," and for arms, (in addition to his paternal coat,) viz. "Or, a cross gu. five mullets of the field." He resided at Dundangans, two miles from Cork, and ever after greatly contributed to advance the royal authority. (REPRESENTING THE FAMILY OF BAYNTUN.)

STARKEY, JOHN-EDWARD-ANDREW, esq. of Bromham, in the county of Wilts, b. 6th March, 1799, m. 17th April, 1833, Charlotte, fifth daughter of William Wyndham, esq. of Denton, and has a son and heir,

JOHN-BAYNTUN, b. 30th May, 1834.

Mr. Starkey succeeded his father 1st April, 1834.

Lineage.

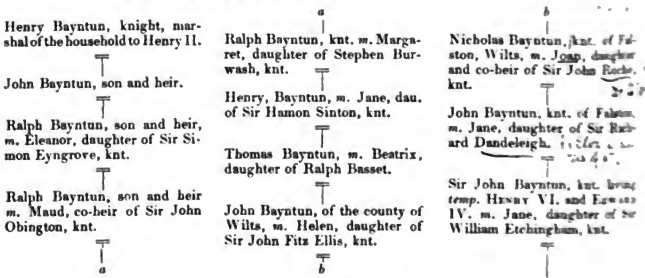

Sidney, in his Treatise on Government, affirms that, in antiquity of possession and name, few of the nobility equal the family of Bayntun. From a very curious pedigree preserved in the Museum, it appears that, in the time of HENRY II. the Bayntuns were knights of St. John of Jerusalem. Sir Henry Bayntun was knight marshal to the king, an office of high authority in those days, and his second son, Henry, a knight of St. John, was slain in Bretagne in 1201. Temp. HENRY IV. Sir Henry Bayntun taking part with the Earl of Northumberland, was beheaded at Berwick; and in 1471, Sir Robert Bayntun fought against the king at Tewkesbury, was made prisoner, and attainted. The Bayntuns were long settled at Falston, in Wiltshire; but upon the demise of Richard Beauchamp, Lord St. Amand.

JOHN BAYNTUN, esq. (son of the attainted Sir Robert Bayntun*), who was his cousin and heir, removed to Bromham, anciently the seat of the Roches. This John Bayntun, who was restored in blood 19 HENRY VII.

WILLIAM-ROBERT, b. 4th November, 1834, died in infancy.

Mr. Acton is a magistrate for the county of Worcester.

Lineage.

The Actons, whose antiquity of descent is equalled by few existing families, are of Saxon origin, and were in Worcestershire, according to Mr. Abingdon, previously to the CONQUEST. Soon after that great event, we find them seated at Ombersley, and in the 3rd HENRY III. the name of Elias de Acton, of Acton Hall, in Ombersley, appears with those of other knights and gentlemen summoned to serve upon a jury. The chief line of the family, the Actons, of Acton Hall, expired with WALTER ACTON, of Acton, who died without male issue, leaving his estates to his two daughters and co-heirs, of whom the elder, Joyce, m. Thomas Barneby, esq. of the Hull, ancestor of the Barnebys of Brockhampton, (see vol. iv. p. 2.) and the younger, Elizabeth, wedded, first, Mr. Broughton, and secondly, Walter Blount, esq. of Astley.

From a common ancestor with the Actons, of Acton, sprung the Actons of Sutton, who continued to reside there until the estate was conveyed by their heiress, Joice, daughter of Thomas Acton, esq. of Sutton, to her husband, Sir Thomas Lucy, of Charlecote, in Warwickshire, Shakespear's "Justice Shallow," (see vol. iii. p. 99). Of this family, that of Wolverton is a scion, being founded by a younger son of Sir Roger Acton, of Sutton, (the heir of Sir John Mortimer,) who married Alice, sister of William Cokesey, esq. and was father of

JOHN ACTON, who acquired the estate of Wolfrinton, or Wolverton, in Worcestershire, as heir to his uncle, the last of the Cokesseys. He was immediate ancestor of

m. Elizabeth, daughter of John Weeden, esq. of Sarsden, in the county of Oxford, and had a son and successor,

WILLIAM ACTON, esq. of Wolverton, who m. Barbara, daughter and co-heir of John Vincent, esq. benchet of Gray's Inn, by Barbara, his wife, daughter of George Rowe, esq. of Kingstone, in Devon, and died 12th April, 1679, leaving a son and successor,

WILLIAM ACTON, esq. of Wolverton, who m. Margaret, youngest daughter and co-heir of Richard Perkins, esq. of Beenham, in Berkshire, by Ann, his wife, daughter of John Eyston, esq. of Lye Farm, and had issue,

- i. WILLIAM, his heir.

- iii. Perkins, who m. Philadelphia Stapylton, of the ancient Catholic family of that name, and had two sons who died in infancy.
 - i. Barbara, } who both died nuns at
 - ii. Anne, } Dunkirk.

Mr. Acton died 16th June, 1725, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM ACTON, esq. of Wolverton, who m. Anne, daughter of William Tyler, descended in the female line from the Ardens of Warwickshire, and dying 6th September, 1763, left a son and successor, SPRY, OF PLACE.

SPRY, SIR SAMUEL-THOMAS, knt. of Place and Tregolls, both in Cornwall, born 25th July, 1804, succeeded his father Admiral Thomas Spry, 27th November, 1828. Sir Samuel, who is a magistrate, deputy-lieutenant, and deputy-warden for the county, has represented Bodmin* in parliament since 1832.

Lineage.

This ancient family, whose name has been variously written De Spre, De Spray, De Sprey, Spreye, Sprie, Sprye, and Spry, was seated at a very early period in the county of Devon, where several places still bear the designation, in its more ancient spelling; as the parish of Spreyton, or Spryeton, in the hundred of Wouford, Spray, or Sprey, in the parish of Maristow, in the hundred of Liffon, and Sprye Comb, in the parish of East Ashford, in the hundred of Braxton.† In the first named, the Spryes held lands by inheritance at a remote date, and so far back as the 15 HENRY VI. John Sprye, of Spryeton, was M.P. for Tavistock. His descendant and representative, John Sprye, of Spryeton, living temp. HENRY VII. having no male issue, conveyed his lands and tenements in Sprye, Spryeton and Stowford, Devon, from the male line of the family, to trustees, for the use of Beatrice, his daughter, and William Gregory, her husband, and their issue in tail; which settlement became, in the reign of ELIZABETH, the subject of a suit in Chancery, between their grandson and heir William Gregory, and others.‡ After this alienation of the lands bearing the name in Devonshire, the heir male moving across the river Tamar, settled on its opposite bank at Cutcrewe, in the parish of St. Germans, while a younger member of the family seated himself at Bodmin, both in Cornwall, in which shire they received territorial grants from HENRY VIII. at the dissolution of the monasteries, including the Priory of Place.

Several pedigrees of the Spryes are recorded in the Herald's Visitations of both counties; those of Cornwall commencing with "THOMAS SPRIE de Cutcrewe in Comit. Cornubia, arm. nup. Comit. Devonie;" to whose great-grand-sons the arms, crest, and motto of their ancestors were confirmed by Sir William Segar, garter-king-of-arms, 28th March, 1619. Thomas Sprie, the first seated at Cutcrewe, married Katharine, daughter of John Bake, of Lanrake, and had two sons, who married two sisters, the only children and co-heirs of JOHN TRE-

* Of the family of Spry it is somewhat singular that it should become a parliamentary one at three very remarkable periods: John Sprye represented Tavistock in the reign of HENRY VII., when York and Lancaster united; Arthur Spry sat for St. Mawes at the Restoration, and Sir Samuel came in for Bodmin, its first representative under the Reform act.

† Spray Radulphus, styled "Serricus Regis," was named in writs tested at Westminster, 29th August, and at Windsor, 29th September, 6 EDWARD II. 1312, touching cattle purveyed for the king in Devon, and to be sent up to Westminster.—Parliamentary Writs.

‡ In the same reign, Thomas Sprie, was defendant in a suit in chancery, touching a tenement in the parish of Buckland Monachorum, in Devon, previously the inheritance of William Crymer, esq. of that parish: while Hugh Sprye, was defendant of a suit in the same court, touching a messuage and lands part of the manor of Penpoll, in Cornwall, of which John Treggian, esq. was theretofore lord: and Nicholas Sprey, the defendant in another suit in that court, concerning the manor and lands of Tregenver, within the parish of Budock, also in Cornwall; the pleadings in which mention a fine levied between the defendant and John Killigrew, esq. and others, of lands and tenements in Rosemaryn, Budock, Caryvet, Govyse, Prebend, Cubert, and Cranlocke.—Proceedings in Chancery in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

NORTH, of Cornewe and Tillond in Cornwall, the last male of the younger branch of the very ancient and powerful family of Trenowth of Trenowth, with whose descent, as briefly recorded in the Harl. MSS. 1079, and 1162, we shall commence this lineage until the line merges in that of Sprye, merely adding of the extinct house of Trenowth, than which none in Cornwall has ranked higher in antiquity, alliance, or possessions, that many of its members sat in parliament for the county, and for several of the western boroughs, at very early periods.

JOHN DE TRENOWTH, in Probus, Cornwall, the first recorded in the Visitations, was father of

STEPHEN DE TRENOWTH, who m. Johanna, daughter of Richard de Trenaco, and had a son and successor,

MICHAEL DE TRENOWTH, who, by Margaret Butler, his wife, had four sons, Michael, Ralph, John, and Thomas. The eldest son,

MICHAEL DE TRENOWTH, succeeded his father at Trenowth, but died without issue, when his next brother,

RALPH DE TRENOWTH, became heir. He m. the daughter of Richard Bushell, and had three sons, John, Thomas, and Richard. The eldest son,

JOHN TRENOWTH, of Trenowth, considerably increased his patrimony by marriage with Jane, the elder of the two daughters and co-heirs (by Alice, his wife, daughter of William Cheynduit, of Bodannan), of Stephen Trejago, of Fentongollan, in Cornwall, representative of a younger branch of the Trejagoes of Trejago, in Crantock; which seated itself at Fentongollan as early as the reign of EDWARD II.* By this lady, John Trenowth had two sons, of whom the younger was ancestor of a branch which continued at Trenowth until the time of HENRY VIII. when it terminated in co-heiresses, who married Boscawen, Borlase, and Hearle. The elder son and heir,

RALPH TRENOWTH, removed to Fentongollan. He m. Jane, daughter of Sir William Bassett, and was succeeded by his son,

JOHN TRENOWTH, of Fentongollan, who

* BODANNON, or BODANNAN, a manor in the parish of Edddyon, or Endillion, in the hundred of Trigg, and deanery of Trigg minor, to which manor the bailiffry of that hundred, said to have been sometime called the hundred of Bodannan, was anciently annexed, lying about five miles from Wadbridge, and seven miles from Camelford, was a seat of the CHEYNDUITS,¹ a family of considerable antiquity and distinction, whereof Robert de Cheyni, of Bodanan, was sheriff of Cornwall, 5 EDWARD I. 1277, John Chenduit knight of the shire, 18 RICHARD II. 1394, and Sir John Cheynduit, 9 HENRY IV. and 8 HENRY V. 1407, and 1420. They bore gu. a lion rampant regardant, arg. within an orle of acorns, or,² and became extinct in the reign of HENRY VI. when the co-heiresses m. Trejago and Roscarrock, between which families their estates were divided. Bodannan fell to the share of Roscarrock, by whose descendant, John Roscarrock, esq. it was sold in 1586, to Nicholas Dagge, who eleven years after, in 1597, disposed of it to Henry Rolle, esq. of whose descendant of the same name it was purchased in 1739, by John Lyne, esq. whose son the Rev. Philip Lynne, LL.D. was its proprietor in 1814. In the chancel of Endillion Church, there is an ancient uninscribed tomb, said to be of one of this family, and by tradition, of a Lord Cheyney.

The family of Trejago, of Trejago, in Crantock county of Cornwall, a parish bordering on the Bristol channel, was also of considerable note and power in that county at a very ancient period. In 17 EDWARD II. 1323, we have a list of knights and esquires, all of whom held forty livres of laud. The high sheriff of the shire at that time was John de Trejago, who was among the first class of landholders. The heiress of the Trejago branch married MYNORS, in the reign of EDWARD IV. The Fentongollan branch settled at that place in the reign of EDWARD VI. in the 18th year of which sovereign, Johannes de Trejago thereof was high sheriff of the county, and through the first half of the fourteenth century, members of this family were returned knights of the shire in parliament, as follows:—

35 EDWARD I. 1306, John de Trejago, with Henry de Bodrigan. 6 EDWARD II. 1311, John de Trejago, with Thomas de Erchdeckne. 12 EDWARD II. 1318, John de Trejago, with Edward Erchdeckne. 2 EDWARD III. 1328, John de Trejago, with John de Valetort. 12 EDWARD III. 1328, John de Trejago, with Edward Erchdeckne. 14 EDWARD III. 1340, John de Trejago, with Michael Petit. John de Trejago, with John Arundell.

And 5 HENRY V. 1417, Richard Trejago and J. Butt, were chosen members for the borough of Liskeard. The ancient arms of Trejago were arg. on a chevron sa. between three balls gu. in five bezants of the field. At a later period there bore, or, a chevron between three crosses crosslet sa. The Fentongollan branch married the heiress of Trewarthenick, and a co-heiress of Cherynack, and the heiress of Trejago, of Fentongollan. Trenowth.

¹ STRICKSTENTON, or TRIGGENSTENTON, a parcel of the manor which belonged to the family of Mache in 1620, and was subsequently the property of Mr. Clements, is said to have been also a seat of the CHEYNDUITS, but no remains of a mansion are at this time visible.

² They have been erroneously stated also to have borne: gu. four lozenges conjoined in fess, each charged with an escallop shell sa.

m. Jane, daughter and co-heir of Jacob Nanfan,* of Trethewel in St. Evall, in the hundred and deanery of Ryder, near St. Columb and Padstow, descended from Nanfan of Nanfan, an ancient and eminent Cornish family. By this lady he had two sons, JOHN and WILLIAM. The elder,

JOHN TRENOWTH, of Fentongollan, m. Honor, daughter and heir of William Tregarthen, and died without male issue in 1497, when the possessions of this, the eldest branch of the family, devolved on his four daughters and co-heirs who married Carminow, St. Anbyn, Raynard, Stradling and Godolphin. The male line of the family was continued by his younger brother,

WILLIAM TRENOWTH, of Cornave, father of

STEPHEN TRENOWTH, who m. a daughter and co-heir of John Blomptin, or Blompin, and had a son and successor,

JOHN TRENOWTH, of Tillond, in Cornwall, who left by his wife, the daughter of — Beile, of Stoke, two daughters, his co-heirs, ELIZABETH and CATHARINE, who married THOMAS and JOHN SPRYE, the sons of

THOMAS SPRYE, or SPRIE, of Cutcrewe, who came out of Devonshire, and was the first of the family who settled in Cornwall. He m. Catharine, daughter of John Bake, of Lanrake, and had the before mentioned two sons, namely,

1. THOMAS, his heir.

11. JOHN, to whom his father gave Cutcrewe. He m. first, Catharine, second daughter and co-heir of John Trenowth, of Tillond; by whom he had a daughter Elizabeth, wife of John Vashmont, esq. and secondly, a daughter of John Hendy, esq. by whom he had with three daughters, Alice, m. to John Trewbody, of Treworrick; Joan, m. to John Debyll, of Insworth; and Eliza, m. to John Galston, of Plymouth; three sons, namely, the Sprys of Boyton and Exeter.

2. JOHN, of Trewinney, in Cornwall.

The elder son,

John Nanfan in the reign of HENRY VI. and not now known as a manor.

† The manor and mansion house of BLISLAND, a parish near Bodmin, did also belong at this time to the family. It was granted by HENRY VII. to the Stanhopes, and passed from them successively to the families of Parker, Reynolds, and Sprye. At the period of the civil wars, William Sprye was there settled, and was so active an adherent of the royal party in his shire, that serving in Penennis Castle, as one of its principal commanders at the time of its surrender, though comprised in the articles granted by Fairfax to its defenders, yet had his estates included, by vote of the House of Com-

* The manor of Trethewell, said to have been purchased by John Nanfan in the reign of HENRY VI. passed by a female heir on the death of Richard Nanfan without male issue, to the family of Erissey, and by successive sales to those of Grenville, Smith, and Leach. It was one of the manors which having been forfeited by Sir Robert Tresilian's attunder, was granted to his widow, the heiress of Hervis, and her second husband Sir John Coleshill. The property is now in the possession of Sir Samuel Thomas Spry.

HALSB, in his parochial history of the county, also speaks of a manor named Tregeryn, in the parish of Padstow, as having been purchased by 1620, m. Catharine, daughter of Arthur Ashford, esq. of Wonwell, in Devon, and had four sons, ARTHUR, Thomas, Henry, and Robert. The eldest,

ARTHUR SPRYE, esq. was the first of the family who fixed his residence at Place, or

Palace, granted to them by HENRY VIII. It is in the parish of St. Anthony, in Roseland, which church (extra parochial) was erected and dedicated to that saint in 1124, by William, bishop of Exeter. Arthur Sprye was returned in 1660, with Mr. Cloberry, mons, 26th October, 1652, in the bill for the sale of lands, forfeited to the Commonwealth for treason, thereon he presented the following petition to:—

"The Honourable the Commons, for relief upon articles, the humble Petition of William Sprye, of Blisland in the county of Cornwall, Upon which petition the following order was passed.

"Exchequer Chamber, Westminster, medons. daie, 1st December, 1652. By the commissioners appointed for reliefe upon articles of warr.

"Upon receiving the petition of William Sprye, it is ordered that a coppie thereof attested by the registrar of this court shall be delivered to the commissioners compounding with delinquents, who are desired to state the case as the same remains before them, with what else they shall think fitt to urge thereupon. "Sworn before the commissioners, 11th January, 1652.—R. M."

After this, 3rd October, 1653, a resolution of Parliament was passed permitting the composition of the parties claiming the benefit of these articles and 13th of that month the registrar, Mr. Reading, reports on the petition of Walter Langdon, esq. according to their order of the 11th, to the commissioners for composition that:—

"I finde that the 3rd October, 1653, Colonnell Brans, reported from the committee for petitions.

"Which was then read; and then it was

"Resolved by the Parliament, that Walter Langdon be admitted to composition for his estate after the rate of two years value, &c."

In the list of gentry of Cornwall, annexed to the "Britannia," at the later period of 1674, are the names of George Spry, esq. of Blisland.

Arthur Spry, esq. of Place, and Nicholas Spry, esq. of St. Kew.

The last of the family who inherited the Manor House of Blisland, which was formerly the residence of the lords of the manor, and is now occupied by labourers, its ancient magnificence having departed with the owners of this name, was Lieutenant-general Horatio Spry, who died in October, 1811, aged eighty-two, in Hampshire, at the residence of his son-in-law Rear-admiral Falkner, who had there died two years previously at the fiftieth year of his age. This Rear-admiral Falkner, was eldest son and heir of Admiral Falkner, whose family claims a pre-eminence in the naval history of the British Isles; for from the close of the 17th century, and even previously to that time, it uniformly adorned the list of our Admiralty Board. One of Admiral Falkner's ancestors had the honour of receiving the flag of the renowned czar, Peter of Russia, when serving under Sir John Norris in the Baltic.

M. P. for the borough of St. Mawes; and again in 1661, the first parliament after the Restoration, with Sir William Tredenham, and continued as its representative until 1678. He acted as a Commissioner of Prizes; and as such, his name is among those given in that virulent party tract of the period, "Flagellum Parliamentarium," professing to record the different motives which induced nearly two hundred members of that parliament to become the mere instruments of the crown, in the exercise of their senatorial duties. He m. first, Mary, daughter of Richard Gayer, who died 4th May, 1656, and was buried in Anthony Church. He m. secondly, a daughter of — Hele, and dying in 1685, was buried in the church of Anthony, where is a stately monument to his memory, having a bust placed between two sorrowing female figures, intended to represent his two wives, and bearing the arms of Sprye, Gayer, and Hele. He left a son and successor,

GEORGE SPRY, esq. of Place House, a magistrate for Cornwall at the death of GEORGE I. He m. a daughter and co-heir of — Bullock, and had issue,

ARTHUR, his heir.

RICHARD, (Sir) knight, successor to his brother.

George Spry died in 1730, (on the 10th November, of which year letters of administration was granted in London, and was buried in Anthony Church), and was s. by his son,

ARTHUR SPRY, esq. of Place House, at whose decease unmarried, in 1756, the estates devolved on his brother,

SIR RICHARD SPRY, knight, of Place House, a distinguished admiral who accompanied Boscawen in several of his enterprising expeditions, greatly assisted in the reduction of Louisburgh, and in the capture of many of the enemy's ships. In 1760, he was appointed to the Oxford, and displayed much watchful activity against those vessels of the enemy that escaped the defeat of Conflans. These and many other important services, were graciously noticed by the sovereign, to whom he was specially introduced 15th March, 1761, at St. James's. In 1766, he was made commodore, and commander of a squadron stationed in the Mediterranean, having his broad pendant on board the Jersey. In 1769, he returned to England, and in the following year was made rear-admiral of the Blue, and soon after the White. In 1775, he held a command in the fleet assembled at Portsmouth, which was reviewed by the King, who then, on the quarter deck of his ship, conferred the honour of knighthood upon Admiral Spry. Sir Richard subsequently attained the rank of rear-admiral of the Red, and served as commander in chief on the coast of America, and in the Mediterranean, and as port-admiral at Plymouth; and was also appointed envoy to the Emperor of Morocco. He died unmarried at Place House, 1st December, 1775, was buried in Anthony Church, and succeeded by the eldest son of his sister Mary, his nephew,

ADMIRAL THOMAS DAVY, who, 13th April, 1779, took, by royal licence and authority, the surname and arms of SPRY only. This officer also distinguished himself in the American war, and held the rank of admiral for the long period of thirty-two years. Retiring from active service, he resided chiefly at Place House, acting as a magistrate for the county. He m. 9th February, 1796, Anna-Maria, sister and sole heiress of Samuel Thomas, esq. of Tregolls, in Cornwall, high sheriff of that county,* and by her had issue, two sons and two daughters,

i. Anna-Maria, m. to Edward Carlyon, esq. of Greenway, near Totness, in Devon, a lieutenant-colonel in the army, and a magistrate for that county as well as for Cornwall.

ii. Mary.

in 1715. Rear-admiral Falkner was advanced to post rank in 1782, and promoted to his flag in 1804. He left issue by his wife, the daughter of General Horatio Spry, to whom he was m. at Titchfield, 5th March, 1789, three children, the eldest of whom, Jonathan, had just entered the royal navy, at the time of his father's death, when he was serving as a midshipman with Admiral Purvis in the Mediterranean. It is to his memory that the national monument in St. Paul's Cathedral was erected.

* The Barton of Tregolls, in the parish of St.

Clements, in the deanery of Powder, and west division of that hundred, two miles from Truro, was many years in the family of THOMAS. The late Samuel Thomas, esq. who died in 1796, bequeathed it to his sister, the wife of Thomas [Davy,] Spry, esq. admiral of the white. In the parish church is a monument by Bacon, in memory of the foregoing Samuel Thomas, esq. and a tablet for Honor, wife of John Thomas, who died in 1777, aged ninety-three. The Thomases of Tregolls were a branch of the family of Thomas of Trethake, which coming from Wales, settled in Cornwall, in the 16th century.

Admiral Spry d. 27th November, 1828, aged seventy-four, was buried in Anthony Church, and s. by his son, the present Sir SAMUEL-THOMAS SPRY, of Place, and Tregolls, M.P. for Bodmin.

The family of Ferrant or Ferrand, of Norman extraction, appears to have come into England under the protection of the ancient Earl of Albermarle, and held for many centuries the important office of warden of Skipton Castle. Of the Skipton family, was possessed a chateau and domain near Padubon, in Hesse Cassel, in the middle of the last century. The other, which was the original, resided near Ypres, of which city several of them were chief magistrates. ALEXANDER, the first of whom anything is known, followed Philip of Alsace to the second Crusades: and acquitted himself so well, that on his return he received a patent of gentility, and a grant of arms, viz. a poignard and cross quarterly; crest, a cross upon a wreath; motto, "animose certavit." His descendants, however, paid less deference to the Papal authority and embraced the reformed religion. During the persecution which Cardinal Richelieu renewed against its adherents, and the desperate resistance of those who were besieged in Rochelle, several families fled to England, and settled at Hatfield near Doncaster about the year 1628. Among them was

RICHARD FERRAND, citizen of London, who lies interred in the minster of Beverley, with this epitaph on a brass plate in the nave:

CHARLES DE LA PRYME, who left an estate in Flanders, which his descendants in vain attempted to recover. He joined with Vermuyden, and other refugees, in draining Hatfield chase, under a grant from CHARLES I. The work was effective, but proved disadvantageous to the adventurers.* He left two sons; of Abraham, nothing more is known, than that he died 23rd July, 1687, and was according to the account of his nephew "an honest, learned, pious, wise, and understanding man."†

MATHIAS DE LA PRYME, the other, was b. 31st August, 1645, and m. in April, 1670, Sarah, daughter of Peter Smagge, "a rich Frenchman, that with his whole family was forced from Paris by persecution for his faith, and was come to live also in these levels."‡ In 1680, he removed to Crewtrus Hall, a large house built in the levels by Mynheer van Halhenburg, one of the original drainers, where the family continued to reside, till they quitted that part of Yorkshire. He d. 29th July, 1694. From his epitaph in Hatfield Church, it might be supposed that he was born at Ypres. The ambiguous expression may be accounted for by the natural attachment which these emigrants long entertained to the place of their origin, and the cherished idea of return. The French language was preserved among them, and divine service performed in it at the chapel of Santoft for two generations.

ABRAHAM DE LA PRYME, the eldest son of Mathias, was b. 15th January, 1671. When only twelve years old, he began to write "Ephemeris vite, or a diary of my own life, containing an account likewise, of the most observable and remarkable things that I have taken notice of from my youth up hitherto." He was admitted at St. John's College, Cambridge, in 1690. In addition to the usual classical and philosophical studies, he applied himself to natural history, chemistry, and magic!

The ardent curiosity and inexperience of young minds made them yield easily to the superstitions of the times: it seems to have been then common among the more learned and courageous students; nor were even several of the fellows superior to these delusions. Abraham, with some of his friends, made several attempts to hold intercourse with the world unknown; and he expresses his mortification "that nothing appeared. quamvis omnia ritè peracta." His mind, however, soon became emancipated from every species of superstition; and on a future occasion, (the Surry imposture), he took considerable pains to expose the improbability of preternatural appearances. In 1694, he took the degree of B.A. and returned to Hatfield, but finding that learning was not much esteemed there, he went back to Cambridge, and occupied himself in composing a volume which he entitles, "Curiosa de se, or private thoughts of one inquisitive into the knowledge of nature and things."

In 1695, he took orders, and settled successively upon several curacies in Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, "it being my fate," says he, "to stay commonly no longer in one place than till I have gotten the antiquities thereof, and the view of what MSS. I can meet with." In 1698 he went to York, to take priest's orders. The archbishop, Dr. Sharp, who had seen a table of contents of his MS. history of Hatfield, expressed great approbation, with promises of patronage which he never fulfilled. Dr. Gale the celebrated antiquary, then dean of that cathedral, also expressed a desire to become acquainted with him, an interview accordingly took place, and they continued ever afterwards in frequent correspondence and strong friendship. Some of his papers which had found their way into the Philosophical Transactions, induced Sir Hans Sloane to enter into a correspondence with him on subjects of natural history, and to procure his election as fellow of the Royal Society. In 1701, he was presented by the Duke of Devonshire with the living of Thorne, in the West Riding of Yorkshire; but he did not long enjoy it, a consumption, occasioned probably by intense study, put a period to his useful labours, 13th June, 1704. He was never married, nor does it appear that his pursuits ever allowed him leisure to be in love. His celebrity has been inferior to his deserts. The publication of his larger works, (which he perpetually deferred in hopes of rendering them more complete), has never taken place, and his scientific papers in the Philosophical Transactions have been partly superseded by recent discoveries. His diary is written with considerable naïveté. It contains besides his antiquarian and topographical memoranda, much information on the state of the country; it abounds with illustrations and anecdotes of the manners, politics, and history of the times. His property devolved at his death on his only brother,

Mr. Manley succeeded his father, Admiral Manley, 14th October, 1837.

Lineage.

This family, one of the most ancient of the landed gentry of England, is mentioned in "Holinshed's Chronicles," as amongst the number of those who came over with WILLIAM the Conqueror, and the name is included in "the Roll of Battle Abbey." The records and pedigree commence in the year 1157, and have been continued without interruption to the present time. The head of the family in the reign of HENRY II. (1157).

ROGER MANLEY, was seated at Manley, in Cheshire, where his descendants continued to reside for many centuries, and are often mentioned in the histories of that county, as having filled the office of sheriff in the reign of EDWARD III. and in many subsequent reigns. About the year 1520, the Manleys removed from Cheshire to Erbistock, in Denbighshire, and resided there for about two hundred years, on a property which still belongs to the family; but the old hall, having become dilapidated, is now converted into a farm house.

In the reign of JAMES I. SIR RICHARD MANLEY, (who is mentioned in "the Life of Lord Clarendon,") was controller of the household to HENRY Prince of Wales, and a member of the board of green cloth.

In the reign of CHARLES I. SIR FRANCIS MANLEY, of Erbistock, one of the judges of Wales, married a daughter of Sir Gerard Eyton, of Eyton, and had one son, CORNELIUS MANLEY, who was made constable of Harleigh Castle by CHARLES II. He left an only daughter, Rebecca, who m. the Rev. J. Laurence, but died without issue. Sir Francis Manley had two brothers, Sir Roger Manley, a captain in CHARLES II.'s regiment of guards, and governor of Languard Fort, who died without issue, and

JOHN MANLEY, esq. who was a major in Cromwell's army, afterwards M. P. for Bridport, and postmaster-general in the reign of WILLIAM III. He married Margaret, daughter of Isaac Dorislaus, who was murdered at the Hague, when he was ambassador to the States of Holland from the parliament. By this lady he had two sons, of whom the elder, JOHN, M.P. for Truro, then for Bossiney, and surveyor general to Queen ANN, died without issue. The younger,

ISAAC MANLEY, esq. postmaster-general in Ireland, in the reign of WILLIAM III. m. Mary, daughter of William Newland, esq. of Nursells, Herts, and had a son and successor,

JOHN MANLEY, esq. barrister-at-law, and bencher of the Middle Temple, who m. Anne, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Hammond, esq. of London, and died in 1801, having had with two daughters, three sons,

1. JOHN, captain in the 33rd regiment, and during the first American war, on the staff of Lord Cornwallis, from whom he received the public thanks on several occasions for his gallant conduct. He m. Catherine Lisle, of Moyles Court, Hants, (a descendant of the unfortunate Lady Lisle, beheaded in JAMES II.'s reign,) but died without issue.

The second son,

ISAAC GEORGE MANLEY, esq. entered the royal navy in 1772, and sailed with Capt. Cook, during his first voyage round the world: he was a lieutenant on board the Fairy, in Lord Rodney's celebrated victory on the 12th April, 1786, and after passing through the various gradations, was promoted to the rank of Admiral of the Red in 1837. Lineage.

This is a branch from the O'Donovans of the county of Cork, (see vol. iii. p. 398,) but when it removed into the county of Wexford is uncertain; traditionally, two brothers, Murrough and Cornelius, (head of the family of Clonmore, and of which line Juliana Donovan, Countess of Anglesey, was descended,) came into Wexford from Cork, and the former marrying, as it is said, Jane, daughter and heiress of Colonel John Kiernan, the patentee under Cromwell of the estates of Fernes, Ballymore, &c. became the head of the Ballymore family, and was father of

He was a distinguished scholar and corresponded with the contemporary literati of the continent. He died 7th August, 1769, and his widow, in 1784. Their elder son, HORE, OF POLE HORE.

HORE, HERBERT FRANCIS, esq. of Pole Hore, in the county of Wexford, b. at Clonattin, in that county, 14th March, 1817.

Lineage.

The surname of this family originated at the time of the Crusades, when some designation was necessarily affixed to the christian names of those who embarked in them, for distinction's sake;—as le Brun, le White, le Grey, &c.—The adjective le hore, signifies the white or hoar, and is so used frequently by CHAUCER.—De Burgo derives the name from the town of Hore, in the county of Tipperary, where Hore abbey was built.

This family was in early ages of distinction in England; where, says Verstegan, “I find many of this surname of good note and special regard in many places of this kingdom.” They held lands in the 12th century, in South Wales, after its conquest by the Normans; and acquired considerable estates in adjoining shires, holding high martial offices in the Marches of Wales, and serving as sheriffs and representatives in parliament of their counties and boroughs.

In Devonshire and Cornwall two very ancient lines flourished; from the former descend the two BARONETS of the name of HOARE;—the heiress of Hore of Gloucestershire, m. Henry Clifford, Lord of Frampton, temp. HENRY IV.;—that of Marston, Oxfordshire, m. Unton, son of Sir John, and father of Sir Richard Croke; (see vol. i. p. 357.) another house, distinguished in that county and in Cambridgeshire, possessing the lordship of Elsefeld, in the county of Oxon; and the manors of Childerley magna and parva, Lulworth, Boxworth, and Magna Ravele, Cambridgeshire; Wysshawe and Langley, Warwickshire; and Barlee or Hore's, Herts; left Editha, its heiress, who m. Thomas Fulthorpe, esq. of Barnard Castle. Of this house was Sir Nicholas Hore, knt., who m. circa 1470, Katherine, dau. of Sir Thomas Cotton, of Landwade, Cambridgeshire; and John Hore, esq. who was at the siege of Rouen, with HENRY V.

According to tradition, and an old “genealogy,” the first of the name in Ireland was

SIR WILLIAM HORE, living in the first year of RICHARD Cœur de Lion (1190), who is said to have been one of the Norman knights that accompanied Maurice Fitzgerald from Wales, to the invasion of that kingdom; and to have received large grants of land in the baronies of Shelmalier and Shelburne, and shire of Wexford; in the country called HORESLEND, containing the district of Horeswood, the union and parish of Horetown, &c.

It is certain, however, that a considerable part of these baronies was in the possession of the family; and, from an inquisition, (temp. HENRY III.) in the Chapter house, Westminster, that

WILLIAM LE HORE, written “Le hore,” had, immediately after the conquest of Ireland, a deed or “charta” of Richard de Clare, therein called “Comes Lagenie,” of the lands of Baliconmod, for doing military service to the king himself, at the castle of Dublin.

HENRY LE HORE had letters of protection on accompanying William le Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, into Ireland, in 1207.

RALPH LE HORE was sheriff of Dublin in 1253, and was granted the tower of the bridge of that city, to him and his heirs, saving to the citizens free ingress and egress.

The almost total want of early records respecting the county of Wexford, renders information earlier than the time of HENRY III. inaccessible, when we find

GEOFFREY LE HORE, of that shire, father of William le Hore, living 1252, from whose brother Thomas, descended

NICHOLAS LE HORE, Lord of HORESLEND, in 1287, for which he did not make suit of court, and

RALPH LE HORE, who was granted the custody of the forfeited lands in county Wexford, of the Knights Templars, in 1312. From Geoffrey also derived the family of HORE, OF BALLYSHELANE AND KILLSALLAGHAN,* and

THOMAS LE HORE, CHIEF OF HIS NAME, of the Pole, in the county of Wexford; with whom the pedigree in the visitation of that county, (dated 1618) of "Hore of the Pole," commences. He flourished temp. EDWARD I., and is said to have given his lordship of Horetown, to Sir Philip Furlonge, knt. in exchange for that manor and other lands, about the year 1306.

He and his descendants resided at the castle of the Pole for four hundred and thirty years; and held that manor of the barony of Kayser, by grand serjeanty tenure;—their service was, "to keep a passage over the Pill water of the Slaney, (on a head-land projecting into which river their castle stood) as often as the sessions should be held at Wexford." His sons were,

- i. RICHARD, who d. ante 1345, leaving a son,

WALTER, who was summoned with horses and arms in 1345, and was probably slain in France.

- ii. DAVID, "dell Polle," appointed in 1332, keeper of the lands of Lawrence de Hastings, Earl of Pembroke, and Earl Palatine of Wexford. He was sheriff of the county in 1334, and one of the five persons of distinction to whom the guardianship of the Abbey of Dunbrody was assigned, on that monastery ceasing to give alms and perform acts of charity, by a commission from EDWARD III. He left issue,

1. THOMAS, "dell Polle," in 1355.

2. NICHOLAS, OF THE POLE, commissioner of the Peace in 1356, and sheriff in 1377 and 1379, was by patent, 6th July, 49 EDWARD III. one of the five warriors of the shire, to whom that king assigned the conservation of the tried fidelity of his subjects in that county, with power to govern the country with horses and arms, fortify places where invasion was expected, and seize on all supplies going to the Irish enemy. He d. s. p. and was s. by his cousin, SIR NICHOLAS.

- iii. WALTER, of whose line we have to treat.

The third son,

WALTER LE HORE, esq. was summoned in 1345, to attend, with his horses and arms properly appointed and in his best array for war, the Lord Justice of Ireland; with the gentlemen of his county, to accompany the expedition made that year into France by EDWARD III., at which time the famous battle of CRESSY was fought. He left issue,

JOHN, living 1379.

WILLIAM, of whom afterwards.

Robert, appointed 4 RICHARD II. Attorney-General of Ireland.

The son and successor,

WILLIAM LE HORE, esq. chief serjeant of Wexfordshire before the year 1382; had several sons, of whom the eldest,

- i. NICHOLAS (SIR), succeeded his namesake and cousin at the Pole; of whom hereafter.

- ii. Thomas, had a grant of the manors of Cookestown and Hamondstown, in the shire of Meath, from Mortimer, Earl of March; and dying before 1427, left Alianore, his heiress.

- iii. John (SIR), of Shandon, county Waterford, for whose descendants, see HORE OF SHANDON.

The eldest son,

SIR NICHOLAS LE HORE, knt. of the Pole, was seneschall of the Earl of Pembroke's lands, and sheriff of Wexfordshire in 1300 and 1306. He was married in 1374, and was that year distrained by the seneschall of the liberties of Wexford, for the exits of his wife's dower in three manors.

She was Matilda, daughter and eventually co-heir of SIR WILLIAM DE LOUNDRES, knt. BARON OF THE NAAS, and widow of Mathew Tuyte William de Meones, and Adam L'Enfaunt. Her brother, Sir John de Loundres, dying after her without issue, the barony of Naas fell into abeyance; and was accorded many years after to Lord Preston of GORMANSTON, a descendant of one of her younger sisters, Elizabeth, who was widow in 1399, of Sir Christopher Preston, knt., and then wife of Sir Thomas le Fleming, Baron of Slane.

Sir Nicholas le Hore doubtless forfeited all chance of the honour by his "seditious and treasons," for which he in one year alone paid two fines for pardons. He was surety for Sir Simon Neville, Baron of Rosgarland, in 1396; and in 1407 appointed Custodian of the castle and manor of Kilmannock, in the county of Wexford, during the minority of Henry fitz John le Hore.

He left several sons, some holding lauds in Meath, of the Mortimers, Earls of March; whose descendants, Christopher and John Hore, esqs. took the oath of allegiance to HENRY VII. at Trim, 25th February, 1488. Of these, Thomas Hore, was ABBOT of

* The Ballyshelane and Killsallaghan branch was one of considerable importance.

DUNBRODY, in 1447, and was sent on an important mission to Pope Eugenius IV.

CHRISTOPHER HORE, esq. of the Pole, succeeded his brothers, and was probably born after the marriage of his namesake, Sir Christopher Preston, with his maternal aunt. From his close relationship to the Mortimers, and the HOUSE OF YORK, he fought under the white banner during the wars of the Roses, and none of his family received a single office during the time the LANCASTRIANS sat on the throne of England. He died, leaving by Maude, daughter of John Neville, Baron of Rosgarland, in the county of Wexford, a son and heir.

WILLIAM LE HORE, esq. of the Pole, who m. Eylme, daughter of Philip Furlonge, esq. of Davidstown, by Margaret, his wife, dau. of Lord Keating of Killoan. His children were Richard, esq. of the Pole, who d. s. p. and

WILLIAM HORE, esq. of the Pole, who m. Eleanor, daughter of Thomas Rosceter, of Rathmacknee Castle, grand seneschal of the county of Wexford to HENRY VII. widow of James Rochford, esq. of Tagonnau, sister of Sir Walter Rosceter, and of Isabella, wife of James Esmonde, of Johnstown Castle, great-grandfather of Sir Lawrence, LORD ESMONDE, (see BURKE's Peerage). By this lady he had issue,

THOMAS, of whom presently.

CHRISTOPHER, succeeded his brother.

William, of Growtown, living 1546, whose grandson,

Nicholas Hore, esq. of Growtown, held that estate and Coolstuffe, &c. by paying a chief rent to Hore of Pole Hore. He m. Isabell, niece of Lord Esmonde, and d. 10th July, 1620, leaving

Philip Hore, esq. who m. Margaret, daughter of Mathew Furlonge, esq. of Davidstown, by a daughter of Nicholas, Baron Fitz Henry of Kilkevan. He d. in 1633, and was s. by his son, Richard Hore, esq. of Growtown, who espoused Isabella, daughter of Nicholas Stafford, esq. of the castle and hall of Wexford, ancestor of Captain Stafford, who sold Wexford castle to the usurper in 1649. His estates were granted by CHARLES II. to the Earl of Anglesey.

Margaret, m. Nicholas Sutton, esq. of Clonard, whose son m. a daughter of Sir Thomas Cusack, lord justice of Ireland, and was ancestor of the Counts Clonard, in France.

The eldest son,

THOMAS HORE, esq. of the Pole, had letters of general pardon from HENRY VIII. in 1540, and he alienated many of his town lands by deed dated 8th April. He m. in 1552, one of the five co-heirs of John Isham, of Bryanston, grand seneschal of the county, (see Hore of Harperstown, p. 718,) but leaving no issue, he was s. by his brother,

CHRISTOPHER HORE, esq. of the Pole, mentioned in a list, dated 1574, of the noble men and gentry of his country, as a "man of power and name, and faithful to the queen;" his wife was Gennet, daughter of John Furlonge, esq. of Carrickmanon, and by her he had

WILLIAM, son and heir, living in 1598. and d. s. p. m.

The second son,

NICHOLAS HORE, esq. of the Pole, afterwards of Mullinderry and Coolebooy; had possession of, and chief rents from, four parishes, comprising Horesland, viz. Ard-candrish, Coolstuffe, Inch, and Horetown.

In 1608, the whole barony of Shelmalier was owned by only ten gentlemen, four of whom held their estates of him, and three were of his name. Dying before 1641, he left by Isabella, daughter of Nicholas Hore, esq. of BALLYSHELANE, and Annistace, his wife, daughter of Sir Nicholas Devereux, sister of Sir Nicholas and Sir James Devereux, knts. of Balmaguir, CHRISTOPHER.

Mr. Hore, who is a magistrate for the county of Wexford, and commandant of cavalry, served the office of high-sheriff in 1828; he succeeded his father in 1798.

Lineage.

The very early descent of this branch is, from the extreme scarcity of records in Ireland, most difficult to determine without liability to error:—but every following detail is a fact, for which distinct and uncontrollable authority can be produced.

THOMAS LE HORE, esq. living temp. EDWARD I. (1272) had issue,

PHILIP LE HORE, whose son,

WILLIAM LE HORE, esq. recovered in 1332, the estate of Tillaghdonan, in the county of Wexford, (possessed by his grandfather) against Isabella le Hore. We may venture to presume that he was identical with

“WILLIAM LE HORE, de Tillaghbard,” in the same county, (which latter domain was a fief long held by the house of HARPERSTOWN, of the Le Bruns (or Brownes) Lords of Malrankan), so named in his summons to attend the Lord Justice of Ireland, in 1345, with his horses and arms. And also that he was father of

STEPHEN LE HORE, esq. with whom the pedigree in the visitation of Wexford (dated 1618) commences, whose son,

MATHEW LE HORE, esq. of HARPERSTOWN, apparently acquired that estate temp. EDWARD III. by marrying Agatha, heiress of Philip le Harper, Lord of Harperstown, according to the plea roll in Birmingham Tower, No. 210, 2 RICHARD II. By patent dated 4th April, 1390, the king granted to him, that he, during his life, should be exempt from assizes, juries, &c., and should not be made sheriff, coroner, collector of subsidies, or other minister against his will;—the importance of this privilege, probably a parliamentary exemption, may be estimated when it is known, that at this period, peers were obliged to discharge the offices of sheriff, &c., in common with all other persons. Thomas, Duke of Surrey, was about that time sheriff of the county of Louth. He was s. by his son,

WILLIAM HORE, esq. of Harperstown, commissioner for the barony of Shermalier in raising money as a present to the grand prior of Kilmainham, for his warlike services in the county of Wexford, anno 1412; and was custos pacis or chief justiciary of the peace in the county, in 1427. He had to wife one of the co-heirs of John St. John, esq. of Taghmahagyr, in the county of Wexford, and was s. by his son,

JOHN HORE, Lord of Harperstown, who is mentioned in the statutes of Ireland, of 3 and 11 EDWARD IV. as John Fitz-William Hore, esq. and is probably the same who was benefactor to the preceptory of Killoghlan, in the county of Wexford. He was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM HORE, esq. of Harperstown, who m. daughter of Nicholas Browne, Lord of Malrankan, in the county of Wexford, and grand seneschall of the county in 3 HENRY VI. and had

NICHOLAS, his heir, who succeeded.

DAVID, who usurped the estates, as hereafter.

The elder,

NICHOLAS HORE, esq. of Harperstown, flourished temp. HENRY VIII. and was a great actor in the border warfare of that period in the county of Wexford. He m. first, Joan, daughter of Thomas Hay, esq. of Killyane Castle, secondly, a daughter of Mc Murrough Kavanagh, called by the Irish, King of Leinster; and lastly, a daughter of Edmond Walsh, of Castle Hoel, in the county of Kilkenny, Lord of the Walsh Mountains, by which last marriage he had an only child,

EDMOND HORE, of Harperstown. A grand jury of the county of Wexford presented to the justices, “that in the 18th year of our Sovereign Lord King HENRY VIII. (1527) DAVID HORE, his uncle, broke violently into his house, and did kill and sley him and his wife, she being then great with child of twee children.” This wife was a daughter of Gerald Kavanagh, of the house of Borres; and their orphan daughters,

Katherine, } were returned by a sub-Margaret, } sequent grand jury as “generall heyres to Harpistone, Edmond Hore, of all his landes.” Their claims however, were not powerful enough to dispossess their uncle,

DAVID HORE, who became lord of Harperstown, having slain his nephew, and procured the setting aside of the claims of that nephew's two co-heirs, in defiance of the presentment of the grand jury. He had the justification of an Act of Parliament, which made it treason and death to marry a woman of Irish blood, which was the case with respect to his nephew's wife. He m. a daughter of William Sutton, Lord of Ballykeroge, and by her had issue,

ROBERT, his heir.

WILLIAM, who succeeded his brother.

Richard, of Taghmon, living in 1569, from whom descended, David Hore, esq. of Aghfada, M.P. for Taghmon in 1634, whose daughter Ellen, m. Christopher Bryan, esq. of Skarr.

The eldest,

ROBERT HORE, esq. lord of Harperstown, received two pardons from HENRY VIII. one in 1532, and the other in 1540.

He died without heirs male, 1 EDWARD VI. 1547, and was z. by his brother,

WILLIAM HORE, esq. of Harperstown, who, on his accession, had a grant of the custody of Taghmon Castle, from EDWARD VI. by letters patent dated 1547. He married Joan, daughter of Sir Nicholas Chevers, knt. of Balyhaly, in the county of Wexford, by Alison, sister of Walter Fitz Simons, Archbishop of Dublin, and wife of Sir Nicholas St. Lawrence, 16th baron of Howth, and died 26th January, 1570, having had issue,

NICHOLAS, his heir.

David, living in 1618.

Katherine, m. in 1565, Thomas, third son of Paule Turnor, esq. of the Friars Minors, Wexford, by Alice, daughter of Sir Nicholas Devereux, knt. of Balmaguir. She married secondly, the Right Honourable SIR NICHOLAS ARNOLD, knt. of Hyncham, Gloucestershire, lord justice of Ireland, and CHIEF GOVERNOR of that kingdom in 1564. WILLIAM, his heir.

Nicholas, living 1636, married Catherine, daughter of Walter Devereux, esq. of Carrickschurch, (by a daughter of the celebrated warrior, Bryan McCahir Kavanagh, of BORRES) son of Sir Nicholas Devereux.

He signed the great roll of the Catholic Confederation, and took an active part in the civil wars. In the depositions in Trinity College, he is stated to have been present in July, 1642, at the siege of Dunganon; and that on St. Margaret's day, 30th July, 1642, being at Bourkstown, and hearing some firing, he said to the party who were in arms with him, "This is our neighbour Redmond, that the English are firing upon, it is fitting we should help our neighbour;" he then marched to Redmond's Hall, with Colonel Devereux of Mountgarrett.

and Captain Roche of Drynagh; they attacked and defeated the English forces, killed about 100 of them, and made many prisoners. In the examinations of 1653, a kinsman deposes that he was killed in the battle of Ballibeg (near New Ross), against the Marquis of Ormond and the English army, in March, 1643; and states his reason for knowing it was, that Mr. Hore's father gave him a relation of his son's actions before he was slain. whose powerful house he had intermarried. The township of Wilberfoss, eight miles east of York, gave him a mansion and a name; and his property extended to the neighbourhood of Stamford Bridge, a spot then famous for the recent battle between Harold and Tosti, the last victory of the last Saxon Monarch.

At Wilberfoss the family was fixed for many generations, until after a gradual decline in wealth and numbers, it disappeared from the place about a century ago. About the middle of the 16th century, Thomas Wilberfoss, the son of William Wilberfoss, of Wilberfoss, by his second marriage, settled in the neighbouring town of Beverley.* His son appears in the visitation of 1612, as William Wilberfoss, of Brigham; and here and at Beverley, the younger branch rose into importance as the parent stock decayed.†

The family of Wilberforce has been established in Yorkshire from a very remote period. In the reign of HENRY II. Ilgerus de Wilberfoss served in the Scottish wars under Philip de Kyme, with a daughter of † The following genealogy down to the year 1612, is copied from "the Visitation of Yorkshire," made by Robert Glover, Somerset Herald, &c. 1584 and 1585, and from the Visitation of R. St. George, &c. 1612.

WILLIAM WILBERFOSS, mayor of Beverley in 1642, at the opening of the great rebellion, son of William, and grandson of William, of Brigham, mentioned in the visitation of 1612, died in 1655, leaving a son,

WILLIAM WILBERFOSS, Governor of Beverley in 1674, who was displaced by the charter of JAMES II. in May, 1684, but re-chosen alderman, and restored to his seniority 7th March, 1699. He died in 1703, leaving three sons, Thomas, Samuel, and Ralph. The second of whom,

SAMUEL WILBERFOSS, of Beverley, m. Anne, daughter of Robert Davye, esq. of York, and heiress of her brother, Robert Davye, esq. of Markington (who m. Cordelia, daughter of Sir J. Hoghton, of Hoghton, but died s. p.). By this lady he left a son and successor,

He was a man of much repute for talent and integrity; and the settlement of Joseph Milner in the Grammar School at Hull, is an abiding record of his well directed influence. Of William Wilberforce, the following anecdote is given in the biography of his distinguished grandson. "The old man had seen much of life; and one of those tales of travel with which he charmed his grandson, is even yet preserved. He had been admitted to the intimacy of the Duke of Marlborough, then commanding the allied armies on the continent; and was invited by that general to witness from the safeguard of a neighbouring eminence the incidents of an approaching battle. Through reluctance to overstep from idle curiosity the strict line of professional duty, enforced perhaps by a careful regard to his personal safety, the offer was prudently declined by the grateful merchant. Upon a more fitting occasion he displayed some military ardour when the arsenal of Hull was prepared for an expected attack in the year 1745. His younger son,

ROBERT WILBERFORCE, esq. of Kingston-upon-Hull, m. Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Bird, esq. of Barton, in the county of Oxford, and had three children,

Mr. Clowes is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Bucks, and served the office of sheriff in 1832.

Lineage.

This family, of Cheshire extraction, possessed (besides lands in Staffordshire) property and a residence in the neighbourhood of Macclesfield, from the reign of HENRY VII. as deeds still in their trust will testify, to the year 1808, in uninterrupted male de-scendent; and from which district of country, it being much diversified by hill and dale, the name is most probably derived, as in the older deeds it was written Cloughes, which, according to Lexicographers, is a Saxon word, signifying a cliff or cleft, or a valley between high hills. There is a place in the immediate vicinity called Wild Boar Clough, and another Clough House; the name was sometimes written Close, but latterly Clowes. A portion of their property in Cheshire, where they resided in the reign of HENRY VIII. to that of CHARLES II. was called Whiteley, (see ORMEROD'S Cheshire) and situated about six miles from Macclesfield, in the township of Wincle, on the River Dane, which divides Cheshire from Derbyshire.

In the reign of CHARLES II. this family acquired by marriage, an estate called Langley, also a few miles from Macclesfield, in the township of Sutton, on which they resided for several generations. "The mansion (as described in ORMEROD'S History of Cheshire, is an ancient respectable building of stone, called Langley Hall."

The fifth in descent from Clowes, of Sutton, near Macclesfield, living in 1509, was Frances, m. to Maurice Swabey, esq. of Lincoln's Inn, barrister at law, of Langley Marsh, Bucks.

Mr. Clowes, who served as sheriff of Bucks in 1794, died in October, 1818, and was s. by his eldest son, the present CHARLES CLOWES, esq. of Delaford Park, possessor of Delaford.

Arms—Vert, on a chevron between three unicorns heads erased, or, three crescents gules, quartering Daniell, Daresbury, &c.

Crest—A demi lion vert, crowned or, supporting a battle ax argent, the staff gold.

Estates—In Iwer, Buckinghamshire.

Seat—Delaford Park, Bucks.

D'Angers, or Daniell of Daresbury.

This family, from its antiquity, property, and connections, was well known in Cheshire. The senior branch merged in the one before us, and is now represented by Mr. Clowes, of Delaford, in consequence of his grandfather, and that gentleman's two brothers having married the three daughters, co-heirs of John Daniell, esq. of Daresbury.

The pedigree is given at length in ORMEROD'S History of Cheshire, carried down to the marriage of the above-mentioned ladies, and the failure of male issue in the direct line, when the descent is continued in a collateral branch to the date of the publication of that eminent work, 1819.

SIR JOHN DANIELS, knt. of Daresbury, Cheshire, was grandson of William Daniels, senior, of Daresbury, who in 1270, espoused Agnes Legh, daughter of Thomas de Legh, of High Legh, of the West Hall, Cheshire, and whose son and heir, William Danyers, by Ellen, his wife, daughter of William de Akelan, in 1344, espoused Clemence, daughter and heiress of Alan le Norreys, son and heir of Henry le Norreys, who in 1291, was lord of Daresbury, and had the royalty of Over Walton, in Cheshire, and the lands of Sutton, Eccleston, and Raynull, or Rainhill, in Lancashire, in right of his wife, Margery, grand-daughter and heir of William de Daresbury, who assumed his surname from that place where he was seated in the reign of HENRY III. 1216, and before. See SIR PETER LEYCESTER'S Antiquities, &c.

The family of Daniell were resident at Daresbury, in 1666, the date of Sir Peter Leicester's publication of the Bucklow Hundred, Cheshire, and they continued to reside there in regular descent, till the death in 1736, without male issue, of John Daniell, esq. of Daresbury, the father of the before-mentioned three ladies. He had served the office of sheriff in 1730, and devised his estate of Daresbury Hall to his brother, Edward Daniell, esq. whose son alienated it in 1755, and died issueless. (See ORMEROD'S Cheshire.)

Daresbury Hall is situated on a commanding eminence, from which is an extensive view of the Lancashire Hills, &c. The present mansion is a plain but excellent structure of brick, erected about the reign of QUEEN ANNE, and the Daniell crest was on some of the building in 1836.

The name of Daniell appears on the roll of Battle Abbey, as borne by one of the companions in arms of WILLIAM, in his successful enterprise to this country in 1066. (See BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage.)

There is also abundant testimony of the family having been seated at Daresbury, in regular male descent from the middle of the thirteenth century, to the middle of the eighteenth century, in the College of Arms-London, in SIR PETER LEYCESTER'S Antiquities, in ORMEROD'S Cheshire, &c.

One of the early alliances of this family, as recorded in the College of Arms, was in the 43rd of EDWARD III. when William Daniel married the sole heiress of Warburton, of Flint, whose descent is traced in the same records through the Duttons, to Odard, or Hudard, who came to England with the CONQUEROR, and seated himself at Dutton, a good part whereof, Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester, gave unto him, as appears by Doomsday Book.

One other alliance of this family before 1635, was when John Daniell, of Daresbury, married Alice, daughter of Richard Hatton, of Quisty Birches, in Hatton, nigh Daresbury, which was formerly a large mansion, and from HENRY III. to CHARLES II. the residence of the Hattons, but now reduced to a farm-house, which, with the manor, has passed to other hands. The family of Hatton, is descended from Wolfrid, or rather Wolfaith, a priest who came over with the CONQUEROR, and had the Church of Runcorn given him by Nigel, baron of Haulton, and to whom some genealogists call him brother; from this family descended Sir Christopher Hatton, lord chancellor in the reign of ELIZABETH and Viscount Hatton, now represented by Finch Hatton, Earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham, who inherited by marriage the chief of his property.

There is in ORMEROD'S Cheshire, a full account of the Over Tabley branch of Daniell, brought down to the period when the estates of Sir Samuel D'Aniers, knt. were left to his great niece, daughter of Hewett Parker, esq. of Moberly, and wife of Sir Charles Dunkenfield, bart. of Dunkenfield, whose son Sir William, assumed by act of parliament the name of Daniell, upon inheriting the fortune of that family; this gentleman died without male issue, and his estates passed from his relict (who also died without issue) to her second husband, John Astley, esq. whose descendants still possess them.

The estate of Bucklebury, or as it was anciently called Buryhulbury, with the patronage of the vicarage, belonged to the Abbey of Reading. At the dissolution of that community in 1539, it was granted by HENRY VIII. to Mary-Louisa.

Mr. Jones succeeded his father in June 1828.

Lineage.

This very ancient family, from which the chivalrous house of HERBERT and other eminent houses sprang, derived originally in England from

HERBERT,* styled Count of Vermandois, who came over at the Conquest, with the first WILLIAM, and filled the office of Chamberlain to the second (WILLIAM Rufus). He is mentioned in the Battel Abbey Roll, and was rewarded by a grant of lands in Hampshire. His wife was Emma, daughter of Stephen, Earl of Blois by Adela, daughter of WILLIAM the Conqueror, and by that lady left a son and heir.

HERBERT FITZ-HERBERT, called Herbert of Winchester, Chamberlain and Treasurer to King HENRY, I. and the first of his family born in England. He m. Adela or Lucy, † daughter and co-heir of Sir Robert Corbet, kt. Lord of Alcester in the county of Warwick, and had issue, HERBERT, his heir.

Stephen Fitz-Herbert.

William Fitz-Herbert, called St. William of York, having been canonized for his good and holy life. He was treasurer of the church, chaplain to King STEPHEN, and Archbishop of York.

This Herbert in the 5th of King STEPHEN, anno 1140, in conjunction with his eldest son, gave £333, in silver, for livery of his father's lands in Hampshire, and Thomas Archbishop of York conferred upon him and his said son the lordships of Launsborough, Collierthorpe, Wyderthorpe, Holperthorpe, and the two Lotum, besides, one carucate of land in Turgisleby, three carucates in Schyneburne, three in Bridstall, five in Middlethorpe, five in Urkilthorpe, &c. and all to be held by the service of three knight's fees. He was s. by his son aforesaid, HERBERT FITZ-HERBERT, who obtained from HENRY II. a confirmation of the landed possessions of his father, and likewise the office of chamberlain. In the 12th of that monarch, anno 1166, upon the assessment of the aid which was then levied for marrying the king's daughter, he certified that he held one knight's fee in Wilts and three in Berks. Upon the Conquest of Ireland HENRY II. at a great council held at Oxford anno 1177 gave the kingdom of Limeric in that Realme to this Herbert and William his brother, Reginald, Earl of Cornwall and Josceline de la Pomerai their nephew (the City of Limeric and one cantred excepted,

* He was great-grandson of Herbert Comte de Vermandois the lineal descendant of Charlemagne.
† She had been concubine to King HENRY the I. and was mother by that prince of Reginald Earl of Cornwall.

which the king reserved to himself and his heirs) to be held by the service of sixty knight's fees, but it appears they declined the gift. In the 6th of RICHARD I. he was sheriff of the county of Gloucester, for one of that year and afterwards during the whole reign of that king. In the eighth of the same reign he was likewise sheriff of Shropshire. He m. Lucie, third dau. and co-heir of Milo Fitzwalter, Earl of Hereford, and by her acquired the Forest of Dene, where he afterwards resided in the Castle of St. Michael, with other large possessions in the counties of Brecknock and Gloucester. He had issue, Reginald Fitz-Herbert, d. s. p. vita patris.

PETER FITZ-HERBERT, his heir.

Matthew Fitz-Herbert, sheriff of Sussex, in 1233, and being named one of the barons to King JOHN, signed Magna Charter in 1215. He m. Eleanora, and had two sons,

1 Herbert Fitz-Matthew, killed by a great stone hurled down upon him by one of the Welch, having entered South Wales at the head of his forces against Llewellyn, Prince of Wales, buried at Margam Abbey in Glamorganshire, leaving Peter his brother his heir.

2 Peter Fitz-Matthew.

Herbert d. in 1205, and was s. by his elder surviving son,

PETER FITZ-HERBERT, Baron of Berstaple in Devonshire, the honor of which he obtained from King JOHN, with fifteen knight's fees, part of the lands of William de Braose, and he was made Governor of Pickering Castle in Yorkshire, and Sheriff of that county by the same monarch. This Peter was one of the barons named in Magna Charta, and by his signature fourth in rank amongst the barons. He m. first, Alice, dau. of Robert Fitz Roger, a great baron in Northumberland, Lord of Warkworth and Clavering, and sister of John, to whom EDWARD I. gave the surname of CLAVERING, Lord of Callaly in Northumberland. By this lady he had a son and heir, REGINALD FITZ PETER. He m. secondly Isabel, dau. and coheir of William de Braose, and widow of David Llewellyn, Prince of Wales, and by the alliance acquired the lordships and castles of Blenlevenny and Talgarth in the county of Brecknock, with other possessions in Wales. He fortified his castle of Blenlevenny, and dying in 1235 was s. by his son,

REGINALD FITZ PETER, Lord of Blenlevenny, with its members de la Mere and Talgarth. This feudal chief, who appears to have been a person of great rank in the time of HENRY III. was especially summoned in the 41st of that monarch to aid Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, in defence of the Marches, and in the next year had another summons to march against Llewellyn. He m. Joan de Vivonia, dau. and coheir of William de Vivonia, surnamed "de Fortibus," from his valour in the field, Lord of Chewton in the county of Somerset, by Matilda de Kyme, dau. and coheir of William, Earl of Ferrers (by his first wife). With this lady Reginald acquired the Manor of Chuyton or Chewton, which he received the day of his marriage. They had issue,

i. JOHN FITZ-REGINALD, b. 1256, eldest son and heir, summoned to parliament as a BARON, from 8th June 1294 to 26th January, 1297, and afterwards from 26th December, 1299, to 26th August, 1307, but his descendants, who bore the name of FITZ HERBERT, were not esteemed barons, nor had any one of them summons to parliament. HERBERT FITZ REGINALD, who m. Lucy, dau. and coheir of Andrew Peverell, and dying in the lifetime of his father, left an only son,

† The elder sons were, Philip, of Llansaintfraed; Evan, ancestor of the Gwyns and Raglands of Glamorganshire; David, progenitor of the family of Hughes of Kyllough, and Howell of Perthyr, near Monmouth, ancestor of the POWELLS of PERTHYR.† The following curious anecdote relates to the contest for precedence, between the rival houses of Perthir and Werndee, which though less bloody was not less obstinate than that between the houses of York and Lancaster. Mr. Proger dining with a friend at Monmouth, proposed riding to his mansion, Werndee, in the evening, but his companion objecting because it was late, and likely to rain,

SIR WILLIAM AP THOMAS, knt. alias

Mr. Proger replied, "With regard to the latecomer of the hour, we shall have moonlight, and should it happen to rain, Perthir is not far from the rest, and my cousin Powell will, I am very sure, give us a night's lodging." They accordingly manured their horses, but being soon overtaken by a violent shower, rode to Perthir, and found all the family retired to rest. Mr. Proger, however, calling to his cousin, Mr. Powell opened the window, not looking out, asked, "In the name of wonder, what means all this noise? Who is there?" "It is only I, your cousin Proger of Werndee, who am come to your hospitable door for shelter from the inclemency of the weather, and hope you will be as kind as to give me and my friend a lodging." "What, is it you, cousin Proger! you and your friend shall be instantly admitted—but upon one condition, that you will allow, and never hereafter dispute that I am the head of the family." "No, sir, I never would admit that; were it to rain again."

and daggers, I would ride this night to Werndee, rather than lower the consequence of my family. Come up, Bald, come up." "Stop a moment, cousin Proger, have you not often confessed, that the first Earl of Pembroke (of the name of Herbert,) was the youngest son of Perthir, and will you set yourself above the Earls of Pembroke?" "True, I must give place to the Earl of Pembroke, because he is a peer of the realm, but still, though a peer, he is of the youngest branch of my family, being descended from the fourth son of Werndee, who was your ancestor, and settled at Perthir; whereas I am descended from the eldest son. Indeed, my cousin, Jones, of Llanarth, is of an older branch than you, and yet he never disputes that I am the head of the family." "Why, cousin Proger, there is nothing more to say, so good night to you."

† This gallant soldier was buried in the church at Abergavenny, where there is a monument finely carved to his memory. His effigy lies in a recumbent posture on the top of the sepulchre, habited in a complete suit of armour, with a dagger suspended from a rich belt; the head reposes on the bust of a blackmoor, which was his crest, and is still borne by the Jones's of Llanarth Court.

13. SIR RICHARD HERBERT, knt. of Coldbrook House, near Abergavenny, beheaded after the battle of Banbury. Sir Richard, who was one of the most valiant soldiers of his day, eminently distinguished himself at this his last battle; and, at the head of the Welsh, twice breaking the line of the northern men, is reported to have slain 140 men with his own hand. The ashes of Sir Richard and his wife Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas ap Griffith, knt. repose beneath an alabaster monument in the Herbert chapel, adjoining St. Mary's Church at Abergavenny. Their figures are recumbent with uplifted hands; his in a suit of mail, the head bare, and supported by a sheaf of arrows (his crest), the feet resting on a lion; hers habited in a long robe. Upon the death of Sir Richard, Colebrook came to his eldest son, Sir William Herbert, and continued in his descendants, the ninth of whom, Sir James Herbert, dying in 1709, without male issue, it was conveyed by that gentleman's only daughter and heir, JUDITH HERBERT, to her husband, Sir Thomas Powell, knt. Beside his eldest son, Sir William, Sir Richard Herbert, of Colebrook, left two other sons, namely, Sir Richard Herbert, of Montgomery, grandfather of the celebrated Edward, Lord Herbert of Chisbury, (see BURKE's Extinct and Dormant Peerage.) and Thomas Herbert, ancestor of the Herberts of Tintern and York.

Note—The HERBERTS of Mucross, in the county of Kerry, descending likewise from Sir Richard Herbert of Colebrook, are now the representatives of that branch of the Herberts.

ACHMUTY, OR AUCHMUTY, OF BRIANSTOWN.

ACHMUTY, THOMAS, esq. of Brianstown, in the county of Longford, late of the 3rd dragoons, and major of brigade, succeeded his father in 1829, m. 2nd September, 1811, Bridget Domvile, seventh daughter of Charles Pocklington, esq. who assumed the surname of Domvile under the will of his maternal uncle, the Right Hon. Sir Compton Domvile, bart. By this lady Mr. Achmuty has an only daughter, MARGARET-DOMVILE.

Mr. Auchmuty, who is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Longford, served as high sheriff in 1824.

Lineage.

Of this ancient family, as it is uniformly styled by all the writers upon Scottish heraldry and genealogy, the surname is local or territorial, assumed from lands of which they appear to have been the possessors at a very early period of the history of that country. The name, however, does not occur in the Raymant Roll given by Pryse of those who swore fealty to EDWARD I.: the earliest printed notice which has yet been discovered, being in the history of the Sherifdoms of Fife and Kinross, by Sir Robert Sibbald, who deriving his information from Sir James Balfour, states that in the year 1334, Florentius, styled Admuty de Eodem, had perambulation of the marshes or bounds of his lands with the Abbot of Dunfermling. Between this Florentius and the last proprietor of the lands of the name, by whom they were at last conveyed to a Mr. Gibson, a relative of his lady, the daughter of Gibson, of Druie, in Fife, many links in the chain of successors are deficient.

What can, however, now be traced of this family, exhibits it of consideration and of good connexion, in favour with the succession of their sovereigns, and for the most part distinguished by devoted loyalty to them, or the junctures, and on occasions when such a principle was most creditable, and most required.

We shall proceed briefly to enumerate such notices of the family as are at the present moment to be discovered from the first until their final disappearance amongst the aristocracy of Scotland,* and afterwards proceed to their existing representatives in Ireland and other parts of the world, in all of which they have maintained an honourable reputation; they are yet to be found in the humbler walks of life in Fife, and it is traditional that a branch emigrated to France, and is settled in the neighbourhood of Toulon. In the registers of the Kirk sessions of several parishes in Fifeshire and East Lothian, frequent notices of births, baptisms, and interments, occur. Others are found in antique chronicles, of small moment, perhaps, individually, but incidentally useful in clearing up or ascertaining the period of existence of the family in its native land. The name of Florence would seem to indicate something of Flemish origin, it is comparatively of infrequent occurrence in the histories of the period. There is a tradition that the crest was given by JAMES of Scotland to the then chief of the name, at the siege of Roxburgh. The arms are those so often borne by the borderers and lowland Scots, as alluded to by Drayton. The motto, assuming an apparent allusion to the arms, "Dum spiro spero," is found in a translation into Latin of the works of Theocritus. The lands called north and south Achmuty were sold to the Earl of Rothes, the Chancellor of Scotland, by Mr. Gibson, and when he was created Duke of Rothes, he took also the title of Baron of Auchmuty. The honours expired with him, but the lands remain still strictly entailed in the Leslie family.

Among the Barones Minores, or lesser Barons of Fife, Auchmuty is put on the alphabetical list appended to Blair's Atlas, by Robert Gordon, of Straloch, and in an old brochure or pamphlet preserved in the library at St. Paul's Cathedral, endowed by Primate Marsh, the Laird of Auchmuty is noticed.

In the year 1602, John and Alexander Auchmuty, of the Scottish House, had a grant from the crown of 2000 acres of land

Lineage.

Amongst the most distinguished companions in arms of the Conqueror, was

ROBERT DE TODENI, a nobleman of Normandy, upon whom the victorious monarch conferred, with numerous other grants, an estate in the county of Lincoln, upon the borders of Leicestershire. Here De TodenI erected a stately castle, and from the fair view it commanded, gave it the designation of BELVOIR CASTLE, and here he established his chief abode. At the time of the general survey this powerful personage possessed no less than eighty extensive lordships, viz. two in Yorkshire, one in Essex, four in Suffolk, one in Cambridge, two in Hertfordshire, three in Bucks, four in Gloucestershire, three in Bedfordshire, nine in Northamptonshire, two in Rutland, thirty-two in Lincolnshire, and seventeen in Leicestershire. His son,

WILLIAM DE ALBINI, Lord of Belvoir, was ancestor of the De Albinis, feudal lords of Belvoir, (through whose heiress the castle and barony of Belvoir was conveyed to the family of MANNERS,) and of the De Albinis, or DAUBENEYS, Lords DaubeneY, of whom a full and detailed account appears in BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage. The last Baron DaubeneY, Henry DaubeneY, Earl of Bridgewater, married Lady Catherine Howard, daughter of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, but died without issue in 1548, when the male descendants of the senior line of the family became EXTINCT. A junior branch however still exists, springing from

JAMES DAUBENEY, younger brother of Giles, Lord DaubeneY, K.G. constable of the castle of Bristol, and master of the Mint, temp. HENRY VII. His son,

GILES DAUBENEY, esq. of Wayford, in Somersetshire, married first, Elizabeth, sister of Hugh Oldham, Bishop of Exeter, and secondly, a daughter of the family of Coles, of the county of Somerset. By the former he had a son,

HUGH, of Wayford, who m. Joan, daughter of Giles Penney, esq. of East Coker, in Somersetshire, and dying in 1565, left a son, GILES, who m. Philippa Lorder, and had a son, James, who wedded Elizabeth Peter, and d. s. p. in 1614.

By his second wife, Giles DaubeneY left another son,

JOHN DAUBENEY, esq. of Gorwell, who m. Alice, daughter of — Penney, esq. of East Coker, and was father of daughter of Thomas Coker, esq. of Mapowder, and died 6th Sept. 1612, leaving a son.

HENRY DAUBENEY, esq. of Gorwell, who died in 1656, leaving four sons George, John, James, and Giles, of whom the eldest,

GEORGE DAUBENEY, esq. of Gorwell, m. Judith Bryant, and dying in 1689, had two sons,

1. GEORGE, of Bishop's Caundle, who d. in 1718, leaving a son and successor,

Mr. Hall, who formerly held the appointment of judge advocate general of Jamaica, and was also a member of the Honourable House of Assembly, is at present sole stipendiary magistrate of Liverpool.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the Halls of Greatford Hall, in the county of Lincoln, a family of great antiquity and high consideration, who were themselves a scion of the Fitz Williams of Clixby, of the same lineage as Earl Fitzwilliam. A younger son of that house, Arthur Fitz-William, of the Hall, was called, to distinguish him from his brothers, Arthur of the Hall, and that designation became in the sequel, Arthur Hall. Many of his descendants were, for generations after, christened Fitzwilliam Hall. The line we are now treating of was continued by

WILLIAM HALL, esq. born in Lincolnshire, youngest child of Edmund Hall, esq. of Greatford Hall, by Anne, his wife, daughter of John Elmers, esq. of Swinford. He held first the appointment of British consul at Bilbao, in Spain, and subsequently, in 1687, accompanied to Jamaica, as secretary, Christopher Monk, Duke of Albemarle, governor of the island. He m. 26th July, 1688, Elizabeth, daughter of William Wyatt,* esq. (lineally descended from Sir Tho-and with other officers, obtained after the Restoration, a grant, under patent from the crown, of considerable tracts of land in that country. His brother, Monsieur Rose, a naturalized subject of France, was private secretary to Louis XIV. and acquired great wealth. The following amusing story is told of him: His daughter was married to a nobleman who expected to be enriched by the death of his father-in-law, yet nevertheless could not agree with his bride; they had perpetual quarrels, and M. Rose was frequently annoyed by the complaints of the untractable temper of his daughter. At last he was provoked to say, "I am sorry, my friend, you find your wife so troublesome, and I am determined, the next cause of complaint she gives you, to punish her by disinheriting her." From that moment the father heard of no more grievances. The Roses of Jamaica, originally a Dorsetshire family, were related to Lord Seaford, the Fullers of Sussex, the late Sir Rose Price, bart. to the Istedes of Northamptonshire, and to Sir Hans Sloane, bart.

Anne, }

Mr. Sicklemore succeeded his father in 1778.

* This gentleman, Col. Cony, who died in 1799, served at the battle of Preston Paus, and was aide-camp to Sir John Cope. He possessed considerable landed property in Norfolk and Lincolnshire, and was lieutenant-colonel of the militia of the former county. The Conys, who have been frequently sheriffs of Norfolk, are of ancient French descent, and were long of distinction in Lincolnshire. During the civil wars, they were great royalists, and lost in consequence a large share of their property. An anecdote of one is perhaps deserving of note. "He raised £50,000 for CHARLES I. and when Cromwell heard of it, he said, surely the family of Cony will not grudge £30,000 also to the Commonwealth," and he made them pay it.

Lineage.

The Sicklemores were of considerable importance during the eventful period of the civil war, when they represented the county of Suffolk and borough of Ipswich in parliament, and ever maintained an inviolable attachment to monarchical institutions, for which they suffered severely by the confiscation of the greater portion of their property. They continued however faithful to the STEWARDS, shared in all their misfortunes, followed them in their exile, and to the last proved themselves the honourable supporters of the illfated family of James.

JOHN SICKLEMORE, esq. who represented the county of Suffolk in parliament, left an only son,

JOHN SICKLEMORE, esq. who d. at Wetheringsett, in 1778, and was s. by his only son, the present JOHN SICKLEMORE, esq. of Wetheringsett.

COTTRELL, OF HADLEY.

COTTRELL, CHARLES-HERBERT, esq. of Hadley, in the county of Middlesex, b. in 1806, succeeded his uncle 25th February, 1829. Mr. Cottrell is M.A. of Pembroke College, Cambridge.

Lineage.

The Cottrells are said to have been a branch of the Albigenses, the first mention of whom on this side the channel, is in the 13th century. King HENRY III. A. D. 1235, in the 19th year of his reign, having given to "Cotterel" the Norman, two oxgates of land in Taddington and in Prestclive, in the county of Derby, he was father of "John Cotterell," who is mentioned in a subsequent charter as being the son of "Cotterel the Norman." Amongst a number of documents wherein the family are mentioned at this period, the "originalia," (estreats transmitted from the court of Chancery into the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancers Office, of all grants of the crown, &c.) state that "in the year 1311, 4th of Edward II. John, son of Henry de Derleye and Matilda his wife, levied a fine with the king for a moiety of the manor of Duleye, which was held of the king in chief, and which moiety had been taken into the king's hands, because they had purchased it from 'William Cotterel,' without the king's license," whom the Monasticon Anglicanum thus mentions: "Willielmus Cotterel dedit aulam vocatam 'Gysours Hall' in civitate Londini in Parochia Sanctæ Mildredæ cum aliis diversis tenementis et redditibus in Flete Street, et pasturam vocatam Siketsfield, A. D. 1336." It appears from the Patent Rolls in the Tower, that EDWARD III. A. D. 1357, granted to John Cotterel and Nicholas Seward, the office of Comptrollers of the king's works, and that in 1397, in the 20th year of his reign, that RICHARD II. confirmed "to John Cotterell, kinsman of J. Cotterel, who was son of the Norman of Taddington, the abovementioned grants of Henry III. in socage for the rent of 10s. per annum;" and another grant "to Thomas Cotterel, by the Abbot of St. Remigius, of all his lands and tenements in his lordship of Lappeley, in the county of Stafford, at a rent of 12s. which the king confirmed," A. D. 1381. We will pass over a number of other grants to the family, from this period to the year 1509, when, as appears by the Originalia, Queen ELIZABETH granted to Ralph Cotterell and Robert Boothe, lands in the county of Nottingham, and to Ambrose Cotterell, in Berkshire; and in 1622, to Sir Clement Cotterell, knt. JAMES I. granted lands in Lincolnshire. In 1661, King CHARLES II. granted to Sir Charles Cotterell, knt. lands called the Old Spring Gardens, in the county of Middlesex.

SIR CLEMENT COTTRELL, born at Wylsford, in the county of Lincoln, in 1585, was for twenty years groom porter to King JAMES I. He m. in 1606, Mrs. (i. e. Miss) Alleyne, by whom, who died in 1600, he had two daughters, one m. to Sir Richard Nigham, knt. and the other to Sir Thomas Clayton, knt. warden of Merton College, Oxford, who died in 1687, and a monument was raised to her in the chapel. Sir Clement Cotterell died in 1631, having obtained a reversion of the office of master of the ceremonies at St. James's, which continued in his posterity for nearly two centuries, until the present Sir Robert Chester succeeded to it. His son, SIR CHARLES COTTRELL, born in 1615, the translator of "Cassandra," the famed romance, was also principally concerned in the translation of Davila's History of the Civil Wars from the Italian, and several pieces of note in the Spanish language. In 1641, he succeeded Sir John Finet, as master of the ceremonies, and during the Interregnum, was steward to the Queen of Bohemia. At the Restoration he returned to England; in 1661, was elected M.P. for Cardigan; in 1663, sent ambassador to the court of Brussels; and in 1670, made master of the requests. "In December, 1686, Sir Charles having petitioned his majesty, James II. for leave by reason of his age, to resign his office of master of the ceremonies, his majesty was graciously pleased in consideration of his faithful services to his royal father and brother (to whom he adhered in his exile) and to himself, to receive his son Charles Ludowicke Cotterell, esq. gentleman commoner of Merton College, Oxford, into the said office, and to constitute his grandson, John Dormer, esq. his assistant master. Sir Charles m. the daughter of Edward West, esq. of Marsworth, Bucks, and had two sons and three daughters, viz.

1. CLEMENT, who was to have succeeded his father as master of the ceremonies, but was unfortunately blown up with the Earl of Sandwich, in the action with the Dutch Fleet, off Solebay.

28th May, 1672. A monument giving a very diffuse account of his accomplishments is erected in Westminster Abbey. In the first volume of Evelyn's Memoirs, he says, "My Lord, who was Admiral of the Blue, was in the Prince, which was burnt, one of the best men of war that ever spread canvass on the sea. There were lost with this brave man, a son of Sir Charles Cottrell, M.C. and a son of Sir Charles Harbord, his Majesty's Surveyor General, two valiant and most accomplished youths, full of virtue and courage, who might have saved themselves, but chose to perish with my Lord, whom they honoured and loved above their own lives."

II. CHARLES-LUDOWICKE, of whom presently.

The second son,

SIR CHARLES-LUDOWICKE COTTRELL, knight, succeeded his father in 1686, as master of the ceremonies, and in 1697, was appointed commissioner of the privy seal, with Sir Thomas Mompesson and Mr. Tyrrell. He m. first, Miss Burrell, and had by her, with other issue who d. young, a son,

7. Mary, d. unm.

Sir Charles Ludowicke Cottrell (the name was then spelt as it is at present), married secondly, in 1691, Elizabeth, only daughter of Chaloner Chute,† esq. the younger, of the Vyne, in Hampshire, by the Hon. Catherine Lennard, his wife, only daughter of Richard, Lord Dacre.‡ By Miss Chute,

* Horace Walpole thus described Sir Charles's seat at Rousham: "But the greatest pleasure we had in seeing Sir C. Cottrell Dormer at Rousham, it reinstated Kent with me: he has no where shewn so much taste. The house is old and was bad: he has improved it: stuck as close as he could to Gothic: has made a delightful library: and the whole is comfortable. The garden is Daphne in little. The sweetest little groves, streams, glades, porticoes, cascades, and rivers imaginable—the scenes are perfectly classic. Well—if I had such a house, such a library, so pretty a place, and so pretty a wife, I think I should let the king send to Herenhausen for a master of the ceremonies."

† The Chute family, whose male line is now extinct, was of long standing in Devonshire. Chaloner Chute, the elder, who d. speaker of Cromwell's parliament, purchased the Vyne of the last Lord Sandys, of the Vyne, which was so called from its being the first place in England into which that tree was introduced (see vol. i. p. 652).

SKINNER, SAMUEL, esq. of Shirley Park, Surrey, b. at Wanstead, in Essex, 4th July, 1774, m. at Chittoor, East Indies, 13th June, 1808, Mary, fourth daughter of Robert Routledge, esq. of Kirk Mannington, in the county of Durham, and has had issue, Russell, b. 11th October, 1837.

Benjamin, died in infancy.
Charles-Bruce-Græme, b. at Chittoor, 20th October, 1816.

Mr. Skinner was formerly judge of circuit at Chittoor, in the province of Madras, East Indies.

Lineage.

This family can be traced by well established authorities from Sir Robert Skynner, or Skinner, a Norman knight, who served under Duke William in his expedition to England, and received from his royal master, in recompense for his valiant services, the lands of Bolinbroke, in Lincolnshire, accompanied with the hand, in marriage, of the daughter of their former owner, Robert de Bolinbroke, a Saxon of the conquered side.

A curious old document, lately in the possession of Mr. Skinner, of Shirley Park, shews that the armorial bearings of Sir Robert, the Norman, were "Three roebucks passant, arg. horned or, a chevron of the second, on a field az. and the crest, a unicorn's head."

The same document states that from the year 1070, the issue of the aforesaid Sir Robert Skinner, and the heiress of Bolinbroke, continued in line, intermarrying with many distinguished houses, until the chief branch became extinct in 1700. Numerous offshoots were planted, however, in the counties of York, Leicester, Essex, Kent, Sussex, Worcester, and Hereford.

The old document we have already referred to, states that in the year 1440, Sir John Skinner, an immediate descendant of Sir George Skinner, the second son of Sir Robert, the Norman, went into Kent, and m. the daughter and heir of Sir Robert St. Leger, of Nowel, by whom he had, with other issue, a second son,

ROBERT SKINNER, who, being a Benedictine monk, became prior of Malvern, in Worcestershire, and acquiring large possessions, and by his state of celibacy having no children to inherit them, he sent for

JOHN SKINNER, his younger brother, and "provided him with lands and livings," most of which we find to be in the rich and beautiful county of Hereford. From this John sprang

STEPHEN SKINNER, of Hereford,* who had two sons, namely,

1. STEPHEN, of Le Burtons, in the parish of Ledbury, Herefordshire, who died in 1557, leaving issue,

1. RICHARD, of Le Burtons, who m. first, Margaret, daughter of John Stallard, gent. by whom he had inter alios a son, John of

* Time is a flood that sweeps away not only landmarks, but the families who set them up. And thus it has been found in many branches of the Skinners. Much of their possessions in Herefordshire were alienated in the female posterity of the munificent Edward Skinner, of Ledbury. His eldest daughter, Anne, who married in 1595, John Cocks, esq. of the Berrow, became a link which in after generations induced his descendants, the Lords Somers, to purchase a considerable portion of her parental property, including Pounceford Court and the Knaps. Mr. Miles of Bristol, from a similar connexion by marriage, became possessor of Underdown, and afterwards, by purchase, of Le Burtons and other adjacent lands. But John Biddulph, esq. whose progenitor united himself by marriage with the heiress of the original family, is owner of the great house and park at Ledbury, the chief residence of the Skinners in that neighbourhood.

Le Burtons; and secondly, Mary, daughter of Thomas Clynton, esq. of Castell-ditch, by whom he had three sons and two daughters, of the former, the eldest, Richard, of Pikesley, in Herefordshire, left an only daughter and heir, Rebecca, m. to Richard Clarke, esq. of the Hill, in the parish of Walford.

2. John.
3. William.
4. John.

5. EDWARD, of Ledbury, who died at the age of eighty-seven, in 1631, leaving behind him a numerous progeny. In the south side of the chancel of Ledbury Church stands the monument of this still revered man. It is of the style of the Elizabethan times, large and massy, of varied marble, and supporting pillars. Edward Skinner and his wife, Elizabeth Hill, habited in the usual dresses of their century, kneel opposite to each other on the tomb, and below are represented, in high relief, the kneeling figures of their surviving children, five sons and five daughters. These children were,

RICHARD, of Coston, in Worcestershire, in the commission of the peace for that county, eminent for his loyalty and beneficence. He m. Margaret, daughter of Sir Edward Lyttelton, knight of Pillaton, and had an only daughter and heir.

THE RIGHT REV. ROBERT SKINNER, D.D. sometime rector of Pisford, and of Lanton, Oxfordshire, who, from his eminent erudition and piety, was, early in life, consecrated Bishop of Bristol, and in the year 1641, translated to the see of Oxford. He was soon after called by his allegiance to his king and his faith, to join eleven of his episcopal brethren in the celebrated protest against the then proceedings of the parliament, for which they were all arraigned of high treason, and committed to the Tower; amongst whom was Bishop Skinner. After many months suffering there, he at length obtained his release on bail, and was permitted to retire to his rectory of Lanton, though stripped of his episcopal dignity. At the Restoration, he was not only reinstated on the sacred bench, but elevated to the see of Worcester, where he died in 1670, and lies under a flat marble stone, in the choir of the cathedral of that diocese. Lineage.

The Edgeworths, originally, it is said, established at Edgeworth, now called Edgeware, in Middlesex, settled in Ireland in the reign of ELIZABETH, about the year 1583.

ROGER EDGEWORTH, a monk, who wrote a sermon against the Reformers, being smitten, like his master HENRY VIII. with the bright eyes of beauty, like him, after having been a defender of the Catholic faith, reformed and married. His sons, Edward and Francis, went to Ireland, probably under the patronage of Essex and Cecil, as those names have continued Christian names in the family ever since. The elder son,

THE RIGHT REV. EDWARD EDGEWORTH, who was beneficed by Queen ELIZABETH, became Bishop of Down and Connor in 1593. He died without issue, and was s. by his brother,

FRANCIS EDGEWORTH, clerk of the hanaper in 1619, who m. Jane, daughter of Sir Edmond Tuite, knt. of Sonna, in Westmeath, and had by her (who founded a religious house in Dublin,) a son and heir,

CAPTAIN JOHN EDGEWORTH, of Cranallagh Castle, in the county of Longford, who m. first, the daughter of Sir Hugh Cullam, of Derbyshire, by whom he had a son, JOHN, his heir.

"Before the Irish rebellion broke out in 1641, (we quote Edgeworth's Memoirs,) Capt. Edgeworth, not aware of the immediate danger, left his wife and infant in the castle of Cranallagh, while he was summoned to a distance by some military duty. During his absence the rebels rose, attacked the castle, set fire to it at night, and dragged the lady out, literally naked. She escaped from their hands and hid herself under a furze bush, till they had dispersed. She then made her way to Dublin, thence to England, and to her father's house in Derbyshire. After the rebels had forced this lady out of the castle and had set fire to it, they plundered it completely; but they were persuaded to extinguish the fire from reverence for the picture of Jane Edgeworth. Her portrait was painted on the wainscoat, with a cross hanging from her neck and a rosary in her hands. Being a Catholic and having founded a religious house, she was considered as a saint. The only son of Capt. Edgeworth was then an infant, lying in his cradle. One of the rebels seized the child by the leg and was in the act of swinging him round to dash his brains out against the corner of the castle wall, when an Irish servant of the lowest order stopped his hand, claiming the right of killing the little heretic himself, and swearing that a sudden death would be too good for him; that he would plunge him up to the throat in a bog hole and leave him for the crows to peck his eyes out. Snatching the child from his comrade he ran off with it to a neighbouring bog and thrust it into the mud; but when the rebels had retired, this man, who had only pretended to join them, went back to the bog for the boy, preserved his life, and contriving to hide him in a pannier under eggs and chickens, carried him actually through the midst of the rebel camp, safely to Dublin." "This faithful servant's name," continues Mr. Edgeworth, "was Bryan Ferrat. His last descendant died within my memory, after having lived and been supported always under my father's protection. My father heard this story from Lady Edgeworth, his grandmother, and also from a man of one hundred and seven years of age, one Bryan Simpson, who was present at the attack of Cranallagh Castle, and by whom the facts were circumstantially detailed."

Captain Edgeworth, (his first wife dying in a few years after her return to Derbyshire,) m. secondly, Mrs. Bridgman, widow of Edward Bridgman, esq. brother to Sir Orlando Bridgman, the lord keeper, and went back with her to Ireland. He was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN EDGEWORTH, knighted by CHARLES II. who m. the only daughter and heir of Edward Bridgman, esq. acquired with her an estate in Lancashire, besides a considerable fortune in money, and had eight sons, of whom the eldest, FRANCIS, s. to the paternal estate in Longford; the second, Robert, was ancestor of the EDGEWORTHS OF KILSHREWLY (see page 755); and the fifth, Essex, had a son the celebrated Abbé Edgeworth, who styled himself, from the estate his branch of the family possessed, Monsieur de Firmont. The eldest, town, raised a regiment for WILLIAM III. and became so zealous a loyalist, as to acquire the nickname of "Protestant Frank." He married successively several wives. One of whom, an English lady, was a widow Bradstone, who by her first husband had a daughter, Miss Bradstone, wife of Mr. Pakenham, and mother of the first Lord Longford. By this lady Col. Edgeworth left a son and successor, RICHARD EDGEWORTH, esq. of Edgeworthstown, under the guardianship of Mr. Pakenham, who advised him to go to the Temple at eighteen, instead of going to college. This prudent counsel Mr. Edgeworth followed, and by application to business, and by making himself master of his own affairs, he recovered a considerable part of his estate which had been unjustly detained from him by some of his own family. "He told me," says his late distinguished son, "a singular detection of fraud in one of the suits in which he was engaged: a deed was produced against him, which was witnessed by a very old man who was brought to give evidence. His venerable aspect prepossessed the court strongly in favour of his veracity; he said that he was an ancient servant of the Edgeworth family, and had been accustomed to transcribe papers for the gentleman who had executed the deed. He began by declaring that he had foreseen from the particular circumstances of the case, which went to disinherit the heir of the family, that the transaction might hereafter be brought into dispute; he had therefore, he said, privately put a sixpence under the seal of the deed, which would appear, if the seal were broken. The seal was broken in open court, and the sixpence was found to be dated five years subsequent to the date of the deed! The deed being thus proved a forgery, my father gained his suit." Mr. Edgeworth m. in 1732, Rachel-Jane, dau. of Samuel Lovell, esq. a Welsh judge, son of Sir Salathiel Lovell, knt. of Harleston, in the county of Northampton, one of the barons of the Exchequer, (see vol. iii. p. 76) and had to survive childhood, two sons and two daughters, viz.

* The family of Elers was long settled in the northern parts of Lower Saxony, where many places preserve memorials of it in the names they bear, as Elersdorf, Elerswolf, &c. In Hunsburg, some hereditary posts of honour and distinction were long annexed to the family, and we find Admiral Elers commanding the fleet of that great commercial place, at a time when the navy of the Hanseatic League was one of the most considerable in Europe. The admiral married a lady of the royal house of Baden, and had by her a son, who becoming involved in a long and expensive lawsuit, to establish his right to certain honours and privileges, which in the aulic council of the empire was given against him, left Germany in disgust, settled at Amsterdam, and married a wealthy merchant's daughter there. He was employed on several embassies, and enjoyed the friendship and confidence of the illustrious John Philip Schöenburg, Elector of Mentz, who, together with the Queen of Sweden, the famous Christina, was sponsor to his son, John Philip Elers, named after the elector. The family subsequently settled in England, where, in 1700,

Mr. Stansfeld, who was captain-lieutenant 4th West York militia in 1799, and lieutenant-colonel of the Leeds local militia in 1808, succeeded his father in 1818.

* Whose mother was of the family of Rawden, of Rawden, in the county of York, descended from Paulinus de Roden, a Norman grantee of the Conqueror, and ancestor of the marquess of Hastings the present owner of the estate.

Lineage.

The family of STANSFELD, of STANSFELD, in Yorkshire, derives its origin from WYONS MARYONS, a Norman grautee of the Conqueror.

That of WOLRICH descends in a direct line from

ETHELRED, last king, and first DUKE OF MERCIA, who married ELFLEDA, daughter of ALFRED THE GREAT, and had a dau. and heir, ELFWINA, who married a nobleman of WESSEX, and was mother of

LEOFWINE, Earl and Duke of MERCIA, who married ALWARA, and had issue, Norman, slain at the battle of Assandun, in Essex, 1016.

Edwin, slain in battle, in Wales, 1039.

Leofric, Earl of Mercia, who m. the celebrated Lady Godiva, and had issue, Algar, father of Edwin, Earl of Mercia; Morcar, Earl of Northumberland, both of whom died without issue; Aldith, m. first to Griffin, King of Wales, secondly to Harold II. King of England; Lucy, who m. first, Ivo Taillebois, Earl of Anjou, secondly, Roger de Romara, Earl of Lincoln, thirdly, Randle, Earl of Chester.

WOLFRIC.

Godric, slain at the battle of Hastings. Egelric, Bishop of Durham, resigned in favour of his brother, 1056.

Egelwyn, Bishop of Durham, starved to death by WILLIAM the Conqueror, 1072.

The eldest son,

WOLFRIC,* Lord of Leek, Aldithley, and

* Wolfric gave the manor of Blakeford to Glastonbury Abbey, the town of Marham to Peterborough Abbey, and houses and lands to Shrewsbury Abbey. Ulric Cilt, (the latter appellation denoting royal extraction,) claimed regal privileges at Worksop manor, now the property of the Duke of Norfolk, along with Alvea, Countess of Mercia, his cousin Algar's widow, and others. Domesday Book, vol. i. p. 280. b. Ormerod, in his History of Cheshire, vol. iii. p. 279, supposes the singular favour granted to the two Saxons, Wolfric and Gamel, of retaining the lands of their family, to have been the reward of early subjection or of treachery, but their near relationship to the Conqueror, Wolfric's wife being his first cousin, was the more probable cause of it.

Proofs of the connexion exhibited in this pedigree of the Anglo-Saxon with the Norman families at about the time of the Conquest, may be met with in the British Museum; the requisite references are in the possession of the author.

Balterley, in the county of Stafford; of Croxton, Etechells, and many other places in the county of Chester, married a daughter of William Poncius, Count of Arques and Thoulouse, son of Richard II. Duke of Normandy; she was cousin to WILLIAM the Conqueror, and sister to Richard Fitz Pontz, who married the heiress of Clifford Castle, and founded the baronial family of DE CLIFFORD. They had issue,

I. GAMEL DE TETTESWORTH, of the county of Stafford.

II. Walthens, Lord of Etechells, Bredbury, and Brinnington, in the county of Chester, the patriarch of many Cheshire families, (see ORMEROD'S Cheshire). Among his direct descendants were the Barons of Stockport, whose last representative was the late Viscountess Bulkeley. From Lidulph de Croxton, his second son, is lineally descended the present Earl of Powis; and his daughter Margery, married Gilbert Venables, Baron of Kinderton, ancestor of the present Archbishop of York, and of Lord Vernon, who is now in possession of that barony.

I. LIDULPH.

Lineage.

This family came into England with WILLIAM the Conqueror, but the first regular record now in possession of the family is the " Bibliotheca Typographica Britannica, Registrum Cartarum de omnibus Maneris Terris, &c. Johanni de Woodforde olim de Ashby Folville in Comitatu Leicestrie, Armigero Spectantibus," from a MS. in the British Museum, (Clausius A 13,) on which is written, Ex dono Samuelis de Heanome com. Derb. arm. Brantingby.

" Here beginneth a true register copied out of fines and deeds sealed in wax, how that old John of Woodford,* the age or that he passed out of this world was fivescore years and seven, and he was a gentleman's son beside Salisbury, and came into Melton Mowbray, and wedded the daughter of Sir Walter Prest, or Preston, and his heir, and he purchased divers lifeholds, in Melton aforesaid, and in Brantingby Burton Sancti Lazari, Thorp Arnold and Wyverdy, as it appeareth and sheweth in this true register that followeth the said purchases by fine and deed. First is for to wit how the aforesaid John of Woodforde purchased the manor of Brantingby, of a knight called Sir John Nevill, the which Sir John Nevill and his ancestors were possessed in the said manor lineally time out of mind ; he bore arms, sable the field and three fleurs de luce ar-gent, returned into three leopards' heads gules, and in this said coat of armour was the said John of Woodforde with King Edward at the getting of Calais, and at the taking of the King of France at the battle of Poitiers,—and the said John of Woodforde was nine years blind or ever he passed out of this world, he lies buried at Thorp Arnold near Melton, on whose soul, Almighty God, have mercy and pity. Amen."

This SIR JOHN DE WOODFORDE, who was born in the 10th HENRY III., 1226, and died 1333, aged one hundred and seven, was of Wyfordby, Brantingby, and Thorpe Arnold, in the county of Leicestrie. He m. Alice, daughter and heir of Sir Walter Preste, (or Preston), of Melton Mowbray, and Burton Lazars; and had two sons, WALTER, who d. s. p. and

" The manor of Sproxton, in the hundred of Framland, was the inheritance of Sir John de Sproxton, knt. in the time of HENRY III. Sir Roger Brabazon, one of the judges of the Common Pleas, in the time of King EDWARD I. son of Sir Roger de Brabazon, m. Beatrix, daughter and heiress of this Sir John Sproxton, knt. who by her had issue, William Brabazon, who m. Janet, daughter of William Trussel, who by her had issue, John Brabazon, who m. Agnes, daughter of Richard Whatton, who by her had issue, Joan, sole daughter and heiress, m. to William Woodforde, lord of this manor in right of his wife, whose descent I have set down in Ashby Folville."—Vide BURTON'S History of Leicestershire, p. 248.

‡ A very curious gold ring on which is engraved the arms of the Folville family, (party per fess, argent and or, a cross moline gules), has been preserved "time out of mind," in the Woodforde family, and is now in the possession of Col. William Woodforde, of Ansford, its present representative.

* About this time lived William de Woodford, kinsman of the aforesaid John de Woodford, abbot of the celebrated monastery of Peterburgh in Northampton of the Benedictine order, a person of good parts and great diligence, two years before his election, he was coadjutor to his predecessor, in whose time he distinguished himself by his eloquence, pleading before the judge of assize at Northampton in a suit at law with Gilbert, Earl of Clare, for the manor of Biggin near Oundle. He added to the buildings, and gave Suthorp Manor to the monastery, and dying in the fourth year of his office, was buried near the choir in the south aisle of the church in 1299: the monks proceeded to another election. The manor of Suthorp was purchased by William de Woodford, when sacrist, which he assigned after he was elected abbot to the sacristan's office.—Vide Bridge's History of Northampton; M.S. Cott. Vesp. XII. Fo. 14. 6. &c.

Here follows an extract from a deed, "Here you may see and truly understand how that Robert Woodforde, esq. made a feoffment of all his land that he had in Leicestershire, Lincoln, Stafford, and Derbyshire, what time he went over sea with HENRY V. Here you may see and truly understand how that Robert Woodforde, Knyght and Lord of Ashby Folville has given to his well beloved sons aforesaid, that is to say to every one of them by themselves, a parcel of lifelihold lying in divers towns as ye may understand truly in the fine hereafter, the which lifelihold the said Sir Robert Woodford, had after the decease of John of Woodford of Brentingby his father, by descent of heritage and standing in fee simple, for it was purchased all the lands and tenements, that ever the Woodfords had in Leicestershire, Lincolnshire, Norfolk, Staffordshire, and Derbyshire, and in faith there was never none of the Woodfords that ever enfeoffed any of their wives in no manner of land or rent, as by way of joint feoffment in taile, that was a right ungentle deed, as me thinketh, in good faith, and as you may see in all these fines and deeds well insealed of all their purchases." From the Woodford chartulary. "Sir Robert Woodford knt. and Lord of Sproxton has given and for ever more hath released with warrant to the Abbot of Croxton and to his successor all the right that the said Sir Robert had, or by any title of right, might have in all that entry, in length and in breadth, as it lies before the gates of the Grange of the Abbots of Croxton, for which grant the aforesaid Abbot and the convent have granted and promised with the oath of priesthood, that is verbum Dei, that the said Sir Robert and dame Isabelle his wife, shall be in all their special prayers, and yearly to the end of the world to keep their obit day, with placebo and dirge, and a mass in their quire, solemnly as appears in the following article." "A release of Sir Robert Woodforde of the above premises and a reciprocal engagement of the abbot and convent." The son of Sir Robert and Isabella, his wife,

THOMAS WOODFORD,* who died during his father's lifetime, m. Alice, daughter of Sir Laurence Berkeley, of Wymondham, in the county of Leicester, granddaughter Maurice, Lord Berkely, and by her had issue, John, Walter, Humphrey, Ralph, and John, amongst whom, their grandfather, (the aforesaid Sir Robert), at his decease, being then very old, divided all his lands. "To John, the eldest son, he gave the manor of Sproxton, and lands in Wiganhall, and Tilney, in the county of Norfolk, and lands in Easton, and South Stoke, in the county of Lincoln. To Walter, the second son, he gave the manor of Newbolt Folvile, in the county of Leicester. To Humphrey, the third son, he gave the manor of Brentingby, lands in Wyfordby, Thorpe Arnold, Stapleford, Traby, and Melton Mowbray, in the county of Leicester. To Ralph, the fourth son, he gave 16 messuages, 4 tofts, 12 yard lands, 30 acres of meadow in Knipton, county of Leicester. To John, the fifth son, he gave the manor of Garthorpe, in the county of Leicester, to them and their heirs male for ever, to the manifest injury of the heir of that ancient family which had continued in great account and high dignity for so many years."

The eldest son,

SAMUEL WOODFORD, D.D. F.R.S. prebendary of Winchester, and rector of Hartley Mauduit and Shaldon, in Hampshire, born in London, 15th April, 1636, became a commoner of Wadham College, 1653, took one degree in arts in 1656, and in 1658, retired to the Inner Temple, where he studied for several years, with the intention of becoming a barrister; he was "chamber fellow" with the poet Flatman, who wrote some interesting verses in his praise. In 1660, he published a poem on the return of King Charles II.: after that period he lived first at Albrook, afterwards at Heighes House, Bensted, Hants, was elected fellow of the Royal Society, 14th January, 1669, took orders from his cousin, Bishop Morley, and was soon afterwards presented by Sir Nicholas Stuart, to the rectory of Hartley Mauduit, Hants, to which place he then removed, 1672. In 1673, he was presented by his majesty King CHARLES II. to the rectory of Shaldon, in the same county, and appointed chaplain to Lord Maynard, comptroller of his majesty's household. In 1674, by the fiat of Gilbert Sheldon, Archbishop of Canterbury, he was made doctor of divinity; May 18th, 1676, prebendary of Chichester, by Dr. Ralph Brideoake, bishop of that diocese; and in 1680, prebendary of Winchester, by Morley, Bishop of Winchester, his special friend and relative, to whom he dedicated his Psalms. The following is an extract from one of his journals: "I, Samuel, eldest son of Robert, grandson of Robert, and great grandson of Edward, of Old, being about 25 years of age, was married to Alicia, youngest daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Beale, widow of Theodore Beale, B.D. of the county of Bucks, (a zealous adherent of the royal family of Stuart,) of the ancient family of the Beales of Beverly, in Yorkshire, aged about 27, at St. Christopher's, behind the Exchange, London, upon Thursday, 10th of October, 1661, by my cousin Tillotson, (the celebrated Archbishop of Canterbury,) and by her, through the blessing of God, have had issue, Alicia, born in London (married to the Rev. Alexander Dalgless, rector of Farringdon, Hants); HEIGHES, born at Bensted, in the county of Southampton, but then though I became the joyful father of a son, I was in a few days deprived of my dearest wife, whom my God was pleased, by a violent fever, to take out of this miserable life unto himself, upon Thursday, January 14th; we had lived by His infinite mercy, in the bands of holy wedlock, 2 years, 3 months, and 4 days, in the opinion of all, I believe even our enemies, as happy and loving a pair as ever came together, blessed be our good God: she was the Saturday following buried in Heighes chancel, in the very place where my great grandmother, my Lady Heighes, about 37 years before was buried, whose silk stockings (all else but the bones in them being quite wasted) remained entire and without the least rottenness, as many in my parish said who saw them. Oh! my God, sanctify this so great visitation to me I humbly beseech thee, for my Saviour's sake, Christ Jesus. Amen."

Dr. Samuel Woodford was also a poet as well as divine, and a learned antiquary, who the contemporary and intimate friend of Tillotson, his kinsman; Sancroft, Archbishop of Canterbury; Stillingfleet, Bishop of Worcester; Sprat, Bishop of Rochester; Wilkins, Bishop of Chester; Gardner, Bishop of Lincoln; Cowley, Bates, &c. and the many other celebrated divines and learned men of that remarkable era. Besides his Paraphrase of the Psalms and Canticles, a poem on the return of King CHARLES II., and many minor poems, now in the possession of his great-great-grandson, William Woodforde, esq. of Ansford; he prepared for the press several learned works in Latin and Italian, on the coins and antiquities of Rome, &c. which were unfortunately destroyed in the great fire of London, "a just punishment (he says) for devoting so much of my time to profane learning instead of Theology when at college." Alicia, Dr. Woodford's first wife, was a near relation and intimate friend of Mrs. Mary Beale, the celebrated artist and poet, whose paintings in oil are highly prized by connoisseurs, she was a pupil of Sir Peter Lely, and by Walpole, styled the "incomparable Mrs. Beale." Dr. Woodford married 5th February, 1666, secondly, Mary, daughter of John Norton,* esq. of Benstead, and by her had issue,

Mr. Molony, who succeeded his father 12th October, 1823, is a magistrate and deputy lieutenant for Clare, and served the office of sheriff of that county in 1828.

Lineage.

The Milesian family of Molony* is one of great antiquity in the sister island. O'Halloran (Hist. of Ireland, vol. iii. p. 408.) says, "From Cormac Cas (who was of the line of Heber, eldest son of Milesius,) are descended, first, O'Brien, chief of Thomond; Macmahon, Lord of Corca-Bhaisgin; Macnamara, marshal of Thomond; MacClancy, hereditary chief justice; Mac Bruodin, hereditary historian; O'Hickery and Nolan, the hereditary medical tribe; Mac Curtins, hereditary bards, &c. Besides these hereditary officers, the following noble families are derived from this great source: O'Dea, O'Hehir, O'Quin, Mac Ennery, O'Grady, O'MOLLOWNEY, and others," and in his "list of ancient Irish territories, and by what Milesian families possessed both before and after the invasion of HENRY II." Ceil-tanant† (otherwise Kiltanon) is mentioned among the rest as the estate of O'Molony.

The Molonys were formerly princes of Clare, where they possessed a large tract of country called the O'Molony's Lands, as may be seen from some of the old maps of that county.

In Catholic times, three members of the family attained the mitre, as appears from the following epitaph on the tomb of John O'Molony, Bishop of Limerick in 1687, who after the siege of that city, followed King JAMES II. to Paris, where he assisted in the foundation of a University‡ for the education of Irish priests, in the chapel belonging to which he was buried in 1702.

* In an old Irish MS. appears the following statement: "The O'Maoldononighs (now O'Mallowneys, of Clare) are descended from Brennan Ban (Brennan the fair) one of the sons of Blat, who was the thirteenth generation before Brien Boiroimhe.

† The O'Molonys were possessed of Kiltanon, temp. HENRY II. which they forfeited, but got back again.
